R.N.Y., that would have prohibited the spending of any construction funds, including Texas's planned purchase of the site land at Waxahachie, until industrial production of the collider's supermagnets is determined feasible.

''Let's make sure we have the science before we proceed to construction,'' Boehlert said.

But Roe argued that Boelhert's amendment would knock out the federal cap on spending, delay construction by 18 months and add up to $1.5 billion to the total project cost.

Based on an agreement hammered out by congressional, Energy Department and White House officials the night before, Roe submitted a substitute amendment that would require completion of testing on the supermagnets, but still allow design work and the land purchase to go forward. The substitute was approved.

The committee also defeated a proposal by Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., that would, in effect, require Texas and international participants to pick up the tab for any cost overruns.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 28) UPI - A West German company has been fined $800,000 for illegally passing on to third countries U.S. materials that can be used in nuclear weapons and reactors, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

The company, Degussa A.G., re-exported the materials to Britain, Italy, Czechoslovakia, India and North Korea without approval from U.S. officials the department's Bureau of Export Administration said.

Between Dec. 5, 1984, and Oct. 15, 1987, Degussa sent three shipments of U.S. beryllium powder, beryllium lumps and beryllium nitrate from West Germany to India and Britain, the agency said.

It also said that between Sept. 15, 1986, and Oct. 15, 1987, the company passed shipments of U.S.-origin zirconium to North Korea, Czechoslovakia and Italy.

The beryllium materials can be used in making or testing nuclear explosives, while zirconium can be used to make uranium rods that fuel nuclear reactors, it said.

Such re-exports of U.S. nuclear materials are strictly controlled both for national security reasons and to prevent proliferation of nuclear weapons technology.

Degussa acknowledged the shipments occurred and agreed to pay a $800,000 civil penalty, the department said. It also allowed unannounced inspection of its facilities in West Germany by U.S. agents to ensure it is complying with U.S. export laws and regulations.

DAYTONA BEACH, FL (MARCH 28) UPI - Up to 20 percent of women with breast cancer may not need further treatment beyond surgery, a researcher said Wednesday.

Dr. Thomas Nealon said women whose cancer tumors fit certain criteria apparently do not need to receive additional treatment such as chemotherapy, radiation or the anti-estrogen drug tamoxifen.

Nealon said he based his opinion on results of a study of 344 women whose tumors were surgically removed between 1977 and 1986 at St. Vincent's Hospital and Medical Center in New York City.

Among these were 60 women who were believed to have a very low risk of recurrence. Five were treated with radiation and chemotherapy, six with radiation alone and the rest received no drugs or radiation.

Nealon said there has been no recurrence of cancer in 58 of the women. The two whose cancers returned did not benefit from radiation and chemotherapy treatment. Consequently, Nealon concluded that the chance of the cancer returning was ''so rare, use of adjuvant therapy was not justified,'' in these women.

In ''the two instances of recurrence, the adjuvant therapy did not help,'' he told a seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Nealon said the women he would treat only with surgery would be those whose tumors were no larger than eight-one hundredths of an inch, had not spread and had no sign of cancer cells in their lymph nodes.

In addition, he said, their tumors could not be highly malignant and would have to be firmly encapsulated by surrounding tissue.

There would also have to be no sign that the cancer had invaded blood or lymphatic vessels, said Nealon, a professor of surgery at New York University.

He said his studies indicate it is possible to establish the presence or absence of these criteria at the time the surgery takes place.

''This is something that could be done in 99 percent of the hospitals that do breast caner surgery,'' he said.

Nealon said he realized his views fly in the face of recommendations issued two years ago by the National Cancer Institute (NCI), which sent a letter to doctors stating that all women - even those at low risk - could benefit from followup chemotherapy.

Nealon said he disagreed with the idea of subjecting very low-risk women to treatments such as radiation and chemotherapy that can have unpleasant side effects and health hazards.

There are an estimated 150,000 new cases of breast cancer in the United States each year. Nealon estimates that as many as 30,000 American women annually undergo treatment that is not needed.

MONTPELIER, VT (MARCH 28) UPI - Vermont, the first territory to join the original 13 states 199 years ago, is debating secession and a return to small-scale democracy.

Vermont sent more soldiers per capita than any state to fight for preservation of the Union in the Civil War, so at first blush the idea of secession appears rather incongruous.

But by a cumulative tally of 409-243, audience members at six forums on the issue voted to sever ties with other 49 states and enter the 21st century as an independent nation.

The seventh and final forum on the issue - staged as a prelude to a celebration of the 200th anniversary of Vermont's statehood next year - was scheduled to get underway Wednesday evening.

Vermont Supreme Court Associate Justice John Dooley, who has argued the unionist position in all but one of the debates, believes the discussion is really part of a broader message about the average person's feelings toward government in general.

''I think it's the desire to shake things up a bit that is reflected in the votes,'' Dooley said.

''I think that in the context of a debate like this, it's an easy way to send a message to government - not just the federal government but government in general - that it's become big and bureaucratic and distant, and we don't like that and we want to shake it up a bit,'' Dooley said.

''It's logically and factually wrong to secede and it is particularly so if you care about government,'' Dooley said. ''It's the wrong thing for Vermonters to do. We don't quit.''

Arguing the other side of the question is University of Vermont political science Professor Frank Bryan, co-author of ''Out! The Vermont Secession Book'' and author of ''The Vermont Papers,'' a widely read treatise espousing a return to small-scale government.

''Democracy is breaking out all over the planet,'' Bryan said. ''From China to Eastern Europe, the great complaint of the revolutionaries is not against socialism per se, it's not against communism, it's against macro-bureaucracy - huge, unfeeling inhuman macro-institutions that take away our freedoms and destroy our human liberty.''

Bryan believes all American states should review their relationship to the federal government, likening the re-evaluation process to a couple deciding whether they want to remain married.

Bryan also maintains Vermont, at least, would be better off economically if it seceded.

The U.S. Constitution provides no mechanism for state secession and the debates are being conducted with a slightly whimsical attitude.

Nevertheless, Dooley argues, the debates are a refreshing mode of political expression in the era of the ''sound bite.''

''I think it serves a very useful purpose to examine the structure of the nation and the state and talk about what the benefits and burdens (of statehood) are,'' Dooley said. ''I particularly hope people walk out of the room with a better understanding of what they want to do if they want change.''

NEW YORK (MARCH 28) UPI - Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc., a century-old Wall Street firm that suffered devastating losses in its retail brokerage business after the 1987 stock market crash, Wednesday filed for bankruptcy protection.

One analyst said Thomson's bankruptcy filing appeared to be part of a trend on Wall Street, which has been jolted by Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc.'s collapse and Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.'s layoffs.

The Thomson filing under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code was voluntary and had been anticipated since the firm began selling off assets last year, its parent, Thomson McKinnon Inc., said in a statement.

The securities firm has about 100 employees, mostly back office, accounting and legal staff, said Donald McCabe, executive vice president and general counsel.

In its filing in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York, Thomson listed $89 million in total assets and $139 million in total liabilities.

''The filing was long anticipated and marks the beginning of the final stage in the liquidation of the brokerage firm commenced last fall,'' the company said.

In September, Thomson sold its branch offices, customer accounts and related assets to Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. Prior to the sale, Thomson had more than 4,000 employees.

''Since the sale, the firm has focused its attention on liquidating its remaining assets and satisfying outstanding claims,'' the company said.

Thomson has sold all its seats on national securities and commodities exchanges and stopped doing business in July, and the formal surrender of its broker-dealer license became effective in early January, the parent company said.

The 105-year-old firm was heavily involved in the retail brokerage business, which shrank following the 1987 stock market crash and has never recovered, McCabe said.

''It wasn't the crash directly that caused big losses. It was the loss of revenue,'' he said. ''The retail business never came back to where it was in those days.

''The retail customers, even to this day, have not come back to invest with brokerage companies,'' he said.

The firm lost $33.7 million in 1987 and $38.5 million in 1988.

Thomson said it had been seeking an investor to provide additional capital as its losses mounted but was unsuccessful.

A proposed deal to merge with Prudential-Bache fell through last year. At the time, Prudential-Bache Chairman George Ball said an analysis of Thomson's books found ''balance-sheet items too big to overcome.''

Gary Hovis, an analyst with Argus Research, said Thomson's bankruptcy filing appeared to be part of a growing and ominous pattern on Wall Street.

''It's starting to become a trend in the securities business,'' he said. ''It's low volume every day. There's Shearson troubles. There's Drexel troubles. We could see more of it.''

Drexel, in the largest bankruptcy filing in Wall Street's history, filed for protection from its creditors Feb. 13 after defaulting on more than $100 million in loans.

Shearson, which has been trying to stave off a downgrading of its credit rating, recently announced the layoffs of 2,000 employees and is conducting a strategic review of its core businesses in an effort to increase profitability.

On Tuesday, Shearson finalized a buyback deal worth $370 million with its parent, American Express Co., which also injected a $750 million capital infusion into its troubled subsidiary.

Thomson's parent company was not part of the bankruptcy filing by its principal operating subsidiary. The filing also will not affect operations of Thomson McKinnon Asset Management L.P., which has functioned as a separate entity since November 1987.

The parent company also said it has been seeking to liquidate its assets since the sale to Prudential-Bache and will continue its efforts to sell its 63 percent stake in the asset management company.

The bankruptcy filing listed the Commonwealth Bank of Australia as Thomson's largest creditor. The bank is owed $27.5 million from a subordinated loan, the filing said.

Hill Samuel Bank, owed $11 million from a subordinated loan, is Thomson's second-largest creditor, the filing said. The bank is the New York branch of the London-based Hill Samuel & Co. Ltd. international banking company.

The filing said Thomson's parent company holds the voting securities of the brokerage subsidiary.

Hovis said some Wall Street observers had thought Thomson might make an attempt at rebuilding.

''I thought they were going to regroup and downsize with a more viable, flexible, stronger albeit smaller operation, but apparently things were worse than we thought,'' he said.

CHINA LAKE, CA. (MARCH 28) UPI - A U.S. Navy jet crashed in the desert Wednesday near the Naval Weapons Center, but the fate of the pilot was not immediately known, military officials said.

The Korean War-era QF-86 Sabre fighter went down about 10:30 a.m. PST in the Mojave Desert between the ghost town of Ballarat and Wildrose Canyon, near Trona, said Loretta King, spokeswoman for the Weapons Training Center about 60 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Helicopters from the weapons center, the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department and the Kerr McGee plant in Trona were sent to the area just east of the Naval Weapons Range, but there was no immediate word about the condition of the pilot.

The aged jet is one of a fleet often used as ''drones,'' pilotless targets sent into the air by remote control to be shot down on training missions.

The Sabre jet was considered the best interceptor of its day, outfighting the MiG-15s used by Communist forces in the Korean War. They are still in use in some countries' air forces, carrying a variety of air-to-air and ground-attack weapons.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 28) UPI - Danny Glover, star of ''Lethal Weapon'' and its sequel, testified Wednesday that stuntman Dar Robinson, who bled to death during the filming of a movie in 1986, was ''one of the world's greatest stuntmen.''

Glover's testimony came during the fourth week of a trial in Los Angeles Superior Court in which Robinson's widow is suing three movie production companies for damages in connection with the stuntman's death.

Robinson died in November 1986 while making the movie ''Million Dollar

Mystery.'' During a stunt, his motorcycle sped off a roadway and crashed.

The suit against DeLaurentis Entertainment Group, DeLaurentis Film Productions and Productions Limited of Beverly Hills, contends the movie producers were negligent because no ambulance was on the scene at the time of the accident, which happened in Page, Ariz., 65 miles from the nearest hospital.

The lawsuit was brought by Robinson's widow, Linda, and his five children.

Glover's testimony Wednesday was aimed at showing that had Robinson lived, he would have had a good future as a stuntman and potentially would have made millions in earnings.

In the lawsuit, the Robinson family contends that although a nurse was present during the filming, an ambulance should have been present, too. Robinson died 20 miles from the accident, while he was being rushed to the hospital.

Under direct questioning by the family's attorney, Glover recalled seeing Robinson jump off an eight-story building during the filming of ''Lethal Weapon,'' in which Robinson was a stuntman and played a supporting role as a villain.

Glover told how Robinson instructed actor Mel Gibson how to jump four stories, and how Robinson performed a stunt in which he fell, then swung from a chain as if he had been shot.

The defense contends that there was no negligence. Earlier in the trial, a nurse, Josie Cornell, testified that she had heard Robinson say that having an ambulance on the scene of a stunt was ''insulting'' and ''bad luck.''

BOSTON (MARCH 28) UPI - Middle-aged women who are overweight by even a few pounds are at increased risk for suffering a heart attack, a study in The New England Journal of Medicine said Wednesday.

The Harvard study, one of the largest and most comprehensive of its kind, also disputed the notion that weight gain as women reach middle age is a normal or healthy part of the aging process, said the study's lead author, Dr. JoAnn Manson of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

''Our study indicates that obesity is a greater risk factor for women than previously recognized. Even after adjusting for cigarette smoking, even mildly to moderately overweight women were associated with substantial coronary risk,'' Manson said.

''One-third of middle-aged women are obese. It often accompanies middle age, but that does not mean it's healthy or normal. Health hazards come with it,'' Manson said.

After surveying 115,886 American women from 1976 to 1984, Manson found that for a 5-foot 4 1/2-inch tall woman who is only between one and 12 pounds overweight had a 30 percent increased risk of having either a fatal or non-fatal heart attack.

A range of 125 to 136 pounds is the recommended weight for a woman of that height, she said.

The risk of a dying from a heart attack or suffering a non-fatal one for women of the same height rose to 80 percent when they weighed between 149 and 171 pounds, Manson found. The risk for women weighing above 172 pounds more than tripled.

Women who gained 20 pounds or more since they were 18 years old doubled the risk of fatal or non-fatal heart attack, the researchers found.

''We found that 20 additional pounds or more between age 18 and middle age posed the greatest risk of all,'' Manson said. The weight increase generally comes after women turn 30 when their metabolisms slow down, they exercise less and pregnancies occur.

The extra pounds are often accompanied by diabetes, hypertension and elevated blood cholesterol levels, which contribute to the risk of a heart attack.

''There are very few young women, in their 20s, with an obesity problem. The key is to avoid weight gain in middle age. Our study highlights the importance of primary prevention of weight gain,'' she said.

Manson's study, conducted along with a group of researchers at Brigham and Women's and Harvard University's schools of medicine and public health, is one of the first to control such variables as health status when the study began, age and cigarette smoking, said Dr. Theodore VanItallie, of St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York, in an accompanying editorial.

''That's an impressive number of people they looked at,'' VanItallie said. ''They made every effort to rule out pre-illness and smoking, which itself triples risk of coronary disease and confounds the whole thing.''

Previous studies of excess weight and heart attack risk that did not consider smokers distorted the benefits of being lean, he said.

''The cigarette smoking in and of itself made lean people look worse. But it's not their weight, it's their cigarette smoking that put them in high risk groups,'' Manson said.

VanItallie suggested that the findings should help ''set our weight standards to keep people in good health and not just alive.''

''It's important not just to think about the death rate, but about disability and illness brought on by weight. In the past we tended to think more of life expectancy and that overlooked the submerged part of ill health,'' VanItallie said.

''The fact that you can stay alive with diabetes shouldn't make you complacent. Our goals should be for people to remain healthy,'' VanItallie said.

(MARCH 28) UPI - Official sources in London say U-S and British customs agents arrested at least five people... including two Iraqis... today and confiscated several devices used to trigger nuclear explosions. The seizure is the result of a months-long investigation in both nations. Government sources say the triggering devices were flown to Britain on a U-S flight and would have continued on to Baghdad aboard an Iraqi Airways plane. Customs officials seized the devices at a Heathrow Airport cargo hangar.

The president of Lithuania and Senator Edward Kennedy had different interpretations of Soviet policy regarding the republic when interviewd on American television this morning. The Massachusetts Democrat said Gorbachev would NOT use force against Lithuania unless lives were threatened. However, Lithuania's leader says that means Gorbachev does plan to use force after creating an image that Soviets are in danger.

An Irving, Texas, man who shot and killed a murder suspect outside a suburban Dallas shopping mall this week will NOT be tried in the slaying. A Dallas County grand jury today declined to indict Todd Broom, who killed Eddie Edwards with a .44-Magnum pistol after seeing Edwards fatally shoot a woman in the mall's parking lot. Prosecutors warned that a failure to prosecute Broom could set a dangerous precedent.

Wakes are scheduled today for about one-third of the 87 victims of the weekend arson fire at an illegal New York nightspot. Some relatives prepared to bury victims of the worst mass murder in U-S history, while others made arrangements to return their deceased loved ones to their homelands. The Happy Land social club was a popular nightspot with many Honduran and other Central American immigrants.

ANALYSIS BY JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (MARCH 28) UPI - It's husband-bashing time on TV this week as Jean Stapleton runs over her spouse with a car, Whoopi Goldberg kicks hers out and Carol Burnett hires an outfit called ''Hit Parade'' to murder hers.

Gentlemen, television is trying to tell you something.

Goldberg and Stapleton appear in ''Bagdad Cafe,'' a new series inspired by the movie of the same name, to debut on CBS Friday, Mar. 30, 9-9:30 p.m. Eastern time. It is to be followed by another sitcom, ''Sugar and Spice,'' a kind of ''My Two Moms'' which was not available for review.

Burnett does her husband-killing on her new show, ''Carol & Company,'' a comedy anthology to preview on NBC Saturday, Mar. 31, 9:30-10 p.m. Eastern time.

''Bagdad Cafe'' refers to the dilapidated motel and restaurant Goldberg runs off a byway in California's Mojave Desert.

The show starts with Stapleton, playing Jasmine, behind the wheel of her car, tires spinning in the desert sand, while her husband yells impatient instructions. She backs up over him, which does not improve his temper.

''Remember your blood pressure,'' she says.

''How can I forget - you gave it to me,'' he snaps and the argument continues.

''You've been promising me for 25 years that you're going to die,'' she says. ''Well, I'm sick of waiting.''

Off she stomps, lugging two suitcases, eventually landing at the Bagdad Hotel and Cafe, where Goldberg as Brenda holds sway with a sharp tongue and a heart of gold.

''When you grow up all of this will be yours,'' she tells her infant grandchild.

''Mama, you're scaring the baby,'' her son says. He's a musican who helps out at the Bagdad. She also has a teenage daughter who always seems to be going off half-dressed.

Brenda has just caught her husband, Sal, providing the wrong kind of room service to a woman guest named Alice.

''It's checkout time, babe,'' Brenda says. ''Alice doesn't live here any more.''

She also chucks Sal, played with delightful wounded dignity by guest star Cleavon Little, who reportedly will be back in future episodes.

By the end of the episode Brenda and Jasmine, after a shaky start, have become friends. Jasmine has a special kind of magic.

Goldberg and Stapleton, who could be funny taking turns reading the Manhattan telephone directory, make a warm and wonderful odd couple. ''Bagdad Cafe'' looks promising.

''Carol & Company'' takes the anthology-repertory route to comedy, with a funny first effort casting Burnett as Lois, a wronged wife.

Lois isn't just wronged - she trampled. She was born to grovel and she even vacuums the lint out of her unappreciative husband's pockets.

That's before she discovers credit card bills involving a motel, a florist and a woman named Jennifer.

She confides in her friend Sylvia.

''Kill him,'' Sylvia says.

''I'm at my wit's end,'' Lois continues.

''Kill him,'' Sylvia says. ''That's what I did with my husband.''

As Sylvia says, ''All the girls are doing it.''

This is no do-it-yourself project - they hire an outfit called Hit Parade.

Lois serves coffee and finger sandwiches to a salesman from Hit Parade, who turns up in tennis togs and racket because he's on his way to the club.

She mentions killing and he cautions her, ''We never ever use the K-word.''

They chat cosily - the company's normal commission is 25 percent of the insurance - and when he asks what method she prefers, Burnett ponders and says, ''I just don't know. Paul is so hard to shop for.''

The deal is made, but there's a hitch and Carol gets a chance to clown.

''Carol & Company'' offers a funny first episode but NBC is taking a chance - that an anthology show can maintain quality control, and that the audience will accept an unorthodox comedy format.

NBC will air a second preview on Saturday, Apr. 7, but no series air date has been announced.

Cheryl Ladd and Anthony John Denison are happily married until he tries to bring to America his illegitimate daughter - and her Vietnamese mother.

That's the plot of ''The Girl Who Came Between Them,'' to air on NBC Sunday, Apr. 1, 9-11 p.m. Eastern time.

The story is slight and more than slightly improbable. Why is he surprised that his wife resents his bringing his ex-lover to America? Why is he so ready to bring a Vietnamese woman to America when he isn't even sure she is who she claims to be? He isn't looking for a wife, he wants a saint.

The Vietnamese girl resents Ladd and rebuffs her attempts at friendship, which doesn't help.

Ladd is beautiful, Denison handsome, and young Melissa Chan adorable as the child. They all deserve better and so does the problem of the illegitimate offspring of American servicemen.

NEW YORK (MARCH 28) UPI - The stock market closed narrowly mixed Wednesday in another sluggish session, but analysts were heartened by the market's ability to hold the gains from Tuesday's late rally.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which jumped 29.28 Tuesday, added 6.75 to close at 2743.69.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.37 to 187.77 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.50 to 342.00. The price of an average share added seven cents.

Declines led advances 720-706 among the 1,974 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 142,300,000 shares, versus 131,610,000 shares traded Tuesday.

Even though the blue chips posted modest gains and the broad market showed some slight weakness, analysts said the day represented an important consolidation of Tuesday's rally. Many downplayed that advance because it was driven by computerized program buying, used to profit on price spreads between stocks and stock-index futures, on very light volume.

"There were a lot of skeptics of the rally yesterday and I think we spent the day defending the gains of yesterday," said Sidney Dorr, vice president of institutional trading at Charles Schwab & Co. in San Francisco.

"The people who didn't believe the rally Tuesday weren't able to sell it off today," he said. "There were enough buyers around to hold the market right here."

Dorr said late rallies such as Tuesday's are usually open to adjustments the next day. "When the market spurts in the last hour lots of times you have a pullback to give up half of that, but we didn't do that today. I think we still have more room on the upside on this move," he said.

On the trading floor, American General was the most active issue, surging 8 1/8 to 40 1/8 after news that Torchmark Corp. has made an unsolicited $6.3 billion takeover bid for the company, an insurance and financial services firm with subsidiaries in all 50 states and Canada.

Late reports said Torchmark offered to negotiate all aspects of its proposal, including making an all-cash offer. The current bid calls for a combination of cash and stock with a value equal to $50 a share.

Schlumberger followed, jumping two to 52 3/8 after what were said to be positive comments from a Merrill Lynch analyst. Amax was third, climbing 2 5/8 to 28 5/8.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T rose 5/8 to 42 7/8, IBM gained 1 3/8 to 105 7/8, Merck rose 1/2 to 71 1/8, Alcoa gained 3/4 to 66 5/8, and Coca-Cola rose 1/2 to 75 7/8.

Elsewhere, Apple Bancorp soared 9 1/8 to 41 3/8 after saying it would decide by April 10 whether to accept or reject a $38-a-share buyout bid from Stanley Stahl, a New York real estate investor who already has a stake in the company.

General Development gained 3/8 to 4 1/4. The company has pleaded guilty in a $100 million fraud scheme and said Wednesday it was considering a sale of assets or of the entire company.

General Instrument sank 3 1/4 to 31 amid speculation that a major customer may cut its capital spending and announce the move at an analysts' meeting Thursday.

And Network Equipment Technologies tumbled 2 1/2 to 29 3/4. Merrill Lynch was said to lower its rating on the stock.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 171,379,220 shares, compared with 154,021,930 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed slightly lower in moderately active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index lost 0.65 to close at 361.23. The price of an average share fell two cents. Declines led advances 254-229 among the 764 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 15,220,300 shares, compared with 15,396,300 traded Tuesday. Texas Air led the Amex issues, off 1/8 to 7 3/4.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 2.81 to 436.69.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 28) UPI - United Airlines settled a $435-million antitrust lawsuit Wednesday with Continental Airlines, which had accused the nation's largest airline of using its computerized reservation system in unfair competition.

The airlines agreed not to disclose the amount of the settlement, but Continental attorney David Boies said, "I think it's fair to say we're pleased."

As part of the agreement, Boies said Continental, a Texas Air Corp. subsidiary, will drop another suit in state court that alleged United violated its contract with the other airline in operating the reservation system between 1980 and 1984.

"At this point, both companies have put all differences between them behind them," Boies said, noting that other quarrels concerning the computer system had been resolved.

The settlement was finalized shortly before jury deliberations were to begin in a ten-week trial in U.S. District Court. Continental had sought $435 million in damages, claiming that United, the nation's largest airline, exercised monopolistic control of the reservations systems in travel agencies nationwide.

Continental had accused the UAL Corp. unit of overcharging it and other airlines for the service, which displays flight schedules, and of "biasing" its competitors by making their most convenient flight schedules not as accessible as United's.

(MARCH 28) UPI - Fruit farmers along the Atlantic Coast scurried to protect their budding trees today as wintry cold settled into the area for a second day. Temperatures were in the teens and low 20's this morning in Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia and southern New Jersey, where peach and apple farmers suffered through another night of sub-freezing cold.

Filipino government troops say they stumbled upon a communist guerrilla camp in the southern mountains and killed 59 guerrillas in two days of fighting. The army was backed by helicopter gunships. In Manila, a clash between rebels and troops near President Corazon Aquino's palace left one soldier and one guerrilla dead. U-S service personnel have been ordered to remain on their bases.

London's bookmakers say Prime Minister Thatcher's popularity has plummeted so low that they have stopped taking bets on whether she will win the next election. Odds-makers are only taking bets on who will succeed her as conservative party leader. The highest odds are 11-8 for former defense secretary Michael Hesseltine... 2-1 for party chairman Sir Kenneth Baker... and 3-1 for Deputy Prime Minister Sir Geoffrey Howe.

NEW YORK (MARCH 28) UPI - The dollar moved up on the yen in New York trading Wednesday to flirt with the psychologically important 160-yen barrier but backed down as the Federal Reserve intervened to defend Japan's vulnerable currency. The U.S. unit declined against the other leading currencies.

Market players said the dollar could rise above the 160-yen level by week's end but might probably retreat then under profit taking. The April 1 start of a new Japanese fiscal year could also relieve the yen.

Participants said the New York Federal Reserve Bank sold dollars as the U.S. unit rose to a day high of 159.25 yen. The dollar retreated below 159 yen, but the intervention didn't relieve pressure on the Japanese unit.

In late New York trading the dollar was quoted at 1.7110 West German marks off slightly from 1.7130 Tuesday. It was changing hands against the Japanese currency at 158.70 yen, more than a yen up from 157.65.

"The dollar continues to be strong and the yen continues to be weak," said George DeLuna, a Creditanstalt Bankverein foreign exchange vice president. He said the 160-yen barrier could be shattered by Friday, the last business day in the current Japanese fiscal year.

In the new fiscal year, DeLuna said, players expect to see the Bank of Japan counterattack, possibly rolling out heavy artillery: a further hike in its key discount interest rate, recently lifted to 5.25 percent.

That hike did not help the yen, weakened by massive outflows of investment capital from Tokyo's volatile markets. Returns on Japanese bonds are well below those on U.S., German and other instruments.

"The yen is basically a low-yielding currency right now," said currency analyst Earl Johnson, a Harris Trust & Savings Bank vice president, who looked for "continued and further yen weakness."

The dollar could ease off, though, as players collect profits, said trader Thomas Palladino of Amsterdam Rotterdam Bank: "I think you're going to have a lot of (dollar) sellers up there."

Other dollar rates: 1.5168 Swiss francs, off from 1.5185; 5.7450 French francs, off from 5.7615 French francs; and 1,257 Italian lire, also off from the previous day's 1,259. The British pound rose to $1.6265 from $1.6240.

In Europe the dollar closed lower, ending in Frankfurt at 1.7059 German marks against 1.7130 Tuesday and in Zurich at 1.5170 Swiss francs against 1.5220.

The U.S. unit was down in Paris, Milan and Brussels at 5.7600 French francs against 5.7730, 1,258.70 Italian lire against 1,259.90 and 35.35 Belgian francs compared with 35.45 the day before.

In London, the pound moved up nearly a cent to finish at $1.6305 against $1.6230. Analysts said the pound climbed in the past week by 1.7 percent on a trade-weighted basis, pushed by high British interest rates.

In Tokyo, the dollar moved up another 1.67 yen to close at 158.63 yen against 156.96 Tuesday. Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu voiced concern at the decline of Japan's currency, adding that "we are watching the market."

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $369.25, off 25 cents from $369.50. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $369 an ounce, up from $368.70. In Zurich, gold was unchanged at $368.50 an ounce, while in London it fell to $369.75 an ounce from $370.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.94 an ounce, off from $4.985. Comex spot silver slipped to $4.917 from $4.954. Zurich silver eased to $4.95 an ounce from $5.00. London silver fell to $4.96 an ounce from $4.99.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 28) UPI - The House, bucking a veto threat from President Bush, approved a bill Wednesday to give the Environmental Protection Agency a place in the Cabinet and insulate a new branch of the agency from party politics.

Bush has supported making the EPA the 15th Cabinet department, but strongly objected to creation of an Environmental Statistics Bureau as an independent, non-partisan agency within the new Department of Environmental Protection.

Supporters of the bill say the statistics bureau must be free from political influence so it will be an objective source of information, not a vehicle of administration policy.

Last week, a White House memo said the statistics bureau language raises ''serious constitutional concerns'' and severely ''restricts executive branch oversight of the new bureau.''

Before the House vote, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater reiterated Bush's opposition, saying Congress was trying to ''micromanage the agency.'' He repeated Bush's threat to veto the legislation ''if it is passed as it is now.''

In the key vote, the House rejected, 266-166, a proposal by Rep. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., to meet Bush's demand by eliminating the controversial language and organizing the new department the same as other Cabinet departments. That margin, however, is not enough to override a veto.

The final vote to approve the bill and send it to the Senate was 371-55.

In rejecting Bush's objections, Rep. Esteban Torres, D-Calif., said, ''The creation of a Department of Environmental Protection is too important to be reduced to a name change.''

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee has approved own version of EPA legislation, but without some of the contentious provisions in the House measure. Congressional leaders have said they want the final legislation on the president's desk by April 22, the 20th anniversary of Earth Day.

The chief sponsors of the bill, Reps. John Conyers, D-Mich., and Frank Horton, R-N.Y., drafted a compromise last week aimed at making their measure more palatable to the White House.

The measure would have stricken a provision that strictly limits the circumstances under which the chief of the statistics bureau could be fired.

It also would have softened language giving the bureau virtually exclusive authority to collect, analyze and publicly release environmental information without review by other agencies, such as the White House budget office, which now can effectively censor any executive branch report.

However, Conyers and Horton decided Wednesday against offering their proposal because the administration refused to agree in writing to support it, aides to the two lawmakers said.

An aide to Horton held out hope that a compromise on the bill could still be reached with when the House and Senate negotiate over differences between their two versions of the bill.

Further abandoning attempts to accommodate Bush, the House later strengthened another provision he objected to, voting to require regional administrators of the new department be appointed soley on the basis of managerial and environmental qualifications, without regard for their political positions.

''We're only asking that quality and competence prevail over politics,'' said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., sponsor of the amendment.

The House also adopted an amendment by Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., directing the new department to increase its staff of criminal investigators by 30 percent annually for five years.

The EPA, created in 1970, would become the 15th department in the president's Cabinet, the first since the Veterans Administration, another major indepedent agency, became the Department of Veterans Affairs one year ago.

(MARCH 28) UPI - Crude oil prices fell sharply Wednesday after an industry report showed U.S. inventories rose a surprisingly large 7.5 million barrels last week.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for May delivery dropped 40 cents to $20.08 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, 2 cents over its low on the day.

Trading volume was a moderate 70,653 contracts after two days of light trading Monday and Tuesday, when many traders were away attending the National Petroleum Refiners' convention in San Antonio.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, WTI was quoted at $20.10 a barrel, a loss of 40 cents.

Late Tuesday after the Merc closed, the oil industry's American Petroleum Institute reported crude stocks backed up last week by 7.5 million barrels while gasoline supplies declined 5.8 million barrels.

Crude stocks were not expected to rise more than 3 million barrels even though many refineries were in their maintenance turnarounds from heating oil to gasoline production. Gasoline stocks were only expected to fall 1 to 3 million barrels.

Those two statistical surprises dominated Wednesday's market, at least in the early trading.

''Initially trading was pretty much in line with the API's. Gasoline had a pretty good run and crude was put on the defensive,'' said James Steel, energy analyst with Refco Inc. in New York. ''As the day wore on, the glamour of gasoline dimmed. Then everybody hit the crude harder.''

Unleaded gasoline for May delivery gained 0.44 cent to 64.56 cents a gallon on the Merc after trading as high as 65.25 cents a gallon.

The April delivery contract still has two more days of trading on the Merc but Steel said most trading is focused on the May contract.

On the New York Harbor cash market, unleaded gasoline for prompt delivery slipped 0.15 cent to 56.85 cents a gallon.

Home heating oil for April delivery rose 0.40 cent to 55.73 cents a gallon on the Merc, while the May contract declined 0.21 cent to 53.50 cents a gallon.

Heating oil gained 0.25 cent to 57.35 cents a gallon on the New York Harbor cash market.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent crude lost 30 cents to $17.95 a barrel.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light, the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East, declined 20 cents to $15.45 a barrel.

During the day secretary general Subroto of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said imports could account for 65 to 70 percent of all oil consumed by the United States by the end of the decade.

Subroto, who on Tuesday began a five-day visit to Alaska, also said domestically produced oil would only have ''marginal importance'' in nine years.

His remarks were similar to those previously made by Subroto and other OPEC leaders and had no effect on the market, Steel said.

A Tuesday meeting in Houston, in which Soviet officials offered joint ventures to U.S. companies to explore for oil and natural gas in the Soviet Union, was interesting but also had no effect on oil prices, the analyst said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 28) UPI - A top Agriculture Department official said Wednesday that a proposal to salvage the federal crop insurance program by automatically covering all farmers would worsen some of its flaws and drive up costs.

Deputy Agriculture Underscretary Jonathon Kislak said the proposal by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., could cost $1.8 billion to $2.4 billion a year - well above the cost of the system now.

Created in 1980, federally subsidized crop insurance has swallowed $500,000 a year in subsidies but has been crippled by low enrollment rates and complaints of over-priced, inadequate coverage. Low participation has encouraged Congress to enact disaster-relief laws, which have cost an average of $1 billion a year.

As part of its proposals for the new farm policy law, the White House has proposed eliminating federal crop insurance with this crop year and creating a permanent disaster-relief program modeled on the 1988 and 1989 disaster laws.

At a House Agriculture subcommittee hearing, several congressmen assailed the administration plan as miserly. However, there was no consensus on how to reform crop insurance.

Two insurance industry organizations, the Crop Insurance Research Bureau and the American Association of Crop Insurers, said insurance companies would have little interest in becoming ''service contractors'' under English's bill.

The Research Bureau called the English plan ''a continuation of ... a proven failure.''

Trade groups representing insurance agents, however, said crop insurance is a vital risk-management tool for farmers and should be retained.

Kislak said the English bill ''to some extent ... would worsen some of our current problems.'' He said it could require payments based on unrealistically high ''average'' yields and unwisely would offer coverage for livestock production losses when there was no appropriate definition of a loss.

In addition, he said it could cost $450 million a year just to deliver coverage because the bill would use private insurance agents, who would have to be reimbursed.

The administration has offered to work with Congress to try to fix crop insurance but has said it has found no remedies that fit into budget constraints.

English's plan automatically would give farmers coverage for at least 30 percent of their normal yield, ranging up to 50 percent for farmers enrolled in the government program. Farmers could buy additional coverage and get a government cost-share in many cases.

The White House plan calls for compensating farmers for their losses whenever there is a widespread crop failure. Payments would be available for all crops now covered by crop insurance plus hay and forage. That amounts to 93 percent of all U.S. cropland.

SAN JOSE, CA (MARCH 28) UPI - Chips and Technologies Inc., a fast-growing maker of computer chipsets, said Wednesday a combination of supply problems and price pressures would cause a substantial drop in the company's third-quarter operating profits.

The company also said it had authorized a $10 million stock buyback, under which repurchases can start immediately.

The company said operating income for the quarter ending Mar. 31 would be down significantly from the $12.5 million reported in the second quarter.

In the second quarter, the company earned $8.9 million, or 57 cents a share, on sales of $74.4 million.

The company said a shortage in Taiwan of Intel Corp. microprocessors was causing a slowdown in shipments of chipsets, which are used with the microprocessors in personal computers.

''In addition, our customers are on allocation with respect to some of our products as demand has exceeded short-term supply,'' said Gordon Campbell, president and chief executive officer. ''We expect the bulk of our product restraints to be remedied during our fourth fiscal quarter.''

Price pressures on certain older products also has hurt profits, the company said.

Chips and Technologies said it expects some relief from the price squeeze when shipments of new-generation projects begin in the fourth quarter.

CINCINNATI (MARCH 28) UPI - A woman has been walking through Cincinnati this week with a grocery bag over her head.

The ''bag woman,'' who refuses to identify herself, says she represents a ''voice against community censorship.'' She recommends that others join her in wearing bags to protest attempts to censor a scheduled exhibit of photos by the late Robert Mapplethorpe. Some of the photos are sexually explicit.

This week, Cincinnati Contemporary Arts Center officials filed a lawsuit against Hamilton County Sheriff Simon Leis, who announced that the vice squad would review the exhibit when it opens April 6.

Leis said a ''concerned citizen'' had shown him some of the photos.

''In my opinion, the pictures I've seen certainly have been criminally obscene,'' Leis said.

The lawsuit seeks to have a court declare that the photos do not violate obscenity laws and to prevent police seizure of the photos.

Just about everybody in Cincinnati, it seems, has an opinion about the Mapplethorpe exhibit, which has become the No. 1 topic of conversation in the Queen City.

''It has polarized this community,'' says Cincinnati businessman George Ballou.

That's about the only thing everybody agrees on. There's no middle ground. Residents either think the photos have a right to be displayed or that they have no place at all in public.

The Mapplethorpe photos gained notoriety last year when Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., objected to them. Some of the photos depict erotic homosexual acts.

The Cincinnati arts center has already felt the economic impact of a campaign to shut down the show.

Cincinnati's largest residential real estate company, West Shell Inc.,

threatened to withhold its annual contribution to the Fine Arts Fund unless it cut its ties with the arts center. As a result of this pressure, the center has agreed to stop taking money from the arts fund unless it is specifically designated for the center.

Ballou, who owns West Shell, is still trying to prevent the photo show from opening.

''I think the exhibit is wrong,'' he said. ''It's not something that should be in this community. I think it should be stopped. I think it's pornographic. I think it's sickening.''

Radio talk shows and letters to newspaper columns have been jammed with pro and con sentiment.

VILNIUS, LITHUANIA (MARCH 28) UPI - Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis conceded Wednesday that a referendum could be held on the question of the rebellious Soviet republic's independence, making a major concession that could break a stalemate with Moscow.

''I am ready to exchange opinions (with Moscow) on any question, including the question of a referendum,'' Landsbergis told United Press International.

Vilnius and Moscow are locked in a standoff over the issue of the rebellious republic's fate. Lithuania's Communists were unseated by the nationalist Sajudis in February parliamentary elections, and on March 11 the new Parliament declared independence from the Soviet Union,

On Tuesday, Soviet paratroopers beat and dragged Lithuanian army deserters from a psychiatric hospital and later seized the headquarters of the republic's independent Communists, which had broken with the Moscow party after last month's elections.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has called the independence declaration illegal and invalid, and, saying the Soviet Union negotiates only with foreign countries, has demanded a plebiscite on the issue.

Landsbergis indicated Wednesday a referendum is possible. ''Some time the distance between us has to narrow,'' Landsbergis said. ''If the people will agree to a referendum, how could I not agree?''

He explained that a referendum on any question may be demanded by 300,000 signatures under Lithuanian law passed last November.

But Landsbergis sought to soften his concession by saying any referendum held should decide whether an independent Lithuania wants to join the Soviet Union.

''What kind of concessions should we make? To join the Soviet Union? In order to decide this issue we have to hold a referendum,'' Landsbergis said. ''The starting point must be the independence of Lithuania.''

Asked whether he would resign if Moscow demanded it as a condition for negotiations, Landsbergis said, ''I wouldn't understand such an ultimatum, but of course I would if the people wanted it and my people wanted it.''

His statements Wednesday came shortly after the republic's Parliament began considering a proposed law that would effectively ban the Moscow-line Communist Party from the republic.

Legislator Stanislovas Ilgunas said the bill calls for a ''multi-party system'' that is in line with the Baltic state's quest for self-rule.

''If we want to have our own government, we have to act like an an independent country with our own parties and not those of the Soviet Union the United States or any other country,'' Ilgunas said.

The bill, scheduled for debate Thursday, was a defiant answer to Moscow's contention that the party building seized Tuesday was built by the Soviet Communists and is its property.

Lithuania's government protested the forceful Soviet actions Tuesday as ''inexcusable aggression'' and demanded the return of the deserters it said were kidnapped. Lithuania also recalled Parliament deputies from Moscow and demanded immediate negotiations with Moscow in ''neutral territory.''

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov reiterated that a law of secession is being prepared in the Soviet Union.

Nikolai Trucuk, press attache at the Soviet Embassy in Warsaw, said secession would cost the Soviet Union up to $3.3 billion and weaken its military potential because ''there are as many as 24 armament plants in Lithuania.''

Landsbergis has appealed to the West to step in and allow Lithuania to break away cleanly. In an interview Wednesday with NBC News, he said he welcomed any U.S. backing for his republic's efforts to secede from the Soviet Union.

''We are waiting for more ... support,'' he said, speaking in English, ''because Washington and the United States, they are a state of the great democratic tradition and they would support democracy ... and (of) the returning of democracy to some countries earlier, in this case, annexed and suppressed.''

But in Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler earlier cautioned, ''This is a very complex, delicate diplomatic situation.''

The Soviet government warned other countries against interference in Soviet internal affairs, warning that any meddling ''threatens to detonate a potentially explosive situation.''

It then asked all foreigners to leave Lithuania and barred their entry into the rebellious republic, including foreign correspondents.

Pro-Lithuanian independence rallies slated for Sunday in the Ukraine have been banned by the government of that Soviet republic, Soviet media reported.

''The Ukrainian government has ordered local authorities to to prevent rallies in support of Lithuanian independence called by Rukh on March 31 '' the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

Ukrainian nationalists, however, vowed to defy the order in widening repercussions of the Baltic crisis, media reports said.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (MARCH 28) UPI - Five leftist activists, including a municipal councilman, were shot and killed Wednesday near Medellin by unidentified gunmen, police said Wednesday.

Police said the gunmen, presumably members of the right-wing death squads active in the area, shot the activists on two separate banana plantations in Chigorodo. Banana workers called a strike to protest the deaths of the five, all members of a coalition of ex-guerrillas and communists known as the Patriotic Union.

A cocaine cartel peace offer and a series of hostage releases, including that of the son of a presidential adviser, were negotiated by two industrialists hired by the adviser's family, the negotiators said Wednesday.

The industrialists, Santiago Londono White and J. Mario Aristizabal Correa released a statement revealing their dealings with the powerful Medellin cartel that they said resulted in the release of several hostages and the conditional offer of surrender by the druglords.

The revelations came as the administration of President Virgilio Barco rebutted charges by a major figure in the drug war, ex-Minister of the Interior Carlos Lemos Simmonds, that the government is retreating from its fight against the cartels.

''As the representatives of the family ... we achieved the release of our friend Alvaro Diego (Montoya), as well as the surrender of the 'extraditables,''' the communique read. Montoya is the son of close presidential adviser German Montoya.

''We are satisfied that, through our activities of a humanitarian character, the freedom of the hostages and a new alternative for peace in Colombia was achieved,'' the two industrialists said.

The druglords led a bloody four-month bombing spree against extradition last year that killed some 200 people before Medellin cartel military chief Jose Rodriguez Gacha was gunned down by police in northern Colombia on Dec. 15.

On Jan. 16, the Medellin cartel admitted military defeat at the hands of the government and offered to surrender in exchange for ''constitutional guarantees,'' widely interpreted as a metaphor for a halt to extradition of alleged drug traffickers to the United States.

The offer was simultaneous with the release of Patricia Echeverri and her daughter and was followed on Jan. 22 with the liberation of Alvaro Diego Montoya, who was kidnapped by the druglords Dec. 19.

Since then, the cartel has made further peace offers and surrendered cocaine laboratories, explosives and a stolen helicopter.

Londono White and Aristizabal Correa said they informed the government of their activities after the hostage releases at a meeting of the National Security Council.

The minister of justice, Roberto Salazar Manrique, said Wednesday that Barco was present at the ''informative meeting'' but made no comment.

Salazar Manrique said the talks were a humanitarian effort to free hostages and had nothing to do with government anti-drug policy.

The government has publicly refused to consider talks with the Medellin cartel, reportedly led by fugitive Pablo Escobar. On Sunday, however, Lemos Simonds, the outgoing interior minister, complained that government policy towards the druglords was ''no longer the same decisive, intransigent and firm attitude of December.''

The government answered Lemos Simmonds in a letter Monday signed by members of the Barco cabinet rejecting the ex-minister's accusations and vowing to uphold ''the defense of the state of law, democracy and public peace.''

Fourteen Colombians have been sent to stand trial on drug charges in the United States and 15 more suspects are in a Bogota jail awaiting extradition. But none have been sent to the United States since Montoya was released, fueling speculation on possible secret talks between the government and the drug lords.

Also Wednesday, authorities said unidentified assailants tossed a grenade at a judicial commission investigating a recent massacre in northwestern Colombia, killing one man and wounding seven others.

Dr. Gonzalo Morales, director of the Regional Hospital of Apartado, said Jose Carmen Murillo, a passerby, died from shrapnel wounds.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 28) UPI - After a months-long legislative logjam, the way was cleared Wednesday for a House vote on a child-care bill amid warnings from Republicans that President Bush would veto a $27 billion Democratic plan.

The House Rules Committee decision to schedule a vote Thursday gave Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., a chance to keep his vow to pass a child-care bill in March, and prompted one GOP panel member to walk out in a protest.

The Senate passed a child-care plan in June but House consideration stalled last fall in a turf battle between two committees and controversy over whether federal child-care funds should be used for religious instruction.

Under the committee action, the House is to vote first Thursday on a church-state issue - whether states should be required, or given the option, to provide parents with vouchers that could be used to obtain sectarian child care.

It is then to consider two plans expanding care through tax credits and a smaller amount of aid - the Democratic leadership bill and a $20 billion plan sponsored by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, and backed by the White House.

Both bills require states to give parents vouchers that can be used for church-based care, as does the Senate legislation. But the Democratic bill would allow state law to prohibit such uses, while the Stenholm plan does not.

Assistant House Republican leader Newt Gingrich of Georgia said after a White House meeting that Bush would veto any plan resembling that of the Democratic leadership, which also would require training for child-care workers.

''It is anti-religious. It fails to meet his commitment to no federal regulations. And it is too expensive,'' Gingrich said.

Gingrich urged the Rules Committee to delay the vote, noting the leadership bill was only issued late Tuesday. Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y, walked out of a committee meeting after the vote was scheduled.

''This rule is a disgrace,'' he said. ''This rule is outrageous.''

Democrats had said privately they included the requirement for vouchers to head off White House opposition. Many Democrats opposed the vouchers on constitutional grounds, and a court challenge is virtually certain.

House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missiouri expressed confidence the leadership plan would pass, and House Democrats emerged from a private caucus earlier in the day saying they were hopeful the president eventually would sign on.

''The president has said he is for child care,'' said Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y. ''The process involves making compromises.''

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater praised the Stenholm bill as most closely resembling Bush's original proposal, which only included tax credits. Bush favors tax credits because they give parents choice in child care and also help mothers who do not work.

The leadership estimates its plan would cost about $27 billion for five years, but Republicans say its cost would be several billion dollars higher. Stenholm's bill would cost about $20.5 billion over five years.

Both bills provide the bulk of the money in the form of tax credits for low-income families with children, with smaller amounts for expanding Head Start and for distribution to the states.

The leadership goes further by requiring that states set standards for care and by spending more in direct aid - including a program to help schools care for ''latch-key'' children that is not in the Stenholm plan.

Some supporters of the Stenholm plan also object to the school-based program because it would slight religious day care and for-profit providers.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the House Select Committee on Children, said negotiations with the White House on a compromise fell apart because the Republicans mounted ''a full attack on the public schools.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 28) UPI - The Senate Foreign Relations Committee defeated a proposal Wednesday by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to eliminate $30 million in ''bribes'' to the Contra guerrillas to get them to give up their weapons and return peacefully to Nicaragua.

Helms, one of the strongest supporters of the Contras in their failed decade-long effort to topple the Soviet-supported Nicaraguan government, said the guerrilla leadership does not want the $30 million to help resettle them in Nicaragua if it means they must disarm.

Helms said Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, ousted by a U.S.-favored candidate in voting Feb. 25, is ''passing out machine guns like they are going out of style'' to Nicaraguan militias, while the Contras are being told they must give up their weapons if they want U.S. transportation, resettlement, agricultural and other aid.

''They need these weapons for protection. They fear for their lives,'' Helms said. ''The resistance does not want $30 million in bribes. The resistance rejects all aid given in the form of a bribe so they can protect themselves.''

The committee voted 18-3 against the amendment, with Sens. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., and Connie Mack, R-Fla., voting with Helms.

Bernard Aronson, assistant secretary for Inter-American Affairs, said the Contra leadership had reached an agreement with Violetta Chamorro, the president-elect of Nicaragua, to disarm and accept the U.S. resettlement aid. The agreement provides for the security of the estimated 18,000 Contra fighters and dependents through the Catholic Church of Nicaragua and the Organization of American States, Aronson said.

Helms said he talked by telephone Wednesday with a Commandante Franklin, a Nicaraguan Contra leader who he said rejected the aid.

''The resistance may be country people, but they are not stupid,'' Helms said. ''They do not like the odor of this.''

The committee then voted 15-0, with Helms recorded as present, to authorize spending $300 million in economic aid to help revive the Nicaraguan economy, battered by the Contra war, U.S. sanctions, and questionable management under the leftist Sandinista government. It also voted to authorize $470 million in economic aid for Panama, where a U.S. invasion in December removed Gen. Manuel Noriega, now held in Florida on drug trafficking charges.

Separate Senate committees must vote later to appropriate the money. The House is expected to vote Thursday on an appropriation bill for the two countries that closely tracks the Senate Foreign Relations Committee bill.

ALBANY, NY (MARCH 28) UPI - Hundreds of AIDS activists converged on Albany Wednesday and confronted Gov. Mario Cuomo at his heavily guarded home before marching to the Capitol, where police hauled away scores of demonstrators.

The protest, conducted by the Aids Coalition To Unleash Power, or ACT UP, was intended to draw attention to the need for more extensive health, welfare and insurance benefits for AIDS patients, organizers said.

Officials said 47 of some 700 protesters were arrested, while protest organizers claimed 82 were in custody.

About 30 blocking the Senate chamber were expected to be arrested at 6 p.m. when the Capitol building closes, protesters said.

One demonstrator was hospitalized with cuts after being dragged away by police, they said.

The activists marched in front of the executive mansion in a chilly March wind, chanting, ''Health care is a right!''

Cuomo has proposed spending $266 million on AIDS, a jump of $61 million over last year, but an amount the activists say is woefully inadequate.

Clad in a tan overcoat and tweed hat, Cuomo walked down the driveway and through the mansion gates to the demonstratos as dozens of state police ringed the grounds.

''Forget the (political) parties, I'm telling you the facts. I'm trying to get the tax cut delayed... and some don't want it. That will cost us $1.7 billion and that's a fact,'' Cuomo said.

As the governor spoke, dozens of marchers laid down at his feet.

''Governor, the programs are ineffective. ... There are people with AIDS dying on the streets of New York City and we are hoping the budget will not be cut,'' retorted Mark Aurigemma of Brooklyn.

Several times, Cuomo's attempts to speak were drowned out by chants of ''programs not promises.''

The activists said it would not cost the state much money to distribute condoms in state prisons, where an estimated 20 percent of the population have the AIDS virus, to decriminalize the possession of hypodermic needles and to pass a bill allowing medical parole for terminally ill prisoners.

ACT UP is also seeking a massive infusion of state funds for research, medical care, housing and AIDS education.

After meeting with Cuomo, the group marched a quarter of a mile to the Capitol under heavy police escort and rallied on the steps.

About 100 protesters then moved inside the building and walked through the hallways, chanting loudly.

Several dozen were arrested when they handcuffed themselves together and attempted to block the entrance to the executive wing in what they called a ''die in.''

Another ''die in'' was held in front of the state Senate chamber, and police said they would allow the protesters to block one entrance until the building closes for the day, when anyone remaining would be arrested.

Demonstrators marked the marble columns in the Capitol with chalk, and plastered stickers proclaiming, ''Silence equals death.''

The day before ACT UP members had briefly disrupted proceedings by marching in and blowing airhorns and raining phony death certificates from the galleries.

Rally organizers used bullhorns to marshall the marchers in the direction they wanted, while persons labeled ''legal advisers'' and video camera operators watched and filmed all the arrests.

Although the activists had threatened to shut the Capitol down, business was conducted in both executive and legislative offices.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 28) UPI - President Bush expressed hope Wednesday that Atlanta and Salt Lake City, ''two of our most spectacular cities,'' win their respective bids to hosts the 1996 Summer and the 1998 Winter Olympics.

Atlanta's biggest competition is likely to be Athens, Greece, site of the first Olympics a century ago.

In an address prepared for delivery to a dinner of the U.S. Olympic Committee, Bush also said nations, like Olympic athletes, should aspire to reach ''God's perfection'' and have ''the courage to break barriers.''

Bush said by the 1992 Olympics, he would like to see Germany reunited, ''South Africa, as in every nation,'' free of discrimination, and ''Asia, and this hemisphere,'' counting the ''blessings of democracy ... and self-determination.''

In remarks to the U.S. athletes, the president said: ''It's an honor to be among such talent.''

''Many of you are former medalists. Others are hard at work today to bring home the gold in '92, '96 and even '98, when we hope to see the games back in America in two of our most spectacular cities - Atlanta and Salt Lake City.''

WELLESLEY, MA. (MARCH 28) UPI - The only U.S. manufacturer of the nuclear triggering components like those seized Wednesday near London said it has supplied dozens of phony devices to the U.S. Customs Service in recent months.

Donald Kerr, president of EG&G Inc., stopped short of saying the dummy components from his firm were the ones bound for Iraq when they were seized in a sting operation at Heathrow Airport.

Kerr said the high-voltage devices were supplied by the company during the past six months and included both krytron and spark-gap devices used to trigger nuclear weapons.

The devices, which resemble large glass fuses, are used in nuclear weapons programs and are strictly controlled. Others are used in photocopier machines and other commercial applications, the company said.

''We made available more than 40 such inoperable devices for the U.S. Customs Service,'' Kerr said. ''Some of them (were) small krytron switch tube devices, others spark gaps.

''The lead inside the glass vacuum envelope were cut so they would not work,'' he said.

Kerr said the company was ''proud to have supported the U.S. government in this effort if these devices contributed to this international policing effort.''

U.S. and British customs agents raided a cargo hangar at London's Heathrow Airport and confiscated 40 nuclear triggering components bound for Iraq, official sources said. At least five people, including two Iraqis, were arrested.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in London confirmed the devices had arrived at Heathrow from the United States.

EG&G said it is the nation's only manufacturer of the triggering devices in the United States.

BOSTON (MARCH 28) UPI - Marvin Hagler, the former world middleweight champion who left boxing three years ago after losing to Sugar Ray Leonard is reportedly pursuing a rematch to avenge his only defeat in a title fight.

WHDH-TV reported Wednesday night that preliminary talks would take place during the next week at Lake Tahoe, Calif.

A new fight between Hagler and Leonard became viable Tuesday when Hagler and his estranged wife Bertha reached a settlement in her divorce suit. The couple split three years ago and Hagler has since been living in Milan Italy.

Without the threat of Bertha Hagler claiming any of the boxer's future earnings, he is again interested in pursuing a rematch, WHDH-TV said.

In April 1987, Leonard won a controversial 12-round decision against Hagler in Las Vegas, Nev.

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 28) UPI - A federal judge denied all appeals made by lawyers for condemned killer Robert Alton Harris on Wednesday, and said California's first execution since 1967 should go on as scheduled April 3.

U.S. District Judge William Enright said ''This case and all the tragedy has brought on so many lives has fully run its course.''

Enright also said that despite heated debate over the ethics of captial punishment, ''Capital punishment is the law of this state. It has been repeatedly and expressly validated by the citizens of this state.''

Enright also said the citizens as much as Harris, ''are entitled to a level playing field, to due process.

Harris, 37, is scheduled to be the first person to die in San Quentin's gas chamber in 23 years for the July 5, 1978 murder of two teenage boys in San Diego.

In a 114-page writ filed Monday, Harris' lawyers argued for the first time in federal court that he should be spared the death penalty because he suffers from organic brain damage and other medical disorders that impaired his judgment at the time of the killings.

In an 82-page response filed Tuesday, the attorney general blasted the impaired judgment argument as ''little more than old wine in a new bottle ... All the psychiatrists did in this case is apply 'new' labels to old symptoms.''

Sevilla and McCabe have said they will raise the same issues with a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals if Enright turned them down.

If that step fails, Harris's last hope of survival rests with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who hears emergency matters from the West and would likely be asked for a stay of execution.

If any of the defense appeals are successful, Harris could win a new penalty trial before a jury to determine whether he should be given a lesser sentence than death. His conviction for the murders of Michael Baker and John Mayeski would stand.

If all appeals fail, Harris will become the first California inmate to die since police killer Aaron Mitchell was dragged screaming into San Quentin's gas chamber on April 12, 1967.

Harris received the death sentence in 1979 for killing Michael Baker and John Mayeski, both 16, in the parking lot of a fast-food restaurant, using their car for a bank robbery and finishing off their half-eaten hamburgers.

Harris was first set to die July 7, 1981, and has since been given three separate execution dates, the last one on March 16, 1982. Over the past 11 years, he has four times gone before both the California Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court.

His current appeal is his 19th to date. Said Van de Kamp, ''This petition is Harris's 19th bite at the apple. The apple is long since consumed and justice long overdue.''

In the writ filed Monday, Sevilla and McCabe contended that Harris was afflicted with ''brain damage, organic personality disorder, fetal alcohol effects and PTSD (post-traumatic stress disorder).''

Had the jury known about the disorders, ''it would not, in all reasonable likelihood, have convicted Robert of capital murder or condemned him to die,'' they said.

Van de Kamp rebutted that argument, saying, ''What is clear from the record of this case is that Robert Harris knew precisely what he was doing when he kidnapped, robbed and killed those boys.''

The attorney general also blasted the defense for dragging the case on. ''It is time to execute the sentence long ago imposed and repeatedly upheld by every level of the state and federal judiciary,'' he said.

Harris has already cancelled his requested clemency hearing before Gov. George Deukmejian by telling the governor in a letter he did not believe he would get a fair hearing from the man who authored the death penalty law under which Harris was sentenced.

On Monday, Deukmejian refused to be swayed by a telephone call from Nobel Peace Price winner Mother Teresa of Calcutta asking that Harris's life be spared.

CHICAGO (MARCH 28) UPI - Directors of UAL Corp., weighing a $5.2 billion buyout offer from United Airlines' employees and facing a possible proxy fight with the company's largest stockholder, held a special strategy meeting late Wednesday.

The agenda and location of the meeting were kept secret, but investment banking sources said directors likely would consider asking the employees to up the ante and would review the possibilities for selling off selected assets to maximize shareholder value.

A UAL spokesman said the meeting started around 4 p.m. and was still in session at 6:30 p.m. CST. But he refused further comment.

Directors of UAL, parent of United, reluctantly agreed last Thursday to begin negotiations with its largest stockholder and United's three employee unions - the Association of Flight Attendants, the Air Line Pilots Association and the International Association of Machinists - on the new employee buyout proposal.

But the board also said it believed the bid - a cash, debenture and equity combination valued at about $5.2 billion - was inadequate. They instructed UAL advisers to develop a plan for asset dispositions and to consider other proposals.

An investment banking source said a tentative proposal for possible asset disposition could have been ready for consideration at the Wednesday special meeting and might be used to pressure employees to sweeten their offer - most likely by increasing the cash portion of the deal.

Directors, led by UAL Chairman Stephen Wolf, were said to be seeking at least $200 a share in cash.

The current proposal would give shareholders $150 per share in cash, $25 per share in 10-year senior subordinated notes bearing 15 percent interest and non-voting common stock constituting 25 percent of the new company's total common equity. The remaining 75 percent would be held by an Employee Stock Ownership Plan.

The unions and Condor Partners - UAL's biggest stockholder, with 11.8 percent of the outstanding common stock - joined forces last week to press the employee bid.

Condor was preparing a proxy battle to unseat UAL directors at the company's April 26 annual meeting and pave the way for employee acquisition of the company. The unions and Condor, however, have asked the UAL board to begin negotiations on the buyout before any proxy contest began.

While the employee group and Condor have refused to estimate the total value of their pending buyout offer, Robert Decker, an analyst for the Chicago-based investment-rating firm Duff & Phelps, estimated the combination of cash, debt and equity to be worth about $230 a share, or $5.2 billion.

CINCINNATI (MARCH 28) UPI - A 700-pound polar bear mauled a female Cincinnati Zoo keeper and tore off part of her right arm Wednesday, zoo officials reported.

Laurie Stober, 25, a seven-year veteran employee of the zoo, underwent surgery at University Hospital, where she was listed in critical condition.

''She has lost some of her right arm,'' said zoo spokeswoman Susan Burgmann.

Zoo officials said Stober had apparently pushed a dish of water underneath the metal bars of a cage holding ''Icy,'' a 700-pound male polar bear, when the bear grabbed the tips of Stober's fingers and pulled her against the outside of the cage. The bear then mauled Stober's right arm.

''She is a marvelous keeper and knows her animals well,'' Burgmann said of Stober. ''But, polar bears are wild and unpredictable animals.''

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (MARCH 28) UPI - Members of Colombia's fastest growing leftist rebel group executed their own commander-in-chief, indepenedent radio RCN said Wednesday.

Manuel Perez, a feormer Roman Catholic priest and chief of the National Liberation Army, a leftist rebel group waging a guerrilla war on the government, was killed for stealing the group's money and salting it away in his native Spain, RCN radio said.

Military sources could not confirm the report, but two foreign journalists said Perez had failed to arrive for scheduled interviews.

The National Liberation Army, known by the Spanish initials ELN, recently launched a nationwide offensive to disrupt congressional elections March 11 and the presidential contest May 27.

The ELN raises funds for its war through extortion of foreign petroleum companies, who are willing to pay enormous sums to protect their costly installations.

Observers recently cited a split in the group between Perez, who supported the development of the ELN's ties with leftist civilian organizations, and others who pushed for a greater militarization of the conflict.

(MARCH 28) UPI - The president of Lithuania said that he's waiting for more U-S support for the Lithuanian struggle to free itself from Soviet rule.

At the White House today... President Bush convinced congressional Republicans that his hands-off approach was the best response to the crisis.

Conservative Georgia Congressman Newt Gingrich says he went into the meeting urging Bush to be more aggressive. But he says he came out convinced that a strong American stance might play into the hands of the Soviet military.

This morning, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis called the United States ''a state of the great democratic tradition'' and said he expected it would support what he called ''the returning of democracy to some countries earlier ... annexed and suppressed.''

Landbergis said that when Soviet President Gorbachev told Senator Edward Kennedy that force would be used against the Lithuanians only if lives were threatened... Gorbachev was laying the groundwork to use force after creating an ''image'' of Soviet lives in danger.

Soviet officials announced today that all foreigners must leave Lithuania and all foreigners will be barred from entering. The order applies to diplomats, businessmen and journalists... who must leave when their permits expire.

An official of the Solidarity government says Poland is ready to become the first nation to formally recognize Lithuanian idependence.

Bronislaw Geremek, who chairs the Solidarity parliamentary caucus, has just returned from Lithuania. He says he's convinced that the Soviet Union will NOT use force to keep Lithuania under its domination.

Geremek says the new Lithuanian leadership assured him that the 400-thousand Poles in Lithuania will be able to keep their culture and language in an independent Lithuania.

(MARCH 28) UPI - In Texas today, a Dallas County grand jury decided NOT to indict 25-year-old Todd Alan Broom for murder.

Earlier this month, Broom shot and killed a murder suspect after watching the man fatally shoot a woman in a suburban shopping mall parking lot. Broom says he's relieved by the grand jury's decision. But prosecutors warn that the vigilante action could set a dangerous precedent.

Broom, a copier repairman and pizza parlor owner, says he fired his .44 Magnum revolver after seeing Eddie Edwards shoot his ex-girlfriend in the head at the Irving Mall on March 12th.

Broom says he yelled at Edwards to stop and fired twice when the suspect continued to flee. One shot hit the trunk of Edward's car and the second entered the driver's side door and killed Edwards.

Assistant District Attorney Norm Kinne says Broom's actions were NOT legally justified under the law. But he adds- ''As a citizen and resident of the area, I can understand what they did.''

(MARCH 28) UPI - Three masked gunmen stormed the home of American missionary William Robinson in south Lebanon and shot him three times at close range late last night.

Lebanese military and security sources say Robinson was gunned down because Moslem extremists believe he planned to help Jews settle in the area.

The Syrian-backed Lebanese National Resistance Front today claimed responsibility for Robinson's death. The coalition group of pro-Syrian leftists and Moslem extremists released a statement saying Robinson was killed because he ''was working on settling Jews on Lebanese territories.''

The Israeli military says charges that it is planning to build settlements in southern Lebanon are- quote- ''totally baseless and without any factual foundation.''

The L-N-R-F statement said Robinson had been living in the Lebanese town of Rashaya for several years. This month, the missionary was warned by residents that he had four weeks to leave the area.

A U-S Embassy spokesman in Tel Aviv says Robinson was warned ''many times'' about the dangers facing Americans traveling in Lebanon. Robinson was a former resident of Illinois and Massachusetts.

(MARCH 28) UPI - The Supreme Court today ruled that a state appeals court and NOT a jury may review a condemned murderer's death sentence... even if the sentencing jury considered evidence that is NOT constitutionally valid.

The case involved condemned murderer Chandler Clemons. Clemons appealed his sentence to the Mississippi Supreme Court, arguing that only a jury has the authority to impose a death penalty. His lawyers argued that if the jury makes a mistake during sentencing, it is the duty of a jury- NOT the appellate court- to review the case.

In the Clemons case, the jury made its decision by weighing aggravating and mitigating circumstances, but it was discovered that one of the aggravating circumstances was unconstitutional. The appellate court reviewed the case and upheld Clemons' death sentence.

Justice Byron White, writing for the majority, says NOTHING in the Constitution gives a defendant the right to have a jury review his death sentence.

A report released to Congress today says false and misleading safety claims about lawn care products threaten the health of Americans. The report also says federal agencies are NOT doing enough to protect the public.

A Senate Environment and Public Works sub-committee on lawn chemicals heard the report... but was interrupted for three hours when a senator invoked a little-used rule barring committee hearings after the full Senate has been in session for two hours.

The panel's chairman, Democratic Senator Harry Reid of Nevada, hinted that the unnamed senator was being pressured by the lawn care industry to ''stop the gathering of information'' about lawn pesticides.

But Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell said it was a ''blanket Republican objection'' that interrupted the hearing, which later continued.

The General Accounting Office report faults the Environmental Protection Agency and the Federal Trade Commission for NOT taking a more aggressive approach to stop misleading claims from the pesticide industry.

Part of the bill provides for the establishment of an independent, non-partisan statistics agency within the new Department of Environmental Protection. President Bush has said he opposes the creation of an Environmental Statistics Bureau. But supporters say the bureau must be free from political influence.

The Senate today rejected an amendment to the clean-air bill that would have provided tax incentives to utilities that installed smokestack ''scrubbers'' to reduce acid-rain emissions. The amendment would have eased the impact the clean-air bill will have on coal miners in the East by allowing utilities to use high-sulfur eastern coal instead of switching to low-sulfur western coal.

Lithuanian President Landsbergis says he's ready to exchange opinions with Moscow on any question... including the subject of a referendum to decide the Baltic state's future. The Iraqi Embassy in London has NO comment on today's incident in which U-S and British customs agents discovered nuclear-trigger devices bound for Iraq stored in a hangar at Heathrow Airport. At least five people...

Idaho's state Capitol was the scene of a shouting match today between anti-abortion activists and pro-choice advocates. An estimated 800 people chanting ''pro-life, pro-life'' nearly drowned out about 200 abortion rights activists also at the statehouse steps. Boise has become the focus of the abortion debate because of a measure passed last week by state lawmakers that would give Idaho the most restrictive state abortion law in the nation. Governor Cecil Andrus says he'll act on the bill tomorrow or Friday.

The confrontational anti-AIDS group ACT UP staged a major demonstration today in the New York state capital. Hundreds of activists gathered outside the governor's mansion in Albany before marching to the Capitol. At least 80 people were arrested. A published study reports middle-aged women who are overweight by even a few pounds are at an increased risk for a heart attack. The Harvard study... one of the largest and most comprehensive of its kind... disputes the idea that weight gain is normal for women as they enter middle age. It found that a five-foot-four-and-a-half-inch woman who is between one and 12 pounds overweight has a 30-percent increased risk of suffering a fatal or non-fatal heart attack.

(MARCH 28) UPI - The House today approved making the Environmental Protection Agency part of the Cabinet, but the representatives included a provision which invites a presidential veto. That story and other top news of the day from United Press International.

The House today dared President Bush to veto a bill making the Environmental Protection Agency a cabinet-level agency.

The U-S representatives did so by voting to create a non-partisan Environmental Statistics Bureau within the E-P-A.

Bush has campaigned hard for the elevation of the E-P-A to the cabinet. It would provide some proof that Bush intends to fulfill his promise to be the ''environmental president.''

But Bush has bolted at the creation of a statistics bureau within the E-P-A. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the non-partisan nature of the statistics bureau raises ''constitutional concerns'' and that it would restrict what he calls ''executive branch oversight'' of the E-P-A.

Fitzwater says Bush will veto any E-P-A cabinet bill that includes the statistics bureau.

But the House overwhelming approved the bill as is, sending it to the Senate behind a 371-55 vote.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis says a referendum on the question of independence is possible for the Baltic state. Landsbergis told United Press International he's ready to exchange opinions with Moscow, including the idea of a referendum.

Quoting the Lithuanian leader- ''If the people agree to a referendum, how could I NOT agree?'' It would take 300-thousand signatures to force a referendum according to a Lithauanian law passed last November.

Landsbergis' comments came as the Lithuanian Parliament considered a bill that would bar Moscow's Communist Party. One legislator noted- quote- ''We have to act like an independent country with our own parties and NOT those of the Soviet Union, United States, or any other nation.''

Yesterday, Soviet paratroopers seized the headquarters of Lithuania's independent communists which broke from Moscow after last month's elections.

(MARCH 28) UPI - Grief filled the Rivera Funeral Home in New York today as anguished families and friends attended the first wake for 17 of the 87 victims killed in an arson fire at the Happy Land social club.

Mourners wept and clutched each other as they filed passed the open caskets. 19-year-old Edith Martinez collapsed in the arms of a friend after seeing her 22-year-old cousin, Denny Alvarez.

16-year-old Anna Marte said she wasn't sure she wanted to come view the body of a friend and school classmate, but she did.

Many victims were from Latin American countries like Honduras and the Dominican Republic. Red Cross officials say those who want to take their loved ones' remains back to their native countriesare being provided with transportation for the bodies and two airline tickets for each family.

Julio Gonzalez, the jilted lover accused of setting the blaze with gasoline, remains confined at Bellevue Hospital's prison psychiatic ward. A grand jury is examining the evidence against Gonzalez, who is charged with 174 counts of murder, two for each victim.

The head of OPEC says that by the end of the decade the United States will buy two-thirds of its imported oil from the multi-nation oil cartel.

America currently imports half of its oil. But OPEC General Secretary Subroto, speaking in Anchorage, Alaska, said the United States should NOT be concerned about its growing dependence on imported oil.

The OPEC chief noted OPEC countries import most of the things they need and pay for their imports with oil revenues. He contends the petro-dollars are coming back to the consumers, mostly Western countries.

Subroto spoke to pro-development civic group Commonwealth North and said unless a major oil field is discovered in Alaska, the United States and other nations will have to look to OPEC to meet energy needs.

(MARCH 28) UPI - Amnesty International says the United States is breaking the law by routinely refusing political asylum to persecuted refugees from U-S-supported countries.

The international human rights group says the United States sets different standards for refugees from countries such as El Salvador, Guatemala, or Honduras.

A statistical report by Amnesty finds the Immigration and Naturalization Service granted asylum to about two percent of the El Salvadoran, Guatemalan, and Honduran refugees. An average of 25 percent of refugees are accepted from all other countries.

The executive director of Amnesty International U-S-A says- ''At at time when freedom is winning around the world, this type of discrimination is abhorrent.''

Under the 1980 Refugee Act, the I-N-S, acting on advice from the State Department, is required to grant asylum to those people with a ''reasonable fear of persecution'' in their native countries.

The French government moved today to ban all forms of cigarette advertising and to put new restrictions on alcohol advertising and consumption.

French politicos say the government measures are sure to be approved by the National Assembly later this spring.

In addition to banning tobacco ads, the proposal would prohibit tobacco companies from sponsoring sporting events by 1993. And the price of a pack of cigarettes would rise 15 percent.

The new regulations also would make it more difficult for minors to buy alcohol and would limit almost all ads for alcoholic beverages to print media.

But the nation's tobacco growers were NOT impressed by today's proposal. In the words of one tobacco farmer... ''Talking about tobacco, even when it is to ban it, leads to an increase in consumption.''

The only U-S manufacturer of nuclear-triggering devices said today it has been supplying the government with phony devices for months. Five people were arrested for trying to ship the nuclear triggers

China is reported to have found a way around its pledge to the United States that it would NOT ship medium-range missiles to the Middle East. WESTLAKE VILLAGE, CA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Incomnet Inc. (NASDAQ:ICNT) reported results for 1989, its first profitable year of operations.

Revenues for 1989 were $2,730,107 vs. $1,602,435 in 1988, a gain of 70 percent.

Earnings were a profit of $228,766, or 3 cents per share, in 1989 vs. a loss of $41,687, or 1 cent per share, in 1988.

These results were achieved even though the company wrote off approximately one half million dollars of equipment, fixtures, furniture and other obsolete items and reduced its investment in its offshore-held division in the last two quarters.

In the last two years, as a result of new management, the company has experienced a complete turnaround and a total restructuring of its operations. ''Obviously it is most gratifying to have effected this turnaround in such a short time period,'' said Sam D. Schwartz, president.

''Today Incomnet is poised for rapid growth and consistent solid quarter-to-quarter comparisons. Incomnet's large tax loss carryforward, over $15 million, now becomes an asset. 1990 should see the company revenues double with growing profitability.''

DALLAS (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Joe D. Kinlaw, president of Kinlaw Petroleum Companies of Dallas, announced the successful drilling of one of its first horizontal wells, Thursday near Dilley, Frio County, Texas.

''The Huck/Bond No. 1 is flowing at 106 barrels per hour out of a 23/64" choke,'' Kinlaw said. ''That's more than $50,000 a day in revenue.''

Drilling took place near the site of an old, abandoned vertical well and is near Oryx Energy Co.'s well that is currently one of the state's biggest, producing more than 200,000 barrels of oil in its first 18 months.

Horizontal drilling involves drilling a well vertically and then gradually angling it sideways up to 90 degrees.

Kinlaw said oil was found after drilling 6,700 feet vertically and then out 1,600 feet horizontally.

Kinlaw, 36, has successfully found oil more than 200 times since starting his Dallas based companies in 1981. He has a success rate of 80 percent.

''Huck/Bond No. 1 is one of the first of a number of horizontal projects we plan during 1990,'' Kinlaw said.

RICHMOND, CA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Tinsley Laboratories Thursday reported that the company's sales reached a record $10,293,845 in 1989, while net income rose to a new high of $741,921, or $1.25 a share.

Sales volume was 30 percent above 1988 sales of $7,911,448. Earnings were up 21 percent over net income the previous year of $615,412, or $1.03 a share.

The company's pre-tax income for the year came to $1,263,921, compared to 1988 earnings before taxes of $945,412.

Sales for the fourth quarter of $2,655,906 were 33 percent ahead of sales of $1,990,501 posted for the 1988 December quarter. Fourth quarter net income of $169,981, however, fell below the company's $287,627 in earnings reported for the comparable period in 1988.

Tinsley said fourth quarter net income was adversely affected by expenses incurred in an unsuccessful effort last fall to acquire the West Coast Applied Optics Operations, of Perkin-Elmer Corp. The company also experienced higher than anticipated equipment costs on a major contract.

The company said that work performed on contracts with the Rome Development Center of the U.S. Air Force and with the California Institute of Technology on the new W. M. Keck Observatory in Hawaii accounted for 34 percent of 1989 sales volume.

Under Tinsley's $5 million contract with the Rome Air Development Center, the company is developing a process for the rapid surfacing of large aspheric surveillance mirrors with aerospace applications.

For the Keck 10-meter telescope, whose reflecting surface will be a unique mosaic of 36 hexagonal aspheric mirrors, the company has produced the fabrication equipment required to make the 21 aspheric mirrors representing Tinsley's share of the project and has begun work on the mirrors themselves.

Tinsley's backlog at the close of 1989 was $9 million, compared to the company's backlog of $12,218,000 at the end of the previous year. The reduction represents sales recorded under the Rome and Keck contracts.

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Gensia Pharmaceuticals Thursday announced the start of Phase 2 clinical trials with ARA-100, a proprietary purine compound designed for the treatment of certain cardiovascular diseases.

An initial Phase 2 clinical trial in the United Kingdom will evaluate the efficacy of ARA-100 in treating patients with ischemic heart disease, said David F. Hale, president and chief executive officer.

''In a number of preclinical trials, ARA-100 has demonstrated a significant cardioprotective effect with a unique mechanism of action which appears to be site- and event-specific,'' Hale said. ''In those trials, ARA-100 has been shown to reduce cardiac tissue damage resulting from myocardial ischemia (lack of blood flow).''

ARA-100 is an intravenous drug that will be studied for use in the hospital for the treatment of acute cardiovascular disorders such as ischemic injury during coronary artery bypass surgery, PTCA (angioplasty), myocardial infarction (heart attack) and in the treatment of acute unstable angina (heart pain).

''Phase 1 clinical trials with ARA-100 conducted last year and in late 1988 in the United Kingdom have indicated that the drug appeared to be safe and well tolerated in healthy subjects,'' Hale said.

Additional Phase 2 studies with ARA-100 are planned at clinical investigation sites in the United Kingdom and in other European countries. In addition, United States clinical studies have commenced under an IND filed with the Food and Drug Administration. Phase 2 studies with ARA-100 in the United States in patients with cardiovascular disease will begin in the second quarter of this year.

Gensia recently signed a strategic partnership agreement with Marion Merrell Dow Inc. (MMDI) that provides funding for research and clinical development of Gensia's purine/pyrimidine compounds for cardiovascular and cerebrovascular diseases. ARA-100 is the lead compound in a class of purine compounds designated adenosine regulating agents (ARAs), which are targeted at the treatment of cardiovascular and cerebrovascular diseases.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - PacTel Corp. Thursday announced that the Cable Authority of Thailand has awarded a national paging license to PerCom Service Ltd., a company in which PacTel Corp.'s subsidiary, Pacific Telesis International (PTI), holds a 49 percent equity interest.

This award is the third national wireless communications license obtained by PTI. In December 1989, it won a national digital cellular license in West Germany and was offered a national personal communications network license in the United Kingdom. These licenses are held by consortia in which PTI participates.

PTI, under the name PacLink, has provided digital paging service in Bangkok since 1986. Its Bangkok license, however, is capped at 60,000 subscribers. The new 15-year non-exclusive national license gives the company the opportunity to expand its paging service to Thailand's 55 million residents.

Lee Cox, president of PacTel Corp., described the new license as ''the go-ahead to replicate on a national scale the kind of service we're already providing in Bangkok. The Thai government is committed to improving public communications and we're excited to have the chance to help build their national paging infrastructure.''

PTI's partners in PerCom Service Ltd. are two Thai firms, Tong Saam Ltd. and York Sri Inc. The new paging system is expected to be operational by spring 1991. It will employ state-of-the-art technology offering both nemeric and alpha/numeric paging.

PTI's Bangkok experience has shown paging to be a popular alternative to landline telephone service. Fewer than one out of ten Bangkok residents have personal telephones. Pagers offer an economical way for Thais to conduct business as well as keep in touch with friends.

PTI and PacTel Corp. are subsidiaries of Pacific Telesis Group, a diversified telecommunications company based in San Francisco.

BROOMFIELD, CO (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Somatogen Inc., a development-stage company engaged in the research and development of recombinant hemoglobin, Thursday announced the completion of a $15.7 million private placement of Series B preferred stock.

Charles Scoggin, chief executive officer of Somatogen, said: ''This financing will give us the capital required to continue preclinical and clinical development of our recombinant hemoglobin-based blood substitute products, along with providing additional capital for manufacturing, plant and equipment.''

Somatogen's lead recombinant hemoglobin compound is on schedule to enter human clinical trials by early 1991.

Dr. Peter Drake, executive vice president of Vector Securities International Inc., indicated that this was an ''exceptional level of funding in today's cautious biotechnology financing environment, and demonstrates a very high level of interest in Somatogen's novel, genetic engineering approach to create a human blood substitute.''

Vector Securities acted as Somatogen's financial advisor in the private placement of these securities.

Somatogen also announced this week that their initial U.S. patent on recombinant hemoglobin, filed in May 1988, has been allowed. Dr. Stephen J. Hoffman, Somatogen vice president of science and technology, indicated that this patent establishes a broad proprietary position for Somatogen in the area of recombinant hemoglobin-based blood substitute products.

DENVER (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Tele-Communications Inc. (TCI) announced Thursday that it is continuing to develop its previously announced plan to distribute certain of its assets to shareholders.

It is considering the use of a rights offering to accomplish this distribution. In such an offering, TCI would contribute these assets to a new company and allow TCI shareholders to exchange a portion of their TCI shares for shares of the new company. It is anticipated that the transaction would be tax-free to TCI and its shareholders.

John Malone, TCI's chief executive officer, commented, ''Virtually all of TCI's minority owned cable investments and essentially all of its programming interests, excluding its investment in Turner Broadcasting Systems Inc., will probably be included in this new company.

''Our primary focus here is to provide another growth vehicle for our shareholders and allow investors to more readily value these assets. In our opinion, this structure is responsive to various congressional/regulatory concerns regarding size and cross ownership issues. Merrill Lynch Capital Markets is advising us with respect to this transaction and it is our desire to complete the offering this year.''

Tele-Communications Inc. is traded over-the-counter with Class A common stock and Class B common stock trading separately under symbols of TCOMA

HOUSTON (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Battle Mountain Gold Co. (BMG) Thursday announced that it has exercised its option to increase its interest from 33.33 percent to 51 percent in Empresa Minera Inti Raymi S.A., a Bolivian gold mining company.

BMG Chairman Douglas J. Bourne said the company will pay $15.75 million and 150,000 shares of its common stock to purchase an additional 17.7 percent of Inti Raymi's outstanding common stock. Closing is expected within 60 days. Following the closing, BMG will have invested a total of $38.75 million and 550,000 common shares in the Bolivian project.

Inti Raymi is currently mining gold from a shallow oxide cap at its Kori Kollo mine near the city of Oruro at an annual rate of approximately 40,000 ounces.

Inti Raymi has been conducting an aggressive drilling program at Kori Kollo since mid 1989 to test for deeper sulfide gold mineralization beneath the oxide cap. Initial indications are that the Kori Kollo sulfide mineralization will be in the range of 25 to 35 million tons, having a gold grade between .070 and .075 ounces per ton.

Work is in progress to further define the extent of the mineralization. Additional drilling toward developing a mine plan must be completed before reserves can be calculated.

Bourne noted that the company expects to complete its evaluation work and make a development decision by late summer or early fall of this year. Should BMG elect to go forward with the project, plant construction would be expected to begin in 1991, with initial production targeted for 1993.

Battle Mountain Gold common stock trades on the New York Stock Exchange, the Australian Stock Exchange Ltd., the Frankfurt Stock Exchange, the Swiss Stock Exchanges and the Toronto Stock Exchange under the symbol BMG.

FREEHOLD, NJ (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Talcon, L.P. (NASDAQ:TLCNZ), a publicly traded limited partnership engaged in real estate development through its participation in unconsolidated project joint ventures and limited partnerships, reported a net loss of $1,067,400 for the three months ended February 28, 1990 compared to a net loss of $269,400 for the first quarter of 1989.

The Partnership recorded a loss from equity in operations of joint ventures in which it participates of $531,400 in the first quarter of 1990 compared to a gain of $107,300 in the same period in 1989. The decrease in earnings in the first quarter of 1990 is primarily due to the timing and nature of new project openings and the softening markets in which several of the Partnership's operating limited partnerships are located, including those operating in the California and the northern Virginia real estate markets.

The net loss for the first quarter of 1990 was allocable to the Partnership's Class B Limited Partnership Unitholders ($.18 per unit) after allocation of 1 percent to each of the General Partner and the Class A Limited Partner. No losses were allocable in the first quarter 1989 to the Partnership's Class B Limited Partnership Unitholders since they did not have any capital balance until the February 28, 1989 sale of Class B units in exchange for a reduction of Redeemable Class A Limited Partnership Interests.

FREEHOLD, NJ (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Calton Inc. (NYSE:CN) a New Jersey-based housing developer, reported a net loss of $321,000 (1 cent per share), on revenues of $38,873,000 for the first quarter ended Feb. 28 1990, compared to a net loss of $2,658,000 (8 cents per share), on $13,586,000 of revenues for the first quarter ended Feb. 28, 1989.

Earnings (loss) per share are based upon the weighted average shares outstanding of 33,640,000 and 33,844,000 for the first quarter ended Feb. 28, 1990 and Feb. 28, 1989, respectively.

The first quarter 1990 results improved from the levels attained in the prior year due to increased housing units delivered, the sale of land and a gain on the repurchase of senior subordinated notes, partially offset by increased interest expense resulting from higher average loan balances outstanding.

Calton Homes and its subsidiaries delivered 222 and 109 housing units in the first quarter of 1990 and 1989, respectively. The increase in the number of houses delivered is principally a result of the timing of project openings in New Jersey and the establishment of a wholly owned subsidiary in Sacramento, Calif. in the second quarter of 1989.

The improved results in the first quarter of 1990 were attained even though it is perceived that there is a continuing softening in the northeastern markets served by the company. Revenues for the first quarter 1990 include $8.5 million from the sale of land that contributed a gross margin of approximately $2 million. There were no land sales in the first quarter of 1989.

The company repurchased $5 million principal amount of senior subordinated notes in the first quarter of 1990 resulting in a gain of approximately $1 million. The results also include a loss resulting from the equity in operations of joint ventures, principally from Talcon, L.P., a publicly traded limited partnership. Talcon participates in real estate partnerships in several states, primarily California and northern Virginia. The loss from the equity in operations of the joint ventures amounted to approximately $400,000 in both years.

Sales backlog at Feb. 28, 1990, was approximately $80.1 million representing 562 units compared to $42 million representing 299 units at Feb. 28, 1989. The increase in both the number of units and dollars of sales backlog in 1990 compared to the prior year is due principally to the number and timing of new project openings in New Jersey and the establishment of the company's subsidiary in Sacramento in the second quarter of 1989.

In addition the company believes that the increase in the backlog partially relates to offering more lower-priced single-family detached homes and attached townhomes in New Jersey, making its homes affordable to more buyers.

MILWAUKEE, WI (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Johnson Controls said Wednesday that during its second quarter ended March 30, 1990, it will incur unanticipated costs of approximately $8 million stemming from the insolvency of a casualty insurance carrier.

This, together with reduced automotive earnings because of sharply lower domestic vehicle production, is expected to cause operating income for the current quarter to be down approximately one-third from the $46.1 million earned in the 1989 period. Johnson Controls explained that higher interest and miscellaneous expenses would further lower the net income comparison for the quarter.

The sharply lower forecast for the current quarter would leave the company's net income for the first half nearly 30% below last year. James H. Keyes, president and chief executive officer, said he has confidence in attaining favorable comparisons in the company's second half and that based on the current business outlook, the company's net income for the full year should exceed the $98 million reported for 1989.

Under the agreement, Hoya will distribute Laserscope's laser systems in Japan and will make payments to Laserscope over the next year to assist in Japanese market development. Laserscope also announced the receipt of an initial order from Hoya. The value of this order together with the market development funding will exceed $1 million in the first year of the agreement.

Announcing the signing of the agreement, Herbert Taus, Laserscope chief executive officer said: ''Hoya is an outstanding company with products complimentary to ours. We are delighted to have established this partnership and expect this to be a very positive, long-term relationship for both of our companies.''

Under the agreement, Hoya will purchase specified minimum quantities of Laserscope products over an extended period, commencing with the granting of the required clearances for marketing by Japanese regulatory agencies. To facilitate obtaining these clearances, Hoya has placed an order for Laserscope systems for initial clinical use.

Laserscope will also provide support to Hoya in the initial marketing of the KTP laser in Japan. In return, Hoya will make certain payments to Laserscope over the first year of the agreement.

Hoya manufactures a diversified line of advanced glass products. Hoya's operations are currently being focused around three major areas of Optics and Electronics (electronics, optical and optronics), Health and Culture (medical equipment, eye care products and crystal operations) and Information and Service, which covers the operations of Hoya's service sector subsidiaries.

ALAMEDA, CA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Mission Resource Partners L.P. (ASE:MRP) Thursday said the value (using SEC guidelines) of its proved oil and gas reserves had increased by 73 percent from a year ago to $103.1 million and quantities had increased by some 25 percent to more than 24.3 million equivalent barrels, due to improved prices and the continuing development of its properties at California's South Belridge Field.

The year-end figures include $5.8 million and 1.2 million BOE for properties in the process of being sold.

In addition, Mission Resources Inc., MRP's managing general partner said that as part of its effort to maximize unitholder value it is implementing a restructuring program to streamline the company and substantially reduce the overhead incurred by MRP.

''As part of this downsizing program, we will be reducing the company's staff to five employees over the next two months and relocating to smaller offices in Walnut Creek,'' said Douglas K. Brown, president of Mission Resources.

Brown said Mission is closing its Bakersfield office and has contracted out its technical and operating activities to a new firm headed by Robert Shore and Steven Fisher, former Mission officers who have managed Mission's operations in Bakersfield since the mid-1980s.

''Our new reserve figures,'' Brown said, ''represent a 55 percent increase in the important category of proved producing reserve quantities, as well as the impact of an improved pricing environment, the success of our waterflood program and the development of the Mission Patrino Fee property.

"During 1989, we expended some $14.5 million in development activities to fund a significant expansion of the waterflood program and drill 60 new oil wells."

He said the effort with The First Boston Corp. to seek a merger or sale of all of MRP's assets announced in July will continue. ''However,'' he added ''we have not had any acceptable bids for a merger or sale of the assets. Consequently we plan to continue running the partnership as a viable oil and gas company, focusing on our strategic properties in California and selling those outside of California, while we continue to hold discussions with prospective buyers or merger candidates.

Brown said that MRP's 1989 financial results will be announced on March 30.

After completing the property sales announced in December, MRP will have interests in approximately 450 oil and gas wells.

PALO ALTO, CA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Lincoln N.C. Realty Fund Inc. (''LNCRF'') (AMEX and PSE) announced Thursday that the letter of agreement with Silverstone Partners relating to the possible offer by Silverstone Partners to purchase up to all of the issued and outstanding shares of common stock and warrants of LNCRF at a purchase price of $9.54 per share and $.03125 per warrant has automatically terminated by its terms because LNCRF's investment banker, Sutro & Co., was unable to confirm the fairness of the transaction from a financial point of view.

The board of directors is currently considering alternative courses of action for LNCRF in light of the termination of this letter of agreement.

LNCRF also announced today that, as previously publicly anticipated, it has reached a Deed in Lieu of Foreclosure agreement with the borrower on the Lincoln Wrigley Creek investment.

This investment consists of a participating land purchase-leaseback and a non-recourse leasehold mortgage loan of $9,036,509. Pursuant to the Deed in Lieu of Foreclosure agreement, which is scheduled to be consummated on March 30, the existing ground lease on the Lincoln Wrigley Creek property will be cancelled and LNCRF will take possession of the Lincoln Wrigley Creek property, in satisfaction of all debt and rent obligations owing to LNCRF by the borrower.

As a result of this transaction, LNCRF will receive approximately $41,000 less income per month from its investment than it presently receives, based on information currently available to LNCRF, the effect of which will reduce income available to be paid as dividends by approximately 25 cents per share on an annual basis.

LNCRF lowered its dividend in the fourth quarter of 1989 in anticipation of this transaction.

LNCRF also announced today that the borrowers and guarantors of the $19,250,000 Lincoln Rancho Bernardo mortgage loans advised LNCRF that they intend to repudiate their obligations under these loans.

The guarantee covers payment of debt service and expires by its terms on June 5, 1991. Should the borrower and guarantors actually default on their obligations, LNCRF would seek to exercise all appropriate rights and remedies to which it may be entitled at law or in equity, including possibly instituting foreclosure proceedings.

LNCRF is a real estate investment trust. LNCRF's securities are listed on the American Stock Exchange and the Pacific Stock Exchange.

BELMONT, CA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Oracle Corporation (NASDAQ:ORCL), the world's largest database management software and services company, Thursday announced ORACLE for Macintosh Version 1.2 with a new graphical query and reporting tool, enhanced IBM connectivity, and support for Apple's MacTCP.

ORACLE for Macintosh 1.2 is Oracle's SQL database and connectivity development environment for the Macintosh. It allows the Macintosh to participate as a client in the ORACLE open client/multi-server architecture. It supports a number of popular Macintosh development and end-user tools, as well as connectivity to ORACLE Servers, IBM's DB2 and SQL/DS, and Digital's RMS. ORACLE for Macintosh is also supported by a number of independent software vendors such as Blyth Software, Fairfield Software and Neuron Data. NEW QUERY TOOL OFFERS EASY ACCESS TO SQL DATABASES

The new Query Tool is built with Hyper SQL, Oracle's application program interface (API), for use with HyperCard and HyperCard-compatible products. The Query Tool compliments enhanced versions of Oracle's HyperCard-based Application Generator and System Stack which are also included in Version 1.2 of ORACLE for Macintosh. The combination of these three tools give users full access to SQL databases directly from HyperCard with little or no knowledge of the SQL language.

ORACLE for Macintosh's Hyper SQL allows the developer to embed SQL in Apple Computer's HyperCard, Silicon Beach's SuperCard, and Spinnaker's PLUS. It is complimented by Pro C, a programmatic interface for Macintosh C compilers. ORACLE for 4th Dimension provides an interface to ACIUS's 4th DIMENSION and is available separately. ENHANCED IBM CONNECTIVITY, SUPPORT FOR MACTCP

ORACLE for Macintosh 1.2 also includes SQL Net support for the Tri-Data Netway AppleTalk/SNA gateways. SQL Net is Oracle's network software which allows Macintoshes to participate in the Oracle client/multi-server architecture. Netway compliments ORACLE for Macintosh's existing support for IBM SNA networks through the MacIRMA 3270 emulation hardware from Digital Communications Associates (DCA).

The Networkstation Version includes all the components of the Database Version except the ORACLE Database. It is priced at $299.

SQL Net for Macintosh includes SQL Net, and protocol support for Apple Computer MacTCP, Novell TCPort, Tri-Data Netway 2000 3270, DCA MacIRMA 3270 and ALISA TSSNet. Also included are network drivers for Novell TCPort, ALISA TSSNet and Tri-data Netway. It is priced at $299.

REDMOND, WA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - ProCyte Corp. (NASDAQ:PRCY) announced Thursday that recent research studies conducted with its iamin healing compound, currently in clinical trials for topical human wound healing of diabetic and stasis ulcers, demonstrate that the compound induces systemic healing in laboratory research models.

In a paper entitled, ''A Tripeptide-Copper Complex Antagonism of Cortisone Inhibition to Wound Healing in Rats'' presented at the American Burn Association annual conference in Las Vegas, Dr. H. Paul Ehrlich and Sean Kelly of the Shriners Burn Institute and Harvard University announced this week that the iamin compound restored wound healing to normal in immunosuppressed research models. Their results demonstrate that the compound may be administered intravenously or by intramuscular injection.

Dr. Loren Pickart, ProCyte's chairman and scientific director and the initial discoverer of the iamin compound activity, said that ProCyte had worked on similar models in tandem with Ehrlich.

''The systemic method of healing with iamin opens the door to development of methods to accelerate internal healing following surgery and for treatment of traumatic injuries where the immune system may be suppressed '' said Pickart. The study conducted by Ehrlich and Kelly indicates that the iamin compound may be of additional value in improving wound healing in immune suppressed AIDS patients or those undergoing chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

ProCyte's iamin compound is a synthetically produced tripeptide copper complex that is found naturally in human saliva and blood. The compound appears to trigger repair and regenerative processes in the body. Other growth factors under development for wound healing are for topical application to superficial wounds only. There are in excess of 30 million internal surgical procedures performed in the United States yearly, and the company feels systemic healing with its compound could address this market.

ProCyte is developing proprietary pharmaceutical drugs to enhance healing and reverse human aging at the cellular level. Professor Ehrlich is a scientific advisor to the company.

He also stated that 1989 was the seventh consecutive year of increased sales. Additional growth is expected in 1990.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - MasterCard International Thursday announced the successful completion of a pilot program involving the deployment of Digital Radio Network's (DRN) radio service for credit card acceptance.

The success of the test, conducted by MAPP (MasterCard Automated Point-of-Sale Program) at Herman's Sporting Goods Stores in California and Virginia, means that MasterCard will soon be able to offer DRN's transaction communication service to a wide variety of merchants.

DRN's system consists of a small radio transmitter/receiver that replaces local telephone wires at the merchant's location. Credit card authorization and check guarantee requests are transmitted via radio wave from the merchant's checkout area to DRN's own telecommunications network. DRN's network delivers the transaction via a link into Banknet, MasterCard's private packing-switching network. The merchant usually receives the response within five seconds.

According to Heidi R. Goff, senior vice president for MAPP, this new local telephone alternative will open new markets and applications. Restaurants, hotels, theme parks and grocery stores will now be able to authorize credit with the same speed as dedicated telecommunications at a fraction of the cost.

''Speed is a distinct advantage with DRN,'' said Goff. ''The service replaces the time it takes to dial and connect with the local telephone company. The result is faster authorizations, convenience to the consumer and lower cost per transaction for the credit card accepting merchant. For each transaction, DRN's radio link replaces the cost of a local telephone call.''

Headquartered in Vienna, Va., DRN today provides radio-based communication in 60 major metropolitan areas with plans to expand up to 20 additional markets in 1990. DRN is currently the only provider of a shared radio-based network designed specifically for the transaction processing market.

DOVER, NH (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Great Bay Bankshares Inc. (NASDAQ:GBBS), announced Thursday that it would substantially increase its loan loss provision in the third quarter as a result of increases in the amount of its principal subsidiary's non-performing assets during the three months ended March 31, 1990.

Non-performing assets, including restructured loans and real estate owned, are anticipated to approximate $5-6 million or up to 2 percent of total assets at March 31, 1990, as compared to $3.7 million, or 1.2 percent of total assets at Dec. 31, 1989.

In light of this increase and approximately $8.5 million of additional loans which, while currently performing in accordance with their terms, are being closely monitored by management for potential problems, the company intends to add approximately $1.5 million to its allowance for loan losses during the three months ended March 31, 1990.

This provision, net of $250,000 of charge offs during the quarter, will increase the total allowance to approximately $3.3 million and result in the company reporting a loss of approximately $800,000 for the three months ended March 31, 1990. This loss will reduce the company's net income for the nine months ended March 31, 1990, to approximately $1.3 million.

This information is preliminary and is subject to change as the company receives additional information prior to the time that it formally announces its results for the three and nine months ended March 31, 1990, which is expected to occur during the week commencing April 16, 1990.

Donald R. Hatt, president and chief executive officer, stated that, ''a lackluster real estate market and overall softness in the local and regional economy, coupled with increases in unemployment have impacted our total delinquency rate during the current quarter. Although some of the rise in delinquencies may be attributable to seasonal factors, it is our view that the principal reasons for the increase are related to the market and economic conditions which have been characteristic of New England in general and New Hampshire in particular in recent periods.''

CINCINNATI (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Consolidated net sales of The United States Shoe Corp. for the fiscal year ended Feb. 3, 1990 totaled $2,557,158,000, compared to $2,343,045,000 in 1988, an increase of 9 percent.

Net earnings were $49,187,000, an increase of $36,222,000 over earnings of $12,965,000 in 1988. Earnings per share amounted to $1.10 compared to 29 cents last year.

Fiscal 1988 results included one-time charges of 26 cents per share, due to the effect of non-recurring items.

Fiscal 1989 quarterly results for the first nine months ended Oct. 28, 1989 have been restated due to a charge of $7.4 million (16 cents per share) to previously reported earnings to reflect certain accounting adjustments at the Marx & Newman division. The restated earnings through the first nine months are summarized by fiscal quarter in a table following this release. The adjustments resulted from an ongoing investigation by U.S. Shoe management in conjunction with its independent accountants, Arthur Andersen & Co., into certain accounting irregularities at the division that were identified during the company's annual audit. The employment of Marx & Newman's chief financial officer has been terminated and, until a replacement is found, two senior members of the company's corporate financial group will assume financial management of the division. Divisional Performance Review Footwear Group

The Footwear Group's sales increased to $791.0 million from $777.4 million or 2 percent, but operating earnings declined 37 percent to $30.0 million compared to $47.4 million in 1988. The group benefited substantially from earnings generated by the strong demand for the Easy Spirit brand of dress and performance walking shoes, and earnings gains registered by Texas Boot and the Banister Factory Outlet Stores. However, the increased earnings from these divisions were offset by the losses at Marx & Newman, which accounted for a major portion of the Footwear Group's earnings decline. The losses resulted from efforts to maintain retail shelf space during a period of intense competition that resulted from department store consolidation. Marx & Newman protected its market position with high levels of promotional effort, and by offering retailers an enlarged stock program that did not fully reflect additional inventory carrying costs, both of which reduced gross profit margins.

FREMONT, CA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Northern Californians responded to the challenge to reduce the nation's solid waste problems, joining recyclers from all across the country in recycling a record 60.8 percent of the aluminum cans produced in 1989, according to industry figures.

The 60.8 percent recycling rate is a significant gain over national aluminum can recycling totals of 50.5 percent in 1987 and 54.6 percent in 1988. The recycling rate totals were reported by the Washington-based Aluminum Association.

Last year, Northern California consumers recycled the equivalent of 452.4 million aluminum beverage containers with Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Co. According to Darryl L. Dabel, the company's area business manager, these recyclers received $7 million for their efforts. Statewide, Dabel says Reynolds received the equivalent of 871 million aluminum beverage containers from the recycling public and paid them $13.4 million.

According to the Division of Recycling of the California Department of Conservation almost three-quarters of the beverage containers sold in the state are aluminum. During the first half of 1989 aluminum containers scored a 73 percent recycling rate, but dropped to 58 percent during the last half of the year.

The drop is attributed to recyclers hording cans in anticipation of a higher redemption value for them, effective Jan. 1.

''As a company concerned with environmental protection and solid waste reduction, Reynolds is proud to have played an important role in making recycling available to the public,'' Dabel said.

''But, more important, we salute Northern Californians who have discovered aluminum recycling as a means by which they can individually contribute to easing our rapidly growing landfill problems, as well as helping to save energy and conserve natural resources.''

In Northern California Reynolds operates 36 recycling centers that purchase aluminum beverage cans and many other household aluminum products for recycling.

As 1990 begins, Reynolds is well into its third decade as the consumer recycling leader in the aluminum industry. In 1968 Reynolds Metals Co. opened the first consumer aluminum recycling center in the United States, in Los Angeles.

Now Reynolds offers recycling to the public nationwide through a network of more than 725 individual company-operated buying locations. The company also provides a market for metal recycled through 2,500 independent recyclers and scrap dealers who also purchase recyclable metal from the public.

Last year, Reynolds recycled a record total of 450 million pounds of consumer-generated aluminum including 9.7 billion all-aluminum beverage cans and paid out more than $180 million to consumers. Over the past 10 years, Reynolds has recycled more than 100 percent of the beverage cans the company makes.

OAKLAND, CA (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Southwest Airlines wants to prove a point when it inaugurates its Burbank flights here April 16: That California business people have been paying way too much for way too long for travel.

So, the low-fare, high-frequency airline plans to pay ''cash back'' to Burbank-bound full-fare travelers, between April 16 and May 6. ''We're doing this to dramatize the fact that it's entirely possible to provide high-frequency, top-quality air service in the California markets without charging sky-high unrestricted fares,'' said Herbert D. Kelleher, Southwest's chairman of the board, president, and chief executive officer.

Here's how Southwest's ''cash back'' plan will work: Customers flying from Oakland to Burbank may purchase a one-way ticket for $186--the same unrestricted ''walk-up'' coach fare charged by the other airlines in the market--and turn that ticket in for $127 in cash at the gate. The $127 is the difference between other airlines' $186 regular coach fare and Southwest Airlines' unrestricted and unlimited $59 ''Anytime Fare'' to Burbank.

Southwest's 21-day advance-purchase ''Fun Fare'' is priced even lower, at $24 one-way to Burbank, and the airline will also offer one-day and seven-day advance-purchase roundtrip fares. Even though the ''cash back'' offer ends May 6, Southwest's highest one-way coach ''Anytime Fare'' will remain at $49 to Burbank. Southwest will fly six roundtrips daily between Las Vegas and Burbank with conveniently timed departures throughout the day tailored to the needs of the business traveler.

Dallas-based Southwest, long a favorite among price- and service-conscious passengers throughout its 30-city, 14-state route system, has received top marks from the Department of Transportation (DOT) for its outstanding on-time performance, customer service, and baggage-handling reliability. Termed a major airline by the DOT, Southwest is the eighth-largest independent carrier in the United States, in terms of Customers boarded.

Southwest Airlines has the newest fleet of commercial pure jet aircraft in the industry (average age: 5.7 years). Its fleet of 94 Boeing 737 airplanes has recently been joined by two 737-500s, the world's most modern commercial aircraft.

These state-of-the-art planes are among the quietest and most fuel efficient made, and Southwest has firm orders for 28 more, with options for 30 over the next several years. Southwest is the first airline to operate the new 737-500s.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Noise Cancellation Technologies Inc. (NCT), a world leader in active noise and vibration abatement (NASDAQ: NCTI), Thursday announced three major government contracts.

Extending two existing contracts, NCT will continue to demonstrate the strategic importance of the active (electronic) cancellation integated into helicopters.

Additionally, NCT will continue to work on the Navy's advanced submarine technology program through DARPA.

Further, NCT is a subcontractor for the integration of the active muffler into an installed base of military field generators. The current contract may lead to extended agreements covering the entire installed base of field generators which exceeds 100,000 units.

NCT's electronic muffler reduces noise electronically with patented computer technology: conventional mufflers use baffles, resonators and sound absorbing materials. The electronic muffler analyzes the structure of the noise, predicts its waveform and then generates ''anti-noise,'' a sound wave exactly 180 degrees out of phase with the offending source.

The original noise and the mirror image anti-noise, projected via transducers located on either side of the muffler, effectively cancel the noises. Moreover, the integration of the electronic muffler into gas and diesel engines enhances performance, power and fuel economy.

''Noise and vibration in military vehicles and generators are severe problems faced by the military today; canceling this noise and vibration can save lives,'' explained Michael Parrella, president of NCT. ''From a strategic viewpoint, eliminating noise can be a crucial factor in successfully maintaining the element of surprise, and for concealing military installations which are commonly targeted by their noise.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Noise Cancellation Technologies Inc. (NCT)(NASDAQ:NCTI), a world leader in active (electronic) noise and vibration abatement, achieved record annual revenues of $1.6 million, which is 2.5 times 1988 results.

The majority of the revenue occurred in the fourth quarter primarily as a result of the joint venture with Walker Manufacturing. In addition, NCT has completed a $5 million dollar round of private financing. NCT trades in the NASDAQ market under the symbol NCTI.

As an indication of the company's success in penetrating significant markets, NCT recently formed a joint venture with Walker Manufacturing, a subsidiary of Tenneco Automotive, and a world leader in automotive exhaust systems. The muffler market is estimated at a potential $16 billion dollars in 1990.

The joint venture is developing and marketing the world's first electronic muffler for the automotive market, including light trucks. NCT retains worldwide rights to non-automotive markets, all other trucks, construction farm equipment, industrial, marine craft and defense-related vehicles.

The joint venture, an equally owned partnership between Walker Manufacturing, a subsidiary of Tenneco Automotive, and NCT, is called Walker Noise Cancellation Technologies and is headquartered in Walker's Grass Lake, Mich., facility. The joint venture partnership will purchase microprocessor-based electronics from NCT. Walker will manufacture the muffler unit and integrate the electronics.

In addition to the active muffler, NCT, through its subsidiary NCT Medical Systems Inc. (NCTM), is currently shipping the first active noise attenuating system for Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) diagnostic scanners to hospitals, clinics and practices nationwide.

The noise of an MRI is similar to a jackhammer (85-105 dB) and a patient undergoing a scan must often endure that noise level for an hour or more. NCT Medical Systems has comfortably processed thousands of patients.

Further, NCT recently met the criteria for trading shares of common stock in the NASDAQ market (NCTI).

''Trading publicly on NASDAQ gives investors of all sizes the opportunity to readily access an environmentally friendly, high tech growth stock, such as NCT,'' said John McCloy, chairman of NCT.

''I strongly believe that our decision to trade in the NASDAQ market is a strategic and important event for NCT because it informs the market that we have arrived as a sound commercial enterprise, and as such, we are pleased to be able to benefit NCT's investors.''

YONKERS, NY (MARCH 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Codenoll Technology Corp. (NASDAQ: CODN) Thursday announced sales and operating results for both the fourth quarter and full year 1989, as well as a significant increase in new orders for the first 12 weeks of 1990.

Net sales for 1989 were $8,475,000, up 9 percent over net sales of $7,806,000 for 1988. Net sales for the fourth quarter of 1989 were $2,188,000, an increase of 14 percent from net sales of $1,922,000 for the comparable quarter in 1988.

For 1989 Codenoll reported a net loss of $2,463,000, or 54 cents per share compared with a net loss of $1,695,000, or 38 cents per share in 1988.

For the fourth quarter of 1989, Codenoll reported a net loss of $727,000, or 16 cents per share, compared with a net loss of $523,000, or 11 cents per share in 1988.

Two major factors contributed to the increased loss; gross margin as a percent of sales was down due to start up costs of several new products; marketing expenses were up substantially as described below.

During 1989, particularly in the last half, Codenoll made substantially marketing investments in the development and introductory marketing of major new product lines, and the signing of significant agreements with companies such as Bosch, Contel, Compaq, Groupe Bull, Eurolan, SCO, Western Digital and others.

Though the development and marketing expenses offset the 1989 sales increase, the investment has produced a record rate of orders during the first quarter of 1990, which normally has the lowest rate of any quarter. It is anticipated that 1990 and beyond will continue to yield a high rate of return on the 1989 marketing investments.

Gross margin for 1989 was $3,071,000, or 36 percent of sales, as compared with gross margin of $3,123,000, or 40 percent of sales in 1988. Operating expenses for 1989 were $5,678,000, up 12 percent over operating expenses of $5,082,000 for 1988.

Codenoll Technology Corp. is the leading supplier of fiber optic Ethernet computer network systems with thousands of installations worldwide. In 1989, the company announce two lines of FDDI (Fiber Distributed Data Interface) high speed computer network products that will ship in volume this year. Under the tradename CodeNet, the company's products are sold worlwide by companies including: Bosch, C&P Telephone, Contel, Digital, Eurolan, Groupe Bull, Southwestern Bell, 3Com and hundreds of others.

Codenoll's stock is publicly traded in the Over The Counter Market, NASDAQ Symbol CODN.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) - China appears to have resumed sales of missiles to the Middle East despite U.S. objections, The Washington Post reported Thursday.

Foreign witnesses saw two convoys of flatbed trucks on Saturday and Monday nights carrying about two dozen missiles through western Beijing toward Tianjin, a port 145 kilometers (90 miles) southeast of the Chinese capital, according to Western diplomats cited by the Post.

The diplomats believed the weapons were short-range missiles that were being taken to Tianjin for shipment to Iran, said the report, which was datelined Beijing.

The missiles were covered by tarpaulins, but their shape indicated that they were M-IB surface-to-surface missiles, which have a range of 80 to 96 kilometers (50 to 60 miles).

A diplomat said a surface-to-air missile launcher also was seen in one of the convoys, the report said.

The Bush administration has pressed the Beijing government to refrain for selling missiles to Middle Eastern countries on grounds that they destabilize the region.

"Maybe the Chinese feel that the relationship with the U.S. is so bad that they can take the risk of selling these missiles -- for the next two or three years," a West European diplomat was quoted as saying.

PAPEETE, FRENCH POLYNESIA (MARCH 29) - "I threw my mother into the flames and I cried 'Be gone Satan'. It's true I was laughing as I did so."

The stunning court testimony came from Tavita Tapi whose mother and five other villagers accused of being "possessed of the devil" were put to death in an orgy of religious fanaticism by inhabitants of the remote Polynesian atoll of Faaite in September 1987.

Tavita Tapi is among 24 villagers on trial in Papeete for the murders which occurred after three itinerant women "preachers" visited the island to urge the inhabitants in fiery sermons to "root out Satan from their midst" to save their atoll from disaster.

Tavita Tapi, who helped to put to death the six victims, including two women, has admitted all the charges against him.

"I thought I was doing something good," he told the Papeete assize court. "I was fond of my mother but when I threw her into the fire, I didn't think it was my mother..... Now I realise it was my mother but I still think she was possessed," he said. "My mother was possessed, her face was no longer human, it had changed."

Tavita Tapi, born in 1964, is the fifth of nine children. He barely got through primary school before going to work with his father as a bricklayer. After his national service, he worked as a seaman aboard a coaster plying between Tahiti and neighbouring islands.

Experts described him as basically sane but "immature and suggestible". They said he acted "under the psychological influence of the group."

The six murders took place on September 2 and 3 1987 only a few days after the three "priestesses" had left Faaite, an atoll of the Tuamotu group about 500 kilometers (300 miles) east of Tahiti.

The women, who came from Tahiti, claimed to belong to the Charismatic Revival movement, a group which originated in the United States and is recognised by the Roman Catholic Church. One of the women said she had a mandate from the archbishop of Tahiti although Catholic authorities have denied this saying the women "usurped" their claim to church backing.

There is no resident priest or gendarme on Faaite and the mayor was away in Tahiti at the time. But the man responsible for teaching the cathechism said he joined in the "exorcism" rites because he was afraid of the following of young fanatics indoctrinated by the three women.

Several of the six victims were burned alive while others are thought to have been strangled or suffocated during "purification" rites before being thrown into the flames.

Four other people were due to die the same way but were saved on September 4 by the return of the mayor who had been alerted by phone and was accompanied by police.

The three preachers have been called as "witnesses" in the trial. Although they are accused of bearing "moral" responsibility for the violence, they will not face criminal charges.

SUVA (MARCH 29) - Australia's Overseas Telecommunications Commission International (OTCI) signed here Thursday a deal to provide cheaper satellite services to the South Pacific using an Australian government grant.

The deal gives the Cook Islands, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Niue, Nauru and Tuvalu access to the Pacific Area Telecommunications (PACT) network.

Rod Masterton, manager network and carrier business, said OTCI hoped that smaller island states like Tonga and the Federated States of Micronesia would also join the network.

Mr. Masterton told island delegates here that PACT would be cheaper for island users because they would only pay for satellite time actually used.

Users previously had to pay for full-time satellite access.

Director of the South Pacific Forum Secretariat, Henry Naisali, said the project, backed by a 2.6 million dollar (1.94 million U.S.) grant, was a result of three years of research in the islands by OTCI.

"We have set in motion a way in which telecommunications will help us attain even closer and better co-operation," Mr. Naisali said.

"Now efficient and inexpensive communications within and between our countries will be possible."

OTCI said in a statement released in Sydney that PACT was a custom-designed Australian solution to the problems of linking the widely dispersed island nations with their neighbours, their own remote communities and the rest of the world.

BONN (MARCH 29) - West Germany spent a record 35.7 billion Deutsche marks (21 billion dollars) on environmental protection in 1988, the environment ministry said Thursday.

Some 18.5 billion Deutsche marks came from the government and the rest from the private sector.

The figure represented 1.7 per cent of gross national product, and West Germany was one of the leaders in environmental protection among the 24 Organisation of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) countries.

Environmental spending in West Germany had increased by 52 per cent since 1982, the ministry said.

SYDNEY (MARCH 29) - Canada's largest bank, the Royal Bank of Canada Ltd., is about to pull out of a joint banking venture in Australia after only five years, according to press reports here Thursday.

Officials of the jointly-owned National Mutual Royal Bank Ltd. (NMRB) refused to comment on the reports amid speculation that an announcement would be made Friday.

The ANZ Banking Group Ltd. was widely reported Thursday to be a buyer for NMRB.

Spokesman for the ANZ and NRMB's other joint owner, the National Mutual Life Association of Australasia Ltd., both said it was their policy not to comment on rumours.

But press reports maintained that National Mutual had already agreed to buy out the Canadian bank's 50 per cent stake, worth an estimated 325 million Australian dollars (242 million U.S.), and that the ANZ was prepared to absorb the entire NMRB operation.

The Royal Bank of Canada was one of 15 foreign banks given licences to operate in Australia in 1985 following deregulation by the Hawke government.

Bankers have predicted that some will withdraw from Australia because of sharp losses incurred last year.

The Royal Bank of Canada was reported to be reluctant to expand its investment in the Asia-Pacific region and to be focusing on the Canadian market.

HARARE (MARCH 29) - Zimbabwean whites, whose votes are for the first time worth the same as those of blacks, have largely ignored the presidential and parliamentary elections held Wednesday and Thursday, the official Ziana news agency reported.

Whites were ''noticeable by their absence'' in queues of voters in the upmarket northern suburbs of the capital, where most of them live, the agency said.

Most of the voters in those queues were domestic workers and gardeners, who still tend the large homes in the area 10 years after independence ended white minority rule in this former rebel British colony of Rhodesia.

Whites make up just over one percent of Zimbabwe's 9.5 million people, but held power here for 90 years after colonising the country in 1890.

In elections which brought indepence in 1980 after a bloody seven year guerrilla war, and in the first post-independence election in 1985, whites voted on a separate roll and were guaranteed 20 percent of the seats in parliament.

PARIS (MARCH 29) - French consumer prices rose 0.2 percent in February over the previous month, down from a 0.3 percent rise in January, the national statistics institute said Thursday.

On a year on year basis, consumer prices were up 3.4 percent, the same level as in January and down from the 3.6 percent for the whole of 1989.

Food prices were up 0.3 percent in February and manufactured products up 0.1 percent but energy prices were down 0.4 percent, after rising for five months in a row, largely due to a fall in oil prices.

The economy ministry stressed that the February figures gave France the lowest price increases over the past six months of any major industrialised country apart from Japan.

They also confirmed "the trend towards a fall in inflation in this country " the ministry said.

TOKYO (MARCH 29) - The Finance Ministry has issued 30-year long-term yen-denominated discount bonds in a bid to reduce Mexico's huge dollar debts, ministry officials said Thursday.

The 30-year term is the longest for a Japanese government bond, they said.

The new bonds, maturing December 31, 2019, bear a face value of 36,587.4 million yen (about 236 million dollars) and carry an interest rate of 6.153 percent per annum.

Mexico will issue government bonds backed by the Japanese bonds and swap them for debts owed to commercial banks and securities firms, the officials said.

They also said that the ministry decided to issue bonds demoninated in yen, not the dollar as usual in view of calls by Japanese creditors who fear that the yen basis value of the bonds, if denominated in dollars, might be reduced due to fluctuations in the foreign exchange markets.

The move came in response to a Mexican request early this month to issue such bonds to cut the nation's 93.6-billion dollar debt.

Under a bilateral agreement, Mexico is to pay 6,186.92 million yen (39.92 million dollars) for the discount bonds, about a sixth of the face value, according to the officials.

HONG KONG (MARCH 29) - Two key companies in the business stable of local magnate Li Ka-shing, known as Hong Kong's richest man, reported handsome profits Thursday.

Cheung Kong Holdings Ltd., the Li group's flagship, said its net profit rose 33 percent from a year earlier to 2.78 billion Hong Kong dollars (356 million U.S.) in 1989.

The holding firm's 40 percent-owned conglomerate, Hutchison Whampoa Ltd., announced a 30 percent after-tax profit hike last year to three billion dollars (385 million U.S.)

Hutchison said that profit came on top of an extraordinary gain of another three billion dollars, largely from its property businesses and a partial sale of its stake in the HongKong International Terminals Ltd.

Cheung Kong and Hutchison, both locally listed, declared a final per-share dividend of 28 cents (3.6 cents U.S.) and 38 cents (4.9 cents U.S.).

Hutchison's interests range from property and telecommunications, to energy, retail and cargo terminal operations here and abroad.

Mr. Li, who is chairman of both companies, painted a fairly gloomy picture for the British colony's economic prospects in the year ahead.

In two separate statements Mr. Li said Hong Kong's economic slowdown would be worsened by rising inflation, an acute labour shortage and an on-going "brain drain" caused by an exodus of professionals and business skills before China's pending takeover here in 1997.

He added however that the colony's mammoth 127 billion dollar (16.3 million U.S.) new airport-cum-port project, to be launched by the government with participation from the private sector, should help boost the local economy in the long term.

Mr. Li said his cash-rich companies should well withstand the immediate economic pressures at home and predicted another positive year.

LONDON (MARCH 29) - British insurance company Guardian Royal Exchange said Thursday its taxable profit fell 38 percent last year over the 1988 level to 148.3 million pounds (247 million dollars) from 239.1 million (398.5 million dollars).

Final dividend was fixed at 7.5 pence, making a total for the year of 11.5 pence, up from 10 pence the previous year.

The steep profit fall had been expected by the market, as second half performance had been affected by a series of disasters abroad and property damage in Britain due to severe winter storms.

FRANKFURT, WEST GERMANY (MARCH 29) - West Germany's leading private bank, Deutsche Bank, said Thursday it made a record operating profit last year, up 22.6 percent over the 1988 level.

The bank did not give a total profit figure, in line with West German banking tradition, but said its profit on client operations was up 24.8 per- cent at 3.87 billion Deutsche marks (2.27 billion dollars).

The bank said it was satisfied with the good result, and was raising dividend from 12 Deutsche marks to 14 Deutsche marks.

"But we are still not satisfied with the development and the quality of our profit," said bank president Hilmar Kopper.

The Deutsche Bank has a 10.3 percent profit to earnings ratio on the basis of the 1989 figures, which is not very high by international standards, he added.

But Mr. Koppper said he was satisfied with the rise in profits per share from 87 Deutsche marks in 1988 to 97 Deutsche marks.

Profits had continued to rise in the first two months of the year, Mr. Kopper said, without giving figures, and the target for this year will be to develop the quality of the bank's results with the emphasis on profitability.

Deutsche Bank is particularly looking towards its land management sector, where it has recently boosted its presence with a stake in private West German bank Grunelius.

Revenue in 1989 rose 14 percent to 10.407 billion Deutsche marks, while outgoings were up only 8.4 percent at 6.536 billion.

Revenue on interest was up 13.5 percent, while loans were up 10.6 percent at 233.8 billion Deutsche marks, about a quarter of it to overseas clients.

The bank said it had added seven countries to its list of at-risk countries where it was involved, increasing provisions by 200 million Deutsche marks.

The bank now has exposure in 52 countries deemed at risk, and this is 77.8 percent covered by provisions, up from 76.9 percent at the end of 1988.

Deutsche Bank is still intending to list its shares in New York, after being introduced on the Tokyo exchange last year. Talks were continuing with the Wall Street authorities and the bank could now see "light at the end of the tunnel."

The listing could take place next year, it added.

The Deutsche Bank and Wall Street have been negotiating for a considerable time on the conditions of the listing, which the bank has said are too restrictive.

TEL AVIV (MARCH 29) - Israeli police and security services braced for mass disturbances on Friday, when Palestinians will take to the streets for annual Land Day demonstrations.

Some 5,600 police officers will patrol Arab areas to prevent outbreaks of violence, with almost half of police forces concentrated in East Jerusalem.

All police leave has been cancelled, and Commisioner David Krauss has ordered officers to act firmly to snuff out violence as it arises.

Authorities also plan strict searches of the more than 20,000 Moslems expected to attend Friday prayers at Jerusalem's Dome of the Rock, and from Thursday night onward the entire city will be closed to residents of the occupied teritories.

The entire Gaza Strip - where eight demonstrators were injured in clashes with Israeli troops Wednesday night - and townships in the Hebron area were placed under precautionary curfew Thursday.

LONDON (MARCH 29) - The Franco-British Eurotunnel consortium, which is building a tunnel under the Channel, announced Thursday that Tony Ridley resigned from the boards of Eurotunnel and of the group's other companies.

Mr. Ridley, 56, former London Underground chief, is leaving his Eurotunnel position as project managing director in the wake of a restructuring put through in February.

He is being replaced by John Neerhout, 59, president of U.S. construction group Bechtel, who was appointed on February 21.

The consortium said at the time that the restructuring was due to the need for a new basis for relationships between Eurotunnel and the Transmanche Link consortium of contractors actually building the 'chunnel' following disputes over cost overruns.

Mr. Ridley joined Eurotunnel 14 months ago, after resigning as head of the London Underground in the wake of a fire at King's Cross station that killed 31 people.

CAPE TOWN (MARCH 29) - South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha Thursday called on the Australian government to join with some other foreign leaders in accepting that "changes in South Africa are indeed irreversible."

In a statement issued here he said some South Africans may have hoped for a victory in Saturday's Australian elections by opposition leader Andrew Peacock because his policy towards South Africa "is ostensibly more positive than that of the government."

"Be that as it may, the government's survival in office is a reality of which I take cognisance. The Australian electorate has spoken, if rather ambiguously."

Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke, leader of the Labor Party, embarked on a record fourth term in office with a narrow majority as the outcome of the poll became clear Thursday.

MONROVIA (MARCH 29) - A u.S. missionary and his British wife were killed last Saturday in fighting between government troops and rebels near Bahn in the central Liberian country of Nimba, U.S. embassy officials confirmed here Thursday.

The sources said the dead were Reverend Thomas Jackson 79, and Jane Jackson of the Liberia Inland Mission. They had worked in Liberia for more than 30 years. Liberian military authorities had informed the embassy.

U.S. embassy sources said friends of the victims discovered their car one-and-a-half miles away from Bahn with bullet holes. The two had helped to translate the Bible into Gio, one of two major dialects in Nimba county.

MOSCOW (MARCH 29) - The Soviet republic of Azerbaijan has closed its border with Armenia amid reports of renewed armed clashes between the two communities, a Radio-Moscow publication reported here Thursday.

A number of villages in the Nakhichevan autonomous republic, part of Azerbaijan which borders Armenia, have come under fire, notably in the Shabkhur, Babek and Ilyichyovsk regions, Interfax said.

A number of local residents have also been abducted, while army reinforcements have been sent to the area, the publication added.

The decision to temporarily close the border was taken at a special joint session of the Azerbaijan Communist Party Central Committee and government on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Moscow has rushed General Yuri Shatalin, the head of the internal ministry troops, to the Caucasus to "end violence, mass disorders and civil disobedience" in the region where recently clashes left a dozen dead and scores of injured, Tass news agency reported Thursday.

A group of Azeri deputies have also sent a message to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev urging him to reinforce security along the border between their republic and Armenia.

The presidium of the Azerbaijan Supreme Soviet has also declared invalid a session of the local government in the Armenian-dominated enclave of Nagorny Karabakh, over which both Armenia and Azerbaijan claim sovereignty.

The local government had decided at a recent meeting in Stepanakerk to restore the Armenian-controlled regional executive committee and end a campaign of civil disobedience there, Interfax said.

All industrial premises were reported to have resumed work in Stepanakerk Wednesday, it added.

MONROVIA (MARCH 29) - Two U.S. Catholic priests were found safe in northern Liberia on Thursday after being held captive for three days by rebels, a source in their mission said Thursday.

Father John Thompson and Father Larry Gilmore of the Salecian Don Bosco Order were back at the St. Francis mission in Tappita village 155 miles (250 kilometers) from the capital, Father Henry O'Brien said.

He added that he had spoken to them by radio and said there were also three Italian sisters in the area.

Fr. Thompson, who had left the mission Monday, and Fr. Gilmore, who went to look for him, were both "in good condition", said Fr. O'Brien, but there were no immediate details of their detention.

U.S. Embassy officials meanwhile confirmed the reported deaths of two Protestant missionaries in strife-torn Nimba County, where rebels launched a coup bid on December 24 against President Samuel Doe.

They said Thomas Jackson of the United States and his British wife June were killed in fighting near Bahn. Liberian military sources had notified the embassy of their deaths.

Missionary sources in Abidjan had told Agence France-Presse Tuesday that Mr. Jackson, 73, had worked in Nimba County as a Bible school principal and Bible translator for 40 years.

He and his wife, also a linguist, translated the New Testament into the local Gio, Bassa and Mano languages, the missionaries said.

U.S. officials said friends of the victims found their car with bullet holes about three kilometers (two miles) from Bahn city.

The officials said they were asking the Red Cross to recover the bodies.

The U.S. Embassy this week "strongly advised" all Americans residing in Nimba County, except those in the secure mining town of Yekepa, to "immediately leave" the area because of fresh clashes between troops and rebels.

Informed sources said the U.S.-based Baptist Mid-Missions has already evacuated 19 missionaries from the region.

Fr. O'Brien said the U.S. priests would have to decide themselves if they will leave.

"The Americans will probably want them out, but it is not our policy to abandon places. We will not leave our mission," he said.

Meanwhile, the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) on Wednesday held back a convoy of trucks carrying 170 tons of relief supplies until the government was able to guarantee their safety.

The goods were to be taken to Tappita before being distributed.

The supplies including rice, canned meat, salt and cooking oil, were to leave here Wednesday on a detour route around roadblocks travellers said rebels have set up to cut off the main highway linking Ganta and Tappita.

BONN (MARCH 29) - West German Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg Thursday denied opposition charges that he knew about and failed to block the illegal sale of submarine blueprints to South Africa.

Stoltenberg told a news conference that the allegations, by Greens and Social Democrats on a parliamentary commission investigating the mid-1980s sale, were patently wrong and defamatory.

The opposition renewed its accusations the day before that Stoltenberg bore at least political responsibility for the alleged blueprint sale by the shipyard Howaldtswerke-Deutsche Werft (Hdw) and the engineering consulting firm Ingenieurskontor Luebeck (Ikl).

Accusations by the Social Democrats that Stoltenberg knew of the blueprints sale ahead of time were 'the untruth', the minister said.

Stoltenberg, finance minister from 1982-1989, said he heard of South African interest in the blueprints in June 1983 but had responded 'clearly negatively'. He said it was not until September 1985 that then-economics minister Martin Bangemann told him of evidence that the plans had already been exported to Pretoria.

The sale was illegal under West German export regulations banning arms sales to conflict areas and is being investigated by state prosecutors.

MOSCOW (MARCH 29) - A Soviet state committee on nationalities, the equivalent to a ministry, will be formed to tackle the problem of ethnic unrest around the country, Tass news agency reported Thursday.

A law providing establishing the committee has been passed by the standing parliament, the Supreme Soviet, "to improve state control of national development and inter-ethnic relations", Tass said.

The new body will be charged with "preventing inter-ethnic conflict", according to Georgui Tarazevich, who heads a commission on national policy and inter-ethnic relations within the Council of Nationalities.

The council is part of the bicameral Supreme Soviet.

Mr. Tarazevich said the committee was needed because the Soviet Union "has no executive structures" to deal with the issue.

It should "raise the status of autonomous regions, restore the rights of people repressed by Stalin, improve the national structure, help develop the national cultures of small ethnic groups", he said.

The committee would also help ethnic groups "protect their economic interests and coordinate the efforts of various ministries and departments in the area of inter-republican relations", he added.

The past few months have seen a series of national and ethnic crises in the Soviet Union, notably on the Baltic, where Lithuania has declared independence, and in the Caucasus, the scene of bloody clashes between Armenians and Azeris.

RASHAYA, LEBANON (MARCH 29) - A U.S. social worker murdered in southern Lebanon was buried near here Thursday as his wife vowed to stay behind to carry on his work with handicapped children.

Israeli officers and their allies in the South Lebanon Army (SLA) attended the funeral at the Protestant cemetery in nearby Hasbaya, Voice of the South radio said.

In Jerusalem, William Wolford, the American administrator of the Christian Embassy in Jerusalem, dismissed as "the biggest lie of the century" reports that William Bell Robinson had been planning to establish a Jewish settlement in southern Lebanon.

He told Agence France-Presse that Mr. Robinson's killing was a "terrorist act against a man whose only concern was to help orphans and handicapped children".

The Christian Embassy was established in 1980 by fundamentalists who hold that the creation of the state of Israel confirms the authenticity of the holy scriptures.

Local residents had accused Mr. Robinson of being a member of the organization and of intending to expand his center to accomodate 200 Jewish families. Through a lawyer, they had appealed to the Lebanese government for Mr. Robinson's expulsion.

Mr. Wolford denied that Mr. Robinson had any formal ties with the Christian Embassy but said he had maintained friendly ties with the mission.

"Barbara (Robinson) told me that she and her children will continue to work and will not leave the (handicapped) children," Mr. Wolford said after speaking with Mrs. Robinson by telephone.

Mr. Robinson, 56, from the state of Maine, was sent to southern Lebanon by a small Chicago parish in 1983. A year later he opened an orphanage and center for handicapped children in Rashaya al-Foukhar, a village in the Israeli-patrolled "security zone," Mr. Wolford said.

At least 20 children were enrolled at first. Their numbers increased following recent combat in and around Beirut and Mr. Robinson sought to expand the facility, he added.

He also stressed that all the children at the Robinson center were Lebanese, although not necessarily from the south.

Kamal Hadid, a spokesman for local villagers, on Sunday charged that Mr. Robinson had entered the region illegally and said the children at the center were "foreigners to the region and had spent time in Israel".

An anti-Israeli group, the Lebanese National Resistance Front, Wednesday claimed responsibility for the murder and warned against any attempts to "Judaise, annex or settle" parts of Lebanon.

WARSAW (MARCH 29) - Initial results of Polish economic reforms implemented on January 1 by Finance Minister Leszek Balcerowicz are "encouraging", an official from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) said in a newspaper article published here on Thursday.

Peter Hole, head of an IMF delegation, told Gazeta, the daily newspaper of the Solidarity Union, that: "The most important elements (of the reform), namely economic stabilization and structural changes, seem to be going in the right direction."

At the start of the year, the Fund approved the Polish economic program, stressing the struggle against inflation and reducing the budget deficit, and it released an initial installment of 723 million dollars in stand-by credits for Poland.

However, it also decided to monitor government policies to make sure there is no relaxation of the austerity effort.

Mr. Hole said "the government must carry on" with present policies, saying that inflation is coming down fast and the balance of payments is improving markedly.

He added that it was "normal" for Polish businesses to require a certain time to adapt to new market conditions.

PARIS (MARCH 29) - A Japanese bank, the Long-Term Credit Bank, and Japanese brokerage Nippon Kangyo Kakumaru Securities Company have been authorized to set up in France, sources said on Thursday at the French Credit Establishments Committee, which issues such approvals.

Long-Term Credit Bank will open a branch here and has received approval to carry on banking operations. Nippon Kangyo Kakumaru is being allowed to establish a subsidiary to carry on a securities business. The firm will operate under French law.

The decisions follow a decision by Japanese authorities to grant Credit Lyonnais bank a seat on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. It is the third French bank (after Banque Indosuez and Societe Generale) to receive such a seat.

Long-Term Credit is the tenth Japanese bank to set up shop in France. Bank of Tokyo was the first, in 1961. Nippon Kangyo Kakumaru follows Japanese firms Nomura, Yamaichi, Nikko, Daiwa and Sanyo in beginning securities operations in France.

BRUSSELS (MARCH 29) - European Commission officials voiced shock Thursday when they were briefed by West German Environment Minister Klaus Toepfer about the catastrophic state of the East German environment.

"The situation is even worse than we expected," an official said, after the minister briefed the 17-member executive.

Mr. Toepfer handed the Commission a report by the East German government, published last February, that says 30 percent of East German rivers and lakes are "ecologically dead" while 45 percent are so polluted that no modern technology can restore them for drinking use.

East Germany also has the worst air pollution in Europe, as its brown-coal power stations spew up to six million tons of sulphur dioxide and two million tons of dust into the atmosphere each year, the report says.

Mr. Toepfer told reporters that a number of East German enterprises would have to be shut down immediately in order to prevent further damage to the environment, and this would entail the loss of between 50,000 and 60,000 jobs.

The minister declined to say how much money would be required to redress the situation, but warned that East Germany would have to phase out the state subsidies that have kept electricity prices artificially low and encouraged enormous energy wastage.

The West German government has earmarked a billion Deutsche marks (584 million dollars) this year to improve the environment in East Germany.

Mr. Toepfer said that East Germany, when unified with West Germany, would need a transitional period in order to meet the EEC's environmental standards.

But any requests for exemptions will be discussed on a case-by-case basis by EEC ministers and are likely to be limited, he said, noting that in any case, West Germany would not lower its own environmental standards and would stand by its undertakings to the Community.

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AFP) - Libya has successfully tested in-flight refueling of its fighter-bombers in a key step toward extending the range of its warplanes throughout the Middle East, Defense Department sources said Thursday.

The sources expressed serious concern over the tests, which according to a New York Times article published Thursday involved a French supplied Mirage F-1 fighter-bomber and a U.S.-made C-130 transport converted into a refueling tanker.

During the test, a refueling probe mounted on the C-130 was connected to the Mirage on four out of six attempts, but it was not known if fuel was actually transferred.

"While the link between the planes lasted only several minutes, American officials said that it was an important step that indicated that Libya had overcome many of the technical problems that have plagued its aerial refueling program," the Times reported.

International concern over the Libyan effort to develop a refueling capacity has grown following reports that Tripoli was manufacturing chemical bombs which could be used against Israel or other countries.

With in-flight refueling, Libya's Soviet-made SU-24 bombers could fly to Israel at low altitude, making it easier to avoid detection, experts say.

Libya had tried to obtain an aerial refueling system from the Soviet Union, which last year sold Tripoli six SU-24 fighter-bombers, but U.S. criticism of the transaction has apparently held up the deal, the Times reported.

"We've expressed our concerns about it" to Moscow, a Pentagon official added Thursday.

While the prop-driven C-130 can be used as a refueling tanker, experts say, it flies slower than the jet fighters, complicating the operation.

The Times said Libya was reportedly seeking to purchase a faster Boeing 707 for conversion into a refueling tanker.

PRAGUE (MARCH 29) - Troops and police Wednesday crushed a four-day mutiny at a Slovak fortress prison for serious offenders, in violence that left one dead and 30 injured, an official source said here Thursday.

The mutiny at Leopoldov, 40 kilometers (25 miles) from the Slovak capital Bratislava, began Saturday when prisoners demanded to be freed. They included people serving jail terms for murder and armed robbery, the CTK news agency said.

Slovak member of parliament Jan Langos earlier said that much of the prison, an 18th-century Hapsburg fortress, had been burned out, adding that people had been injured on both sides.

Some 700 police and army paratroopers, backed by 1,700 regular soldiers, moved in Wednesday when mutineers set fire to several barrack buildings after six hours of fruitless negotiations and appeals for calm, CTK said.

One person was killed and 30 were injured, including a policeman, an informed source in Bratislava had earlier said.

CTK did not say how many prisoners had taken part in the revolt, where they tried to repel the security forces with petrol bombs. Troops used shotguns to reduce the scale of injury, the agency added.

The Leopoldov jail, where conditions are tough, housed some 2,500 detainees at the beginning of this year but some were later transferred to other establishments.

After the riot, the prisoners were moved to Kurim, near Brno, in southern Moravia. Damage at Leopoldov was worth several million dollars, CTK said.

It was not the first mutiny at Leopoldov, where prisoners attacked warders on January 4, three days after President Vaclav Havel declared an amnesty for about 20,000 people jailed for lesser offences.

Convicts wanting an extension of the amnesty have also rebelled in other prisons, notably Valdice in eastern Bohemia.

Slovak MP Mr. Langos on Thursday demanded an explanation of the mutiny from the prime minister of the federal parliament in Prague, Marian Calfa, and the Slovak Prime Minister Milan Cic.

PRAGUE (MARCH 29) - Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel left his hospital bed Thursday to intervene in heated parliamentary debate on choosing a new name for the country, but saw his proposal fail by just four votes.

In a vote following hours of debate, televised live, four Slovak deputies defeated Mr. Havel's suggestion to change "Socialist Republic of Czechoslovakia" to "Federated Republic of Czechoslovakia" .

Mr. Havel had a hernia operation last Saturday.

Czech deputies approved the name change unanimously, except for one absention. But to become law, the bill also would have had to win at least three fifths of the Slovak deputies' votes.

Two republics form Czechoslovakia. Both want to scrap the "Socialist" part of the official name. But Slovaks, who represent about one third of the total population, want to insert a hyphen to gain more recognition for their people.

However proposals like Republic of Czecho-Slovakia and Federated Republic of Czecho-Slovakia, also failed to muster enough support.

"This hyphen could create a wall between our two nations," an independent member of parliament, Jindrich Konecny, declared during debate.

In other developments, Mr. Havel offered Czechoslovakia's help as a mediator in the Lithuanian crisis and to provide a venue for negotiations, in a telegram to his Soviet counterpart Mikhail Gorbachev, the CTK news agency said.

Mr. Havel expressed concern over the "worsening of the situation" in the Baltic republic and said, "any form of violence, including just a threat, could seriously damage efforts to peacefully reorganize Europe".

LONDON (MARCH 29) - The diversified British retail conglomerate Polly Peck International on Thursday said that its 1989 profits jumped by 44 percent over the previous year's figure, to an after-tax 161 million pounds (262 million dollars) against 112 million (182 million dollars).

The conglomerate, of which Turkish Cypriot businessman Asil Nadir is chairman, noted that the year had been marked by the acquisition of the Del Monte fresh fruits business and of 51 percent of Japanese hi-fi group Sansui Electric.

Turnover jumped by 53 percent to 1.16 billion pounds against 761 million the previous year. Earnings per share were by 16 percent, to 43.2 pence against 37.1.

The results were higher than City expectations of a profit of 145 to 155 million pounds.

Mr. Nadir commented that "1990 has started out very encouragingly", and he pledged to "consolidate" acquisitions in the next few months. He also said the group would try to "take advantage of our competitive strengths in Eastern Europe".

Polly Peck has just signed a joint venture agreement with France's Thomson to produce television sets in Turkey, and the group hopes to become number three in the European general electronics market, behind Philips and Thomson.

MONTREAL (MARCH 29) - The average Canadian produces more solid waste a day -- about two kilos (4.4 pounds) -- than any other national per capita average in the world, Canada's environmental chief said Thursday.

Minister of the Environment Lucien Bouchard released the figures during a news conference in which he announced Canada's "Green plan," aimed at consolidating the country's leadership in world environmental efforts.

The objective, he said, will be "to make Canada by the year 2000, the industrialized country with the best relationship with the environment."

Citing a study of Canada's waste, the minister said the average Canadian produces about 2 kilos (4.4 pounds) of solid waste daily, with less than 10 percent of that waste being recycled.

He said the high level of waste could be attributed not only to Canada's huge expanse of its territory and the rigors of its weather, but to Canadians "thinking that natural resources were inexhaustible."

The country must act to assure renewable resources, he said, to protect its natural resources, and to stop pollution and ecological disasters that have fouled the nation's air and waterways.

ATLANTA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The 11th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals has upheld a favorable decision for The Citizens and Southern Corp. (NYSE: CTZ) involving litigation with the Internal Revenue Service over the treatment of certain deductions for income tax purposes.

The 11th Circuit Court's ruling upholds a September 1988 decision by the U.S. Tax Court.

C&S filed a petition with the Tax Court after the IRS disallowed certain deductions on federal income tax returns for 1982. C&S recorded intangible assets, called deposit base intangibles, in connection with several acquisitions of banking institutions. Income tax returns for the year 1982 forward reflected deductions for the amortization of these assets. The case was heard in Tax Court during November 1987.

The IRS has 90 days to appeal the decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

OSLO, NORWAY (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - 1989 was a good year for the Christiania Bank Group. The operating profit before loan losses and provision for loan losses was NOK 1,957.7 million compared with NOK 1,480.3 million in 1988, representing an increase of 32.3 percent. The group's operating profit amounted to NOK 640.7 million against NOK 390.0 million in 1988. The board of directors proposed a dividend payment of NOK 8 percent of nominal value NOK 50 representing a total dividend of NOK 296 million. NOK 188.7 million was allocated to the bank's equity.

Earnings per share rose from NOK 11.88 last year to NOK 17.15 in 1989. After change in deferred taxes the earnings per share were NOK 9.03 in 1988 and NOK 14.88 in 1989. The 1988 figures have been adjusted for share split and share issues.

Similarly, the return on equity for the Group rose from 9.55 percent in 1988 to 12.44 percent in 1989. After change in deferred taxes the return on equity was 9.39 percent in 1988 and 13.78 percent in 1989.

The bank has devoted much time and effort to improving asset and liability management in recent years, and the improved net interest income for 1989 as in large measure the result of this work. The interest rate margin for the group was 2.31 percent in 1988 and 2.42 percent in 1989. Balance sheet growth was moderate in 1989. The group's total assets were NOK 130.3 billion at the end of 1989 against NOK 116.4 billion in 1988.

In 1989 the group again found it prudent to write off large amounts on its loan portfolio. As in 1988, most of these were domestic loans. Loans written off by the parent bank amounted to NOK 1,247.8 million in 1989 while the figure for the group was NOK 1,317.0 million.

The vast majority of this year's write-offs are linked to the difficulties being experienced by most sectors of Norwegian trade and industry. However, unlike in 1987 and, to some extent, in 1988 when most of the difficulties related to newly established businesses, the problems arising in 1989 affected established companies. A weak capital base -- which has long been the dominant feature of Norwegian industry -- is unable to provide the financial strength necessary to survive declining profits over the long term. Entire industries are in deep crisis. In northern Norway the crisis in the fishing industry has also had repercussions in other areas, and this is reflected in the bank's loan losses.

DENVER (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Newmont Mining Corp. (NYSE: NEM) today announced it has agreed to sell its 54.97 percent interest in Peabody Holding Co. Inc. to a subsidiary of Hanson Industries for $715 million. Newmont will be entitled to receive future dividends in an amount equal to its share of 75 percent of Peabody's 1990 earnings through the closing date, as allowed under Peabody's existing long term debt agreements.

Closing of the sale is expected to occur in June. The transaction is subject to certain conditions, including approval by holders of 80 percent of Newmont's common stock as required by Newmont's certificate of incorporation. Proxy materials for such a vote will be distributed to all Newmont shareholders after review by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

As previously announced by Hanson, Hanson has agreed to buy the remaining 45.03 percent of Peabody from three other holders, for the equivalent of $517.5 million which includes dividends of $13.1 million that have been paid since Jan. 1, 1990. Such purchase is expected to occur in April 1990, prior to the Newmont shareholder meeting.

The sale of Newmont's Peabody stock was approved and recommended to shareholders by unanimous vote of all Newmont directors not affiliated with Hanson, which owns 49 percent of Newmont's outstanding stock. Newmont's unaffiliated directors were advised by J.P. Morgan that in Morgan's opinion the transaction is fair to Newmont from a financial point of view.

Under the purchase agreement Hanson and Newmont have agreed that, subject to Hanson's right to compete, they would accept an offer made prior to the closing for 100 percent of their Peabody stockholdings at a price of not less than $1.2425 billion plus undistributed earnings and on other terms no less favorable to Newmont than those contained in the Newmont-Hanson agreement. In connection with other potential offers, Newmont is authorized to furnish information about Peabody under a confidentiality agreement.

Peabody Holding is the largest coal producer in the United States. It was formed in 1976 by a Newmont-led consortium to purchase Peabody Coal Co. from Kennecott Copper Corp.

BOSTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The chairman of the board of Kellogg Company (NYSE: K) called for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to establish uniform national standards for nutrition labeling of food products.

At a Tufts University conference on food and health messages policy, William E. LaMothe said, "We are deeply concerned by Health & Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan's recent proposal to allow individual states to set their own standards on food labeling. At a time when the European community is breaking down trade barriers between nations, this proposal encourages the establishment of trade barriers among states within our own country.

"Lack of national uniformity in food labeling will seriously complicate product distribution, increase consumer costs, and potentially result in even greater consumer confusion," LaMothe said. "The practical implication of not providing national uniformity for health messages is to empower one state -- any state -- with the ability to control the federal agenda."

LaMothe rejected any idea that food companies engaged in interstate commerce can effectively provide different package labeling for each state. "A manufacturer cannot economically produce and distribute 50 different labels unless our government chooses to artificially inflate food costs and drive good nutrition further from low-income consumers," he said.

The plan to permit variations in labeling among states was announced by Dr. Sullivan as part of a proposed labeling regulation being developed by the FDA.

LaMothe also expressed serious concern about aspects of the proposed regulation that vaguely define terms such as "scientific consensus" and that call for model labels which could easily become rigid formats. He went on to state: "We in industry are willing to work with the FDA to not only develop an appropriate food label for consumers but also provide meaningful diet and health information."

RICHMOND, VA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Richfood Holdings, Inc. (NASDAQ: RCHFA) today announced execution of a letter of intent for the sale of Garner Wholesale Merchandisers, Inc., its non-food distribution business headquartered in Greenville, North Carolina. The transaction is structured as an asset sale and priced approximately at book value.

At the end of the third quarter, January 6, 1990, Garner's net assets subject to the proposed sale aggregated approximately $15 million. The transaction is expected to be completed on or about April 28, 1990, in time to be reflected in Richfood's financial statements for the current fiscal year, which ends on that date.

The proceeds will be used to repay bank debt. The transaction is subject to regulatory consent, the purchaser's satisfactory completion of its due diligence review, negotiation of a definitive purchase agreement, and the approval of the Board of Directors of Richfood and the purchaser.

Edward Villanueva, acting president and chief financial officer, said "Garner has recorded substantial losses since its acquisition in 1987, including the current fiscal year to date. Significant progress had been made in correcting Garner's inventory problems, and continuing efforts to improve operating efficiencies were expected to result in a modest profit next year.

"However, the purchaser's strong expression of interest in Garner provides Richfood with an opportunity to enhance its financial condition materially and to focus all of its efforts on continuing to improve the operations of its core food distribution business headquartered in Richmond, Virginia, which is now operating profitably and currently represents 94 percent of total sales."

Villanueva added "Assuming this transaction is closed on schedule, fiscal year-end inventory levels will be reduced from $131 million at April 29, 1989 to the $70 million range at April 28, 1990. Despite these dramatic reductions, customer service levels have improved in the process. Concurrently, notes payable will have declined from $93.5 million at April 29, 1989 to the $30-40 million range at April 28, 1990.

The favorable impact on the balance sheet, coupled with the Company's improved earnings prospects as a result of the proposed sale of Garner, should facilitate the permanent refinancing of the remaining notes payable at April 28, 1990 on terms and conditions favorable to Richfood.

"In addition to assuming all of Garner's material lease obligations, I am pleased to report that the purchaser will offer employment to all Garner employees" Villanueva said.

ROCHESTER, NY (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastman Kodak Company (NYSE: EK) board chairman Colby H. Chandler has announced a commitment by Kodak to reduce emissions of ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons 50 percent by 1993 and to discontine their direct use in worldwide manufacturing by 1995.

The announcement, made at the Council on Economic Priorities corporate conscience awards dinner last night, reflects a timetable well in advance of mandates by the Montreal Protocol, an international treaty requiring a 50 percent reduction in the production of CFCs by 1998.

"There is a significant business risk in that kind of commitment," Chandler noted. "But the environmental and business risks for companies not making that commitment may be even greater."

PARIS and PITTSBURGH (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Imetal and Copperweld Corp. (NYSE: COS) are pleased to announce that last evening (March 28) they entered into a merger agreement pursuant to which Copperweld Acquisition Corp., a Delaware corporation and wholly owned subsidiary of Imetal, would be merged into Copperweld and each outstanding share of Copperweld (other than those owned by Imetal or Acquisition Corp.) would be converted into the right to receive $17.00 net in cash.

Imetal currently owns 5,757,216 shares (approximately 65.2 percent) of Copperweld's common stock and after the merger would own all of the outstanding common stock of Copperweld. Imetal had made an earlier acquisition proposal of $15.50 per share net in cash.

Copperweld's board of directors approved the merger agreement following the review and recommendation of a special committee of the independent members of Copperweld's board of directors which had been formed on Jan. 24, 1990, to consider the acquistion proposal. The special committee's recommendation was based on a number of factors including, among other factors, the opinion of the First Boston Corp., the independent financial advisor retained by the special committee, that the consideration to be received pursuant to the merger is fair to Copperweld's stockholders from a financial point of view.

In connection with the increase in value of the original proposal, the board took into account a pending stockholder lawsuit and has agreed in principle to the settlement of such lawsuit upon the terms of the transaction approved by the board, plus costs and expenses. The board also considered the fact that the merger agreement permits the payment of regular quarterly cash dividends of $.10 per share. Approval of a majority of the shares held by stockholders unaffiliated with Imetal is not required to consummate the merger.

The merger agreement requires Copperweld to call its 9.92 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2008 for redemption within 10 business days, unless Imetal and Copperweld otherwise agree.

Imetal is a holding company with interests in building materials, industrial minerals, metals, manufacturing and trading companies.

Copperweld Corp. is a manufacturer of welded and seamless steel tubing and bimetallic rod, wire and strand.

DUBLIN, IRELAND (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Jefferson Smurfit Group plc, headquartered in Dublin, and GIANT GROUP, Ltd. (NYSE: GPO), of Beverly Hills, Calif., today announced that they have entered into a letter of intent pursuant to which a Jefferson Smurfit Group subsidiary or affiliate will purchase from GIANT all of the issued and outstanding stock of Golden State Newsprint Company, Inc., and Pacific Recycling Company, Inc., for $95,000,000 cash plus $25,000,000 additional consideration if the Jefferson Smurfit Group elects to install a second recycled newsprint machine at the Pomona, Calif., mill within a specific time period.

The acquisition would include Golden State's 135,000-ton-per-year, 100 percent recycled newsprint mill located in Pomona and ten waste paper reclamation facilities operated by Pacific Recycling that process approximately 152,000 tons of waste paper per year. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, Golden State's consolidated income before taxes was slightly in excess of $8,000,000. As of Dec. 31, 1989, book value of the assets being acquired, exclusive of long-term debt, which seller is to extinguish at closing, was nearly $62,000,000.

The transaction is subject to usual and customary conditions, including approval by the respective boards of directors of the participating entities, regulatory approvals and satisfactory completion of due diligence. The parties anticipate that the transaction would be closed during the second quarter.

The Jefferson Smurfit Group stated that the acquisition is consistent with its ongoing strategy to grow the Group's position in the newsprint industry. The Pomona mill represents an important expansion for Smurfit's operations on the West Coast and will enable the company to meet increasing demands from customers and the general public for quality newsprint made from recycled materials.

In a further comment, the Group said that the enhanced collection system should provide its mills with an abundant, reliable and high quality source of waste paper for use in the manufacture of newsprint and other Smurfit products. Moreover, because the acquisition focuses on recycled fiber as a major raw material, the transaction further underscores Smurfit's commitment to providing solutions to the management of solid waste in California.

GIANT GROUP, Ltd., owns Keystone Cement Company and Giant Cement Company, which manufacture and sell cement in the southeastern, northeastern, and middle Atlantic regions of the United States. GIANT is a pioneer in the resource recovery burning of waste materials. GIANT also owns approximately 44 percent of Rally's, a publicly held franchiser of fast food "double-drive thru" restaurants.

The Jefferson Smurfit Group is one of the largest and most successful printing, paper and paperboard packaging groups in the world. It manages $6 billion in annual sales generated by operations in 12 countries with 33,000 employees.

HOUSTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - American General Corporation (NYSE: AGC) said that it filed a lawsuit yesterday afternoon in the Federal District Court for the Southern District of Texas. The company is seeking a declaratory judgment upholding its bylaw provision governing the nomination of people for election to the company's board of directors.

The suit, which was assigned to Judge David Hitner, also seeks an order prohibiting Torchmark Corporation (NYSE: TMK) from soliciting proxies in an effort to elect its own slate of directors at the upcoming annual meeting of American General shareholders. American General's board consists of 15 directors, of whom six are to be elected at the May 2 meeting. Torchmark advised American General yesterday of its intent to nominate an alternate slate of directors.

American General said its bylaws have long contained customary procedures requiring advance notification for the nomination of people for election to the board of directors. American General further said that Torchmark has not complied with these procedures.

Harold S. Hook, chairman and chief executive officer of American General, said, "This bylaw is designed to prevent undue pressure tactics by providing the company and the shareholders with advance notice of potential proxy contests. Torchmark's last-minute attempt to run a slate of directors is in direct conflict with this provision, and a prompt affirmation by the court of this bylaw will spare our shareholders the confusion and waste of time and resources of an unnecessary sideshow."

American General is an insurance and financial services organization with assets of $32 billion and total equity of $4.5 billion. Headquartered in Houston, the company has subsidiaries that operate in 50 states and Canada. The company groups its operating subsidiaries into three business segments: insurance-home service; insurance- special markets; and finance/real estate. DENVER (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Newmont Mining Corp. (NYSE: NEM) today announced it has agreed to sell its 54.97 percent interest in Peabody Holding Co. Inc. to a subsidiary of Hanson Industries for $715 million. Newmont will be entitled to receive future dividends in an amount equal to its share of 75 percent of Peabody's 1990 earnings through the closing date, as allowed under Peabody's existing long term debt agreements.

Closing of the sale is expected to occur in June. The transaction is subject to certain conditions, including approval by holders of 80 percent of Newmont's common stock as required by Newmont's certificate of incorporation. Proxy materials for such a vote will be distributed to all Newmont shareholders after review by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

As previously announced by Hanson, Hanson has agreed to buy the remaining 45.03 percent of Peabody from three other holders, for the equivalent of $517.5 million which includes dividends of $13.1 million that have been paid since Jan. 1, 1990. Such purchase is expected to occur in April 1990 prior to the Newmont shareholder meeting.

The sale of Newmont's Peabody stock was approved and recommended to shareholders by unanimous vote of all Newmont directors not affiliated with Hanson, which owns 49 percent of Newmont's outstanding stock. Newmont's unaffiliated directors were advised by J.P. Morgan that in Morgan's opinion the transaction is fair to Newmont from a financial point of view.

Under the purchase agreement Hanson and Newmont have agreed that, subject to Hanson's right to compete, they would accept an offer made prior to the closing for 100 percent of their Peabody stockholdings at a price of not less than $1.2425 billion plus undistributed earnings and on other terms no less favorable to Newmont than those contained in the Newmont-Hanson agreement. In connection with other potential offers, Newmont is authorized to furnish information about Peabody under a confidentiality agreement.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Individual, Inc. has acquired the subscribers of Pinpoint Information Corp.'s Computer Focus, which recently ceased delivery. Individual is delivering First!, its rapidly growing custom daily news service to these subscribers.

In the short period of time since the introduction of Computer Focus, Pinpoint was able to validate the concept that today's companies need customized, timely information. They built a sizeable, satisfied customer base that included IBM, Oracle, Compaq, and Unisys. However, the Pinpoint strategy of employing editors to abstract news manually for subscribers was not cost-effective, and the company stopped operations last week, turning over its customer base to Individual.

Individual, Inc. announced its competitive service, First!, late last month, targeting the information-intensive high technology market. First! uses the lastest in A.I. technologies to act as a newswire filter, scanning the major wires daily and delivering only those articles of particular relevance to a subscriber. First! is an organization-wide information product transmitted daily via electronic mail or fax.

"We welcome Pinpoint's subscribers and look forward to providing them with current-awareness news programs" says Yosi Amram, president of Individual.
"Today's business professionals are very demanding about their information needs. They know exactly the kinds of articles they want, they want the full stories, and they want them promptly. Our automated technology is really the only way of satisfying those needs 100 percent of the time."

Individual, Inc., based in Cambridge, Mass. with offices in Burlingame, Calif., was established in 1988 to build and operate an information refiner -- filtering and customizing information from a broad spectrum of electronic sources. The company applies advanced technologies to spread the power of knowledge to business professionals worldwide.

STAMFORD, CT (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Mobil Chemical announced today that it will continue to manufacture its Hefty waste bags with an environmentally safe additive which speeds their decomposition when exposed to sunlight, but will delete the references to degradability o the packaging. The company said it was taking the action in response to the mounting confusion regarding the definition of degradability.

Mobil said it would consider using references to degradability in its Hefty labelling again if some widely recognized standard of reference is accepted for the word degradable.

Mobil said that it had included the additive in Hefty waste bags since June of last year in response to degradable products being marketed by competitors and strong consumer preference for such products. The phaseout of the existing labelling is expected to take several months.

BINGHAMTON, NY (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Centuri, Inc. (NASDAQ: CENT), the nation's largest distributor of outdoor sporting goods and manufacturer of modular and mobile housing, had record revenues of $204,853,462 in the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared with $202,212,073 in the prior year, it was announced today by Milton Koffman, chairman and chief executive officer. The company had a loss from continuing operations of $160,779, or $0.01 per share, compared with a profit of $1,362,724, or $0.09 per share, in 1988. Income from discontinued operations of $2,504,330, or $0.18 per share, increased 1989 net income to $2,343,551, or $0.17 per share. A year ago income from discontinued operations and an extraordinary item added $3,861,908, or $0.25 per share, to net income which totaled $5,224,632, or $0.34 per share.

Commenting on the results Koffman said, "Outdoor Sports Headquarters, Inc. (OSHI), our major subsidiary, accounted for $182 million of Centuri's revenue and had record sales and earnings for the sixth consecutive year. However, Poloron Products, Inc., our manufactured housing subsidiary, has a significant operating loss due to the severe weakness in the northeastern housing market. In addition, our consolidated interest expense increased by almost $1.9 million from the prior year's level. The increase resulted from higher interest rates and additional borrowings which were required to support OSHI's growth."

Koffman indicated that although Centuri will experience a loss in the first quarter of 1990 he was confident that the company would show improved operating results for all of 1990. "Late in 1989 and early this year OSHI consummated a number of key acquisitions which should increase its volume to more than $260 million in 1990. However, it will take approximately six months to effectively integrate these acquisitions, which involves reducing inventory levels and eliminating substantial non-recurring costs. The expanded sales base makes us confident that OSHI will have record volume and profits for the seventh consecutive year in 1990," Koffman said. The chairman also explained that a consolidation of manufacturing operations at Poloron will reduce operating expenses by $1 million in 1990.

Centuri, Inc., through its wholly owned Outdoor Sports Headquarters, Inc. subsidiary, is the largest wholesale distributor of outdoor sporting goods in the country. Poloron Products, Inc., 85 percent owned by Centuri, designs, manufactures and distributes modular housing and mobile homes through its wholly owned Poloron Homes of Pennsylvania, Inc.

JAMESTOWN, NY (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Bush Industries, Inc. (AMEX: BSH), a leading manufacturer of R.T.A. (ready-to-assemble) furniture, today reported audited results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 29, 1989.

Fourth quarter net income was $105,000 or two cents per share on net sales of $27,782,000 versus net income of $1,545,000 or 35 cents per share on net sales of $28,042,000 for the same period in 1988.

Net income for 1989 was $2,355,000 or 52 cents per share on record net sales of $99,684,000 compared to net income of $4,042,000 or 90 cents per share on net sales of $93,848,000 for the previous year.

Included in results for 1988 and the fourth quarter of that year was $388,000 or nine cents per share from the cumulative effect of an accounting method change.

"Sales results for 1989 reflect the effectiveness of our strategy to broaden our distribution and product lines. However, our earnings were impacted by a generally soft retail environment, increased competitive pressures, and the investment in new products and sales programs which will serve as the basis for our future growth and diversification," Paul Bush, chairman and president, said.

"Improving our customer service to support increasing demands for our furniture, while increasing our manufacturing throughout are at the forefront of our activities. To support this, we have leased a 200,000-square foot distribution center in Ashtabula, Ohio, which will allow us to build our finished goods inventory and free additional manufacturing space in Jamestown, where an additional five million dollars of manufacturing equipment has started to arrive and is being installed. We also continue to invest in upgrading our facilities and equipment in our Little Valley, N.Y., wood processing plant. These are all positive steps to moving the company forward in support of our customers and, in the longer term, profitability," Bush concluded.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The first British Aerospace ATP (Advanced Turboprop) in North America has entered service with Air Wisconsin this week as the United Express carrier inaugurated service from Appleton, Wis. to Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

The first of 14 ATPs ordered by Air Wisconsin continues a schedule of service from O'Hare to Moline/Quad Cities, Ill., and to Lansing, Mich. The airline will place two additional ATPs in service during April. Deliveries of additional aircraft will continue through this year and 1991. The new 64-seat aircraft will operate from the O'Hare hub and progressively replace 50-passenger Fokker F-27s which will be moved to the airline's Washington Dulles hub.

The newest member of the British Aerospace "quiet" family of aircraft, the ATP has been confirmed the quietest large regional turboprop in its class with a noise footprint that covers one fifth the area affected by a typical twin jet.

Air Wisconsin and the BAe ATP broke new industry ground last year when their petition to The Federal Aviation Administration for an exemption to seating limits of 55 passengers for regional aircraft at slot restricted airports resulted in a change in the regulation, allowing a 75-seat maximum.

Air Wisconsin Chairman and President Preston H. Wilbourne, said: "Our goal is to give our customers the most modern aircraft available and the British Aerospace ATP certainly fits that category. We believe its fuel efficiency and profit potential will enhance our bottom line and that its high standard of comfort will impress our customers."

Alan Hughes, senior vice president of marketing for BAe, Inc., congratulated Air Wisconsin on the new service and predicted a showcase operation of ATP. "Air Wisconsin has been one of the nation's most successful regional airlines and has led the way with the newest British Aerospace products. We are certain that their ATP service will also set a market trend for the quiet, profitable service available with this aircraft."

The inauguration of ATP service by Air Wisconsin continues a long-standing relationship with British Aerospace and its predecessor companies. The airline began service with a fleet of de Havilland Doves, was the North American launch customer for the BAe 146 regional jet and last year became the first airline to put the new 146-300 version of the four-engined fanjet into service.

HAUPPAUGE, NY (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - United-Guardian, Inc. (NASDAQ: UNIR), today released the following:

In an article by Elena Buimovici-Klein, M.D., and M. Lange, M.D., of the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in the Antiviral Agents Bulletin of January 1990, it was reported that a new compound, U-G 39, has proven to be effective in destroying the HIV (AIDS Virus) in seminal fluid taken from patients infected with the AIDS Virus.

When a dilute solution of the anti-viral agent, which was developed by United-Guardian, was used as a douche in vaginal (or rectal) irrigation under simulated natural conditions, it destroyed not only the AIDS Virus, but the sperm cells as well.

"What is so surprising is that, despite the low toxicity of U-G 39, it is not only very efficient in destroying the virus, but is equally effective as a spermicide," said Alfred R. Globus, chairman and C.E.O. of United-Guardian.

"The interest in U-G 39 is already considerable," he continued. "Hospital studies on the addition of U-G 39 to blood taken from donors have already shown complete reduction of contained AIDS Virus without harming the normal blood cells." United-Guardian is presently negotiating the first license for U-G 40 (the newest, and somewhat more effective form of U-G 39) with a large U.S. firm.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - TPI Enterprises, Inc. (NASDAQ: TPIE) today reported that revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 amounted to $350.1 million -- comprising $237 million provided by TPI Restaurants, Inc. (acquired April 1988) and $113.1 million derived from TPI Entertainment, Inc. (375 movie screens acquired Feb. 24, 1989) -- compared to $158.3 million for 1988. In 1988, TPI Restaurants' operations were reported for 9 months, and all previous activities are now classified as discontinued.

Operating income for 1989 amounted to $12.5 million as compared to 1988's $3.3 million. Net cash provided by continuing operations rose to $29.3 million from the prior year's $3.1 million. The company reported an overall net loss -- after interest, provisions for taxes and including a gain on disposal of discontinued operations -- of $4.6 million, or $.20 per share, as compared to 1988's net loss of $2.4 million, or $.10 per share. TPI noted that the higher net loss in 1989 was attributable to increased depreciation, acquisition-related interest expense and reserves for closing certain under-performing restaurants. The 1989 gain on disposal of discontinued operations stemmed from TPI's June 1989 sale of all of the outstanding capital stock of TPI Transmission Services, Inc. to a privately held company.

TPI further reported that same-store sales in the company's restaurant subsidiary were up 5.9 percent over the comparable 1988 period and also noted that same-store sales through March 25, 1990 were up 8.6 percent over the comparable period for 1989. One of the largest chains in the southeast, TPI Restaurants, Inc. (as of Dec. 31, 1989) operated 246 restaurants, of which 172 were Shoney's, 63 were Captain D's, and 11 were popularly-priced specialty restaurants. TPI also pointed out that its entertainment subsidiary -- which acquired 55 movie theater complexes containing 375 screens from AMC Entertainment in February 1989 -- benefited from the motion picture industry's parade of record-grossing films that propelled admission and concession sales to new highs in 1989.

TPI also announced that its wholly owned subsidiary, Maxcell Telecom Plus, Inc., is now awaiting FCC approval of its construction permit application. On Oct. 18, 1989, Maxcell won the FCC cellular telephone market lottery for the Tennessee 1-Lake Rural Statistical area. This area covers several counties between Memphis and Nashville, with a combined population in excess of 300,000. On Dec. 12, 1989, Maxcell was named tentative selectee by the FCC.

Commenting on its common stock buy-back program, the company reported that it has purchased approximately 8.9 million shares of the 10 million authorized by its board of directors. As of March 25, 1990, TPI Enterprises had 21,832,000 common shares issued and outstanding.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - BASF Corporation today announced plans to build an aniline and nitrobenzene manufacturing facility at Geismar, La. The facility will support the growing global demand for MDI (diphenyl methane diisocyanate), an intermediate in which aniline is a primary raw material.

"This investment is part of BASF's commitment to backward integrate wherever demand and know-how warrant this step," according to Peter R. Heinze, president, BASF Corporation Chemicals Division.

The $83.5 million facility is scheduled to be brought on stream by the end of 1991. It will create up to 50 permanent jobs and between 350 and 400 construction jobs.

"Sales of MDI have grown at a 6 percent compounded annual rate over the last decade," according to Manfred Buller, president, BASF Corporation Polymers Division. "Continued annual growth of 4 percent is anticipated over the next decade.

"This expansion, is support of our global MDI business, will secure long term a steady source of supply of aniline. The urethanes market, based on sales of MDI, continues to demonstrate above-average growth, as well as new applications."

MDI is used by BASF in a variety of applications, including rigid foam insulation, microcellular and cast elastomers, coatings and binders. Combined with other isocyanates, MDI is used in synthetic fibers and high-resilience flexible foams.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - BASF Corporation today announced plans to build a $17 million plant to produce Elastollan(R) polyurethane elastomer (TPU) resins at Wyandotte, Mich. The new plant, sized to serve the North American market, is part of BASF's worldwide strategic plan to locate TPU production units in the major markets it serves worldwide.

BASF recently completed a major expansion to its Elastollan plant at Lemfoerde, West Germany, and through its joint venture, Takeda Badische, Ltd., brought on stream a complementary plant at Yokkaichi, Japan. The Wyandotte plant, scheduled for start-up in the fourth quarter 1991, will use the same manufacturing technology to ensure that uniform products are available to worldwide customers.

"BASF first introduced Elastollan TPU resins to the U.S. in 1986," according to Manfred Buller, president of BASF Corporation's Polymers division.

"In 1988, we established a quality control and applications development laboratory at Wyandotte and, a year later, an extrusion manufacturing facility, also at Wyandotte. The new resins plant is further evidence of our intent to be a major force in the fast growing markets for thermoplastic elastomers."

BASF, a major supplier of isocyanates and polyols to the polyurethane industry, will furnish the key raw materials necessary for production from its own facilities. The Wyandotte Elastollan plant will make both polyester- and polyether-based polyurethane elastomer resins for injection molding, blow molding and extrusion.

Elastollan offers excellent abrasion and tear resistance, low temperature flexibility, low permanent flow after long-term loading, and resistance to a wide range of chemicals. Typical uses include industrial wheels, shoe heels, cable coverings, bellows-shaped dust covers, hammer heads, ski boots, exterior automotive body panels, packaging film, and window gaskets. The TPU market currently is growing at a rate of four to five percent per year.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Ground-breaking for the first BASF facility of its kind in North America, a $52.5 million plant for the manufacture of Polymin(R) polyethylene imine, is planned for May 4 at the company's Freeport, Texas, site. Completion is projected for late 1991.

The new facility will occupy five acres of the 405-acre BASF Freeport location, and is to employ between 50 and 55 people.

Polymin is used widely in the paper-making industry in both the United States and Canada. At Freeport, the chemical will be manufactured by an exclusive BASF process, according to J. Larry Jameson, president of BASF Corporation's coatings and colorants division.

"The availability of this product direct from Texas is expected to increase customer service efficiency and product delivery speed to North American paper manufacturers," he said.

Used as a retention and drainage aid in the paper-forming process, Polymin considerably increases the productivity of paper-making machines. By reducing the fiber content of the waste water, it helps to ensure maximum yield from the fibers being processed, and, as a result, lowers the manufacturing cost of finished paper products.

STERLING HEIGHTS, MI (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - General Dynamics Land Systems has been awarded a $12.5 million contract to develop a Heavy Assault Bridge (HAB) system for the U.S. Army Troop Support Command, Fort Belvoir, Va.

The contract calls for Land Systems to modify two Abrams main battle tank chassis and incorporate a horizontal launch bridge system in each. The bridge system is manufactured by the West German firm Man Gutehoffnungshutte of Oberhausen.

The HAB will make it possible for Army units to rapidly deploy and recover the bridge system under combat conditions. Providing a 70-ton bridge capacity over a 24-meter-long (80-foot) gap, the HAB will offer a dramatic advantage to the present capability of the armored force. The Abrams chassis, designed and developed by Land Systems, will provide the same kind of mobility and crew armor protection for which the Abrams tank is renowned.

The two demonstrator vehicles will be developed at Land Systems' headquarters in Sterling Heights during the next 19 months, after which General Dynamics will assist the U.S. Army in a 13-month test of the system.

Following completion of a final technical data package, the U.S. Army will award a production contract through its competitive-bidding process.

CHARLOTTE, NC (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - BASF Corporation's structural materials business has announced plans for expansion to its melt-spun precursor capacity at Rock Hill, S.C. About $30 million is earmarked for this incremental expansion. Completion is scheduled for the third quarter of 1991.

PAN (polyacrylonitrile) precursor fibers are the raw material for making carbon fibers used in aircraft, recreational products and industrial applications. Melt-spun PAN has technical product and environmental process advantages over the current PAN fibers produced by wet solution spinning. Melt-spinning advantages include the ability to produce unique products, such as fibers with non-circular cross sections, which may improve compression and shear strength. Also, the melt-spun technology provides for reduced discharge of waste materials.

"Success of our unique precursor technology positions BASF well to meet the requirements of the Department of Defense for domestic precursor," said R.S. Sahlie, general manager for the carbon fiber business of BASF Structural Materials.

The first successful commercial-scale production of carbon fibers from the new melt-spun PAN precursor began in December 1987. The modular, full-scale commercial unit will be replicated in the scheduled facility expansion. In addition to using the initial capacity for customer sampling and aerospace program qualification, the unit is also involved in advancing new product development, including the non- circular-shaped carbon fiber product.

BASF Structural Materials, based in Charlotte, is one of the major carbon fiber producers in the United States. The company acquired this business from Celanese Corporation in 1985. The structural materials business group is part of BASF Corporation's polymers division.

Stepanian and President Charles K. Gifford both reviewed the events of 1989 and their impact on Bank of Boston, including the dramatic decline in the real estate markets and the corporation's early response in making significant increases to its loan loss provision.

"Despite this adversity and our steps to confront it head on, Bank of Boston did return a $70 million profit for the year," Stepanian told stockholders. "Our ability to continue as a strong and profitable enterprise was supported by the sustained earnings streams of our diversified mix of businesses."

Stepanian added that Bank of Boston remains firmly dedicated to the notion that diversification and balance are prudent business strategies for the corporation and help lessen its vulnerability to problems and cycles in single areas.

President Gifford reminded stockholders that 1989 also contained a number of "plusses" for Bank of Boston. In particular, he noted that the corporation maintained its strong $2.1 billion capital base and sustained its common dividend.

He also pointed to several of the corporation's businesses that performed "exceedingly well" in 1989. Among those, Gifford cited the activities of the international banking group; the bank's specialized lending units; its leasing operation; and its mezzanine finance unit.

Gifford indicated that the corporation's expense control efforts has shown positive results, and that its liquidity position had been greatly strengthened in 1989.

Bank of Boston Corporation is a New England-based superregional banking company with assets of $39 billion at Dec. 31, 1989.

Fischbach, chairman and chief executive officer of Acclaim. "We're equally pleased that our margins have remained strong despite increases in direct marketing and the sourcing of our own computer chips."

MINNEAPOLIS (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Cray Research, Inc. (NYSE: CYR), today advanced the company's plan to enter the minisupercomputer market by signing an agreement-in-principle to acquire Supertek Computers, Inc. (Supertek), a privately held Santa Clara, Calif., designer and manufacturer of a Cray-compatible minisupercomputer system.

Under terms of the proposed agreement, which is subject to negotiation of a definitive agreement and a Hart-Scott-Rodino review, Supertek would become a wholly owned subsidiary of Cray Research. The acquisition would be for cash. The purchase price was not disclosed.

Cray Research officials said the acquisition of Supertek's technology would accelerate the company's entry into the marketplace for minisupercomputer systems.

Minisupercomputer systems are general-purpose scientific computers that are highly capable, but less powerful than supercomputers.

Supertek's system, called the S-1, is compatible with the company's CRAY X-MP supercomputer series. By the end of 1990, the company expects to port its UNICOS operating system to this technology, resulting in an interim Cray Research minisupercomputer system. Supertek has also done developmental work on a follow-on product which Cray Research expects to turn into a CRAY Y-MP- compatible system available for worldwide marketing in the second half of 1991.

"Supertek was the only firm that met our criteria for acquiring compatible technology for this market segment," said John A. Rollwagen, Cray Research's chairman and chief executive officer. "Their product is Cray-compatible, and it is available right now. We believe the minisupercomputer system will stimulate demand for Cray Research supercomputers and will allow us to meet our customers' needs for a Cray-compatible product of this kind."

Rollwagen said the minisupercomputer system is an important element in the company's previously announced network supercomputing strategy. "In a network of this kind, people sitting at workstations can access the capabilities of the minisupercomputer system or they can access their Cray Research supercomputer.

"This product supports our mission to build the world's most powerful computer systems," Rollwagen said. "We will continue to invest 15 percent of our revenue in true supercomputer research and development."

Cray Research, Inc., designs, manufactures, markets, and supports large-scale, high-speed computer systems for scientific and engineering applications.

GREENSBURG, PA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Commerce Secretary Raymond R. Christman today presented nearly $3.6 million in state funding to General Carbide Corp. for expansion projects in the Greensburg-Hempfield Business Park that will create an estimated 73 jobs.

Christman took part in groundbreaking ceremonies for General Carbide's new $2.7 million manufacturing and administrative building in the park. Along with constructing the new facility, General Carbide plans a 6,600-square-foot expansion to its existing building in the park.

"These projects are important to this community and to this region, but, above and beyond that, they're important because they will create at least 73 new jobs for the working men and women of this area," Christman said in a check-presentation ceremony at the site.

"When you strip it all down, this is what we believe economic development is all about -- creating jobs and new opportunities for Pennsylvanians and their families."

The company manufactures and distributes custom-made cemented tungsten carbide components for industrial use.

The state has committed funding to the projects through low-interest loans from the Pennsylvania Economic Development Financing Authority (PEDFA) and Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority (PIDA) programs.

The state's investment includes $1,875,000 toward the purchase of 2.2 acres of land and construction of the 30,400-square-foot manufacturing and administrative building.

The funding includes a $1.05 million loan from PEDFA and an $825,000 PIDA loan.

PEDFA provides pooled bond issues for projects that could not obtain low-cost bond financing individually. Under the program, companies share the high, up-front costs and benefit from lower interest rates and longer term loans.

PIDA loans, awarded at below-market interest rates, may be used by manufacturers and industrial firms to purchase land and buildings for business construction or renovation.

The new facility will allow General Carbide to relocate its operations from its Ridgeland, S.C., plant and create 55 jobs in three years.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - America's first hourly newspaper will make its debut on the Pan Am Shuttle Monday, April 2.

"The Latest News" is a cooperative venture between the Pan Am Shuttle, States News Service, United Press International and Financial World Magazine. The 20-page publication will contain the latest news, stock quotes and weather reports and will be edited hourly.

The publication will be distributed, on a complimentary basis, to passengers traveling on Pan Am Shuttle's Washington to New York flights between 3:30 and 6:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

"Our commitment to the business traveler has always been a top priority at the Pan Am Shuttle," said its president, Harris Herman. "'The Latest News' will provide those passengers with late-breaking, up- to-the-hour news that has broken since publication of the early morning newspapers."

Each edition of the newspaper will carry an average of 50 news items that will be updated each hour. The editorial copy will be provided by both States News and UPI wires and will be edited and assembled by States News in Washington.

"Being Pan Am Shuttle passengers ourselves and in the news business, we were acutely aware of the news void in the afternoon flying between Washington, New York and Boston," said Leland Schwartz, editor and president of States News Service. "The solution seemed simple: produce a newspaper as though we were putting out an hourly radio news broadcast," added Schwartz.

"We think 'The Latest News' is a winner for everyone involved -- especially Pan Am Shuttle passengers," said Richard L. Cohen, senior vice president-marketing at UPI. "Our participation reflects UPI's commitment to providing the most innovative news and information services available anywhere."

"An hourly newspaper, new every hour, is particularly exciting as a media prospect. There is nothing like it published anywhere in the world," said Doug McIntyre, president and publisher at Financial World Magazine.

The results of a 45-day test will determine whether distribution will be expanded to include flights departing New York and Boston.

The Pan Am Shuttle, which is the dominant carrier in the Northeast "Power" corridor, operates every hour on the half hour between New York's Marine Air Terminal at LaGuardia Airport and both Washington's National Airport and Logan Airport in Boston.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Navy has selected Ford Aerospace as one of two finalists in a program to develop a new anti-tank weapon for the Marine Corps.

The selection, made late last month, moves Ford Aerospace into a demonstration/validation phase for the Short-Range Anti-tank Weapon, or SRAW. The company will now demonstrate its "top-attack" missile approach to providing the individual soldier a means of destroying enemy tanks.

"This is an important program to the Marine Corps and an important program to us," said Lou Loth, the program manager at Ford Aerospace's Aeronutronic Division in Newport Beach, Calif.

The Phase II contract was awarded by the Naval Surface Warfare Center (NSWC) at Dahlgren, Va., and totaled $12.98 million. This phase of the program is scheduled to last 30 months and requires Ford Aerospace to fly test missiles and to deliver additional weapons to the government for further evaluation.

Ford Aerospace was one of five companies selected in February 1989 to provide weapon concepts and designs for evaluation by the Marine Corps and NSWC.

The Phase II selection narrowed that field to Ford Aerospace and Hughes Aircraft, and one of them will be picked to proceed into full scale engineering development in 1993.

The Ford Aerospace approach to SRAW calls for mating a top-attack penetrator warhead with a small missile that relies on a trajectory flight control system to maximize the soldier's ability to hit and destroy the target.

The weapon would weigh only 20 pounds and would easily satisfy the range requirement of 500 meters. Ford Aerospace is convinced the top-attack penetrator warhead is the best solution for knocking out tanks with a missile small enough for one soldier to carry and operate.

Ford Aerospace, a wholly owned subsidiary of Ford Motor Company (NYSE: F), is a leader in command, control, communications and intelligence systems; tactical weapon systems; satellites and space systems; and professional and technical services. The corporation is headquartered in Newport Beach Calif., with major operations in California, Colorado, New Mexico, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas and the Washington metropolitan area.

HOUSTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Coastal Corporation (NYSE: CGP) said today its subsidiary, ANR Freight System, Inc., is restructuring to preserve a core trucking operation that will be capable of providing quality service in the Great Lakes area and in selected long-haul markets.

"We believe that ANR Freight will be more streamlined and efficient by focusing on those regional markets where we have traditionally been a strong performer and where we can continue to provide the best in quality customer services," said Joseph F. DeBella, president of ANR Freight.

"We have the greatest lane density and can provide the best regional service in the Great Lakes area," DeBella said. "We will also provide long-haul service between cities on selected high-density lanes where we can offer superior service."

Under the restructuring plan, ANR Freight will operate 104 terminals with more than 2,500 employees. The downsizing involves the closing of 113 mostly smaller terminals and the elimination or redeployment of underperforming or surplus assets.

Markets in which ANR Freight will concentrate its regional services are Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Wisconsin, St.

Louis, Mo., Erie, Pa., and upstate New York.

In addition, selected markets will be served in California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Maryland, Nebraska, New Jersey, metro New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas and Washington.

Coastal said it would continue to seek qualified buyers for its trucking operations and it believes that potential investors will be more attracted to the restructured core operation.

ANR Freight System, Inc., was acquired by Coastal in 1985 as part of its merger with American Natural Resources Company. Coastal has previously stated that the motor freight operations do not fit in with its long-term strategy as a diversified energy company.

The Coastal Corporation is a Houston-based energy holding company. It has consolidated assets of $8 billion and subsidiary operations in natural gas transmission and storage, oil and gas exploration and production, refining and marketing, coal and chemicals, and independent power production.

CINCINNATI (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Higher earnings before a change in accounting and lower sales were reported by Frisch's Restaurants, Inc. (AMEX: FRS) for the forty weeks ended March 4, 1990.

Craig F. Maier, president, reported that total revenue declined three percent to $110,043,532 compared to $113,419,630 last year. Net earnings before a change in accounting rose 16 percent to $1,839,864 or $.34 per share, from $1,589,132, or $.29 per share. Last year's net earnings were $2,540,196, or $.47 per share after restatement for FASB 96 "Accounting for Income Taxes."

For the twelve week third quarter total revenue declined two percent to $31,389,436 compared with $32,164,717 last year. Net earnings increased 37 percent to $215,878, or $.04 a share, compared to $158,128, or $.03 a share, for the third quarter of fiscal 1989.

Maier noted that the sales decline was the result of closing twenty restaurants combined with a moderate decline in same store sales. Eight new Big Boy restaurants plus three acquired from franchisees partially offset the sales decline.

Net earnings for the first three quarters continue to run ahead of the previous year because the losses of the closed restaurants no longer affect operating results. Net earnings for the third quarter of both years benefited from the investment income from the company's limited partnership interest in the Cincinnati Reds.

During the third quarter, the company replaced one older Big Boy restaurant. At the close of the quarter Frisch's operated 101 Big Boy Restaurants, 12 Roy Rogers Restaurants, three Prime 'n Wine Restaurants and two Quality Hotels.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Keystone Camera Corporation (AMEX: KYC) -- the sole remaining American manufacturer of conventional 35mm and 110 cameras -- today filed a petition with the United States International Trade Commission seeking to place tariffs and quotas on similar imported cameras.

It is the first petition filed under the Trade Act of 1974 since it was amended in 1988 -- when Congress assured for itself a role in which it could countermand the president in the event he declines to provide relief.

In its petition, Keystone requested imposition of a quota and increased tariff rate for a five-year period, noting that such relief would ensure that the accumulated inventory would be sold off at more rational price levels than now exist.

At the same time, Keystone asked the ITC to find that "increased imports of cameras are a substantial cause of serious injury and of the threat of serious injury to the U.S. camera industry" and that critical circumstances exist which warrant the granting of expedited, provisional relief.

The ITC is mandated to make a determination on serious injury, according to law, by late July and submit a recommendation on remedy to President Bush by late September. Statutory remedy can be provided within eight months from today or sooner, Keystone said.

With relief sought by the petition, Keystone will be able to overcome the low-priced imports that have flooded the market in the past three years -- and will ensure its future as a viable American camera manufacturer, the company said.

Keystone is one of the largest employers in the Clifton-Paterson, area -- one of the most economically depressed zones in America. Granting of relief will preserve hundreds of jobs, the company said.

The petition emphasized that the root cause of serious injury to Keystone has been the price depression caused by foreign cameras, which have flooded the United States market and threatened Keystone's basic ability to compete.

SEATTLE (MARCH 290 PR NEWSWIRE - Avensa, a privately owned Venezuelan airline, will become the first Latin American carrier to operate Boeing 757s in commercial service, Boeing Commercial Airplane Group said today. The airline has acquired two 757s, formerly flown by Air Europe, to replace Boeing 727s.

Avensa will use the advanced-technology twinjets on its flights to Miami and New York. The carrier will take delivery of the aircraft this week and inaugurate 757 service in April. The aircraft are powered by Rolls-Royce RB211-535 engines.

Avensa is Venezuela's most rapidly growing airline and the country's only carrier with an all-Boeing fleet.

High-bypass-ratio engines combined with an advanced wing design help make the Boeing 757 one of the quietest, most fuel-efficient jetliners in the world. The engines have large-diameter fans which move more air around the outside of the hot core, boosting efficiency while reducing noise.

When compared to any single-aisle jetliner in service today, the 757 is unsurpassed in fuel-efficiency. It consumes up to 43 percent less fuel per seat than older trijets and up to 21 percent less than competing twinjets. In a typical two-class configuration, the 757 carries 186 passengers.

The flight deck of the 757 is one of the most advanced in service today. Designed for two-crew operation, it is furnished with state-of-the-art digital electronics and cathode ray tube (CRT) displays.

A computerized, fully integrated flight management system provides for automatic guidance and control of the 757 from immediately after takeoff to final approach and landing. Linking together digital processors controlling navigation, guidance and engine thrust, the flight management system assures the aircraft flies the most efficient route and flight profile for reduced fuel consumption, flight time and crew workload.

The Boeing 757 can qualify for extended range operations (EROPS) similar to the widebody Boeing 767-200 and -300 twinjets. High-gross-weight versions of the 757 can fly 4,500 statute miles (7240 km) nonstop with full passenger payload.

To date, a total of 632 Boeing 757s have been ordered by 32 customers worldwide.

UTICA, NY (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Conmed Corporation (NASDAQ: CNMD) today announced it recorded net sales of $6.6 million and $19.9 million for the three and 12 months ended Dec. 29, 1989, an increase of 84.7 percent and 62.0 percent as compared to the comparable periods in 1988. Conmed recorded a net loss for the quarter of $867,000, or net loss per share of $.30 compared to 1988 quarterly earnings of $135,000, or earnings per share of $.05. For the 12 months ended Dec. 29, 1989, the company recorded a net loss of $624,000, or net loss per share of $.21 compared to net income of $800,000, or earnings per share of $.27 for the 12 months ended Dec. 30, 1988. The increase in sales is due principally to the sales of Aspen Laboratories, Inc. (acquired on Aug. 31, 1989) and continued growth in foreign sales and the sales of traditional Conmed products.

The decrease in earnings for the three and 12 months ended Dec. 29, 1989, compared to the same period in 1988 is attributed to the following occurrences:

In December 1989, the company's board of directors acted to discontinue the operations of the Medac Inc. subsidiary, a manufacturer and distributor of non-invasive pacemakers and defibrillators. Medac was acquired in 1987 and operated with losses in 1988 and 1989. As a result of realigned product emphasis after the acquisition of Aspen and because of the need for continuing investment in the Medac product line to achieve acceptable levels of profitability, the company concluded it would be in its best interest to discontinue the subsidiary's activities. Accordingly the three and 12 months ended Dec. 29, 1989, reflect a loss on the discontinued operations of Medac.

During the fourth quarter of 1989, management critically reviewed all of its products to determine those with continued viability and those which should be eliminated from the product line. Based upon this review, surplus and obsolete inventory, as well as related tooling and equipment, was charged to cost of sales from continuing operations. While focusing the company's attention on viable products, these charges caused gross margins to decrease in 1989 compared to 1988.

Eugene R. Corasanti, chairman of the board and president of Conmed, said, "These necessary actions, while reducing profitability during 1989, focus the company's attention on core products. We have already taken actions to reduce costs and eliminate inefficiencies. As a result, we believe we are now positioned for profitable operations in 1990 and beyond."

PHILADELPHIA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) today in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) detailed the potential effects on the company's earnings that would result if the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC) adopts a rate order consistent with its non-binding polling conducted on March 22, 1990.

PE said in the filing: "If the final PUC order is consistent with the March 22, 1990, non-binding polling, thereby reducing the company's requested increase by approximately $300 million, the company's future annual earnings would be reduced by almost $1.00 per share and the company would be unable to maintain its common stock dividend at the current level of $2.20 per share. In addition, the company would incur a one-time charge against 1990 income of approximately $255 million, equivalent to $1.20 per common share. The company's ability to access the capital markets could also be adversely affected, possibly resulting in increased capital costs."

The PUC is scheduled to make a final decision on the $549 million request on April 19.

BOSTON, MA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - 3M (NYSE: MMM) expects higher sales and earnings for the first quarter and all of 1990, company officials told investment analysts here today.

Roger W. Roberts, senior vice president, Finance, said first- quarter results will benefit from continued solid international unit-volume growth productivity gains and a lower effective tax rate. In the three months ended March 31, 1989, 3M earned $318 million, or $1.43 a share, on sales of $3.02 billion.

Roberts said it appears that international volume growth for the quarter will be close to the 13 percent 3M averaged in 1989. This would be the company's ninth consecutive quarter of double- digit unit-volume growth in international markets.

In the United States, 3M's unit growth for the quarter is expected to be positive, but less than the 3 percent recorded in each of the past three quarters. "This reflects slowing of the U.S. economy, which continues to affect a number of our businesses, particularly in the Industrial and Electronic Sector," Roberts said.

Changes in the value of the U.S. dollar are expected to reduce growth in first-quarter earnings by about 5 cents a share.

3M also looks for higher full-year sales and earnings. The company said that growth will be driven by several factors, including:

-- A continuation of solid international volume growth. -- Somewhat better U.S. volume growth for the year than in the first quarter, with most of this improvement showing up in the second half;

-- Ongoing productivity improvement; -- A lessening of negative currency effects; and -- A continued lower tax rate than in 1989. The company estimates that, if the U.S. dollar remains at current levels, currency effects will reduce growth in 1990 earnings by about 5 to 10 cents a share. This means "a lot of the negative impact will be felt in the first quarter," Roberts said.

3M's tax rate for the first quarter and year 1990 is expected to be about one-half of a percentage point to a full point lower than the 39.3 percent averaged in 1989.

SHREVEPORT, LA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Arkla Exploration Co. (NYSE: ARK) announced today that it had formed a joint program to participate in certain onshore exploration and development projects along the Texas Gulf Coast over the next three years.

The program will spend approximately $25 million on select onshore drilling prospects in the Yegua, Wilcox and Frio Trends of the Texas coastal region.

The company will be joined in the program by ONEOK Exploration Co. of Tulsa and an individual investor, said Carl S. Quinn, chairman and chief executive officer of Arkla Exploration.

FARMINGTON HILLS, MI (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Medar, Inc. (NASDAQ: MDXR) reported net earnings for its fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, of $111,840, or $.02 per share, on sales of $3,916,716, compared to a net loss for the fourth quarter of 1988 of $43,986, or $.01 per share, on sales of $4,004,119. The company reported a net loss for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, of $1,137,983, or $.21 per share, on sales of $14,270,983, compared to a net loss in 1988 of $1,490,317, or $.28 per share, on sales of $14,468,657.

While the automotive demand for welding controls remained weak in 1989, the company has continued to expand its sales in the machine vision market principally through its compact disc inspection system. Further growth in machine vision is expected. In addition, based upon customer commitments to new vehicles and style changes announced to date, the company believes that sales of resistance welding controls to automobile manufacturers will increase in 1990. Cost reductions resulting from the centralization of production activities of both resistance welding controls and certain machine vision products has reduced the company's break-even point, which, in addition to the forecasted increase in sales, is expected to improve earnings in 1990.

Medar designs and manufactures computer-controlled automation equipment, including vision gauging and inspection systems, resistance welding controls, computer communication systems and automation machinery. Medar's customers include major companies in the defense, aerospace, automobile, appliance, entertainment and consumer goods packaging industries.

WORCESTER, MA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Norton Company (NYSE: NRT) today recommended that Norton shareholders reject BTR plc's unsolicited tender offer.

The Norton board determined that the $75 per share amount of the offer is inadequate and that, particularly in light of Norton's future prospects, the company's remaining an independent entity would be a superior alternative to BTR's inadequate offer.

In rejecting the BTR offer, the board reviewed the company's long-term strategic plan and reaffirmed its belief that continuing to follow this carefully structured plan will produce greater long-term value for shareholders than a sale of the company. Accordingly, the board determined that the offer is not in the best interests of Norton, its shareholders or the other constituencies of the company. In reaching its decision, the board relied in part on the opinion of its financial advisor Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, that the BTR offer is inadequate to Norton shareholders from a financial point of view.

Because of the timing of BTR's offer, the board said it had not had adequate time to explore, study and evaluate all of the alternatives that may be available to Norton, and that it needed additional time beyond the scheduled April 26 annual meeting of shareholders for such purpose. Accordingly, the board said it canceled the April 26 meeting and, in lieu thereof, in order to obtain the necessary additional time, has called a special meeting of shareholders for the election of directors on June 26. The board said it established June 1 as the record date for this special meeting.

The board said Norton's strategic plan focuses on developing Norton's unique strengths, including extensive materials knowledge in abrasives, ceramics, diamonds and plastics; significant processing skills to turn these materials into useful products; and Norton's global presence, and corporate opportunities that best fit these strengths and have the strongest growth potential, including seeded-gel products, diamond film, the "wear" business, industrial distribution systems and performance plastics.

Norton's current 12-member board includes 10 outside directors and two management directors.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Jean Philippe Fragrances, Inc. (NASDAQ: JEAN) reported that for fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989, sales increased to $5,148,719 from $4,510,231, an increase of 14 percent. Net income in 1989 was $504,169 as compared to $521,623 in 1988. Earnings per share in both periods were $.07.

Net sales for the 1989 fourth quarter rose approximately 14 percent to $1,785,522 and net income for such quarter rose approximately 15 percent to $241,044 as compared to the 1988 fourth-quarter figures.

In announcing 1989 results, Jean Madar, the president of Jean Philippe Fragrances stated:

"The anticipated cost of the Regine's launch had an impact on the 1989 net income. However, these costs are now behind us. Despite these additional one-time costs and an increase in the number of shares outstanding we maintained the same level of earnings per share."

For 1990, the company is projecting an approximate doubling of sales to the $10 million-$10.5 million range, and net income of about $1 million, based upon the January acquisition of Jordache Fragrances and Cosmetics, and sales growth for both the exclusive Regine's and the Jean Philippe lines of alternative prestige fragrances.

Mader said, "We foresee 1990 as a very productive year for our company, with growth on three fronts. The acquisition of Jordache Fragrances and Cosmetics will add materially to revenue growth and market penetration.

This acquisition leads us into the cosmetics business and opens world markets to Jean Philippe, as well as Jordache's 9,000-customer roster in the U.S., many of which are not presently carrying the Jean Philippe lines. And, of course, we expect to introduce Jordache products to our own existing customer base.

"Also, the Jordache fragrance lines enable us to add a mid-priced original fragrance to our present alternative fragrance products for the mass markets and our top-of-the-line Regine's original perfume for the upscale department store customer," Madar noted.

Jean Philippe Fragrances, Inc., based in New York, was founded in 1985 and became publicly owned in 1988. The company markets an extensive line of French-made alternative prestige fragrances in the United States and Canada and holds the exclusive license for the United States and Canada for the new Regine's original perfume for the upscale department store market. Today, some 18,000 outlets, including most of the major drug, specialty and mass merchandising chains, carry Jean Philippe products.

TORONTO (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Metall Mining Corporation reported today that income before extraordinary items increased to $31,803,000 or $0.84 per share for the year ended December 31, 1989, from a restated $31,480,000 or $0.83 per share in 1988.

Metall is a Canadian-based international mining company with significant direct and indirect interests in copper, zinc, lead, gold and silver. Metall's share of mine production in 1989 amounted to 61,000 tons of copper, 62,000 tons of zinc, 30,000 tons of lead, 102,000 ounces of gold and 2.9 million ounces of silver.

Dr. Klaus M. Zeitler, president and chief executive officer, said that income before extraordinary items in 1989 was positively affected by the acquisition of the Copper Range Company and from higher earnings of Cominco Ltd. and Ok Tedi Mining Limited. Metall's share of earnings from Teck Corporation declined as 1988 results reflect a fifteen month period due to a change in Teck's 1988 year end.

Net income for the year was $34,304,000 or $0.91 per share as compared to $42,144,000 or $1.12 per share in 1988. Extraordinary items of $2,501,000 in 1989 and $10,664,000 in 1988 reflect primarily the recovery of prior years' tax losses as well as Metall's share of the extraordinary items of Teck and Cominco.

Sales were $111,594,000 in 1989. The acquisition of Copper Range was completed in the second quarter of 1989 and, accordingly, no sales are reported for 1988.

Income before extraordinary items for the quarter end Dec. 31, 1989 was $5,075,000 or $0.13 per share compared to $13,395,000 or $0.35 per share in the fourth quarter of 1988. Net income for the fourth quarter was $6,480,000 or $0.17 per share compared to $17,455,000 or $0.46 per share in 1988.

Earnings before extraordinary items in the fourth quarter were lower than in 1988 primarily as a result of a decrease in Metall's share of earnings of Cominco. Cominco reported record earnings in the fourth quarter of 1988 principally due to higher prices for zinc and copper. In the fourth quarter of 1989, Cominco was adversely impacted by the Highland Valley Copper mine strike as well as lower production from the Sullivan mine.

LAFOX, IL (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Richardson Electronics, Ltd. (NASDAQ-NMS: RELL) today reported sales and earnings for the third quarter and nine months ended Feb. 28, 1990.

The company announced sales for the quarter were $40,145,000, a slight increase over last year's figure of $39,602,000. Sales for the nine months of fiscal 1990 advanced 5 percent to $114,829,000.

Net loss for the third quarter was $(3,127,000), or $(.28) per share, compared with net income of $3,014,000, or $.27 per share in the similar period last year. The current quarter reflects special charges of $6.5 million, or $.36 per share, related to the anticipated disposal of certain inventory items at reduced values and costs associated with its manufacturing restructuring. Net loss for the nine month period was $(694,000), or $(.06) per share, compared with net income of $8,786,000, or $.79 per share for the same period last year. Average number of shares outstanding for the period is 11,090,000.

Discussing the results, Edward J. Richardson, chairman and CEO noted, "During the third quarter, the company concluded an extensive review and reassessment of its changing markets and related inventory levels. For instance, the major reduction in orders from U.S. Defense agencies and an anticipated further decline in worldwide military applications will have a significant effect on the range of products the company now distributes. This review was combined with plans to streamline warehousing costs and redirect inventory investment to better service continuing product markets. Accordingly, the company recognized a $4 million charge in the current quarter to reflect anticipated disposal of certain inventory items at reduced values."

Richardson further added, "The company continues to experience costs related to its manufacturing restructuring. These costs have resulted from additional delays in achieving full scale production from certain product lines, equipment shortages due to delivery delays, and other inefficiencies. As a result, a charge of $2,500,000 is being taken in the current quarter. However, our fundamental business remains strong and I am confident these efforts will result in improved profitability in the future."

"This past year has been a very difficult period for the company particularly with respect to the Department of Justice investigation of the Power Grid Tube market. The investigation has stretched to over one year and legal and administrative costs continue to erode earnings and affect our revenues. We are cooperating fully with the government and look forward to an early resolution of this issue."

Richardson Electronics is an international distributor and manufacturer of electron tubes and power semiconductors with 20 offices throughout the United States, Europe and Japan.

DANBURY, CT (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Business has a great social responsibility in two of the most significant issues of the 1990s -- the environment and education -- says Union Carbide Chairman Robert D. Kennedy.

"Our responsibilities go beyond the bottom line. We can't ignore the problems of the community -- or the world -- around us," Kennedy told area business colleagues at a leaders luncheon sponsored by the Greater Danbury Chamber of Commerce.

Kennedy said that the environment should be at the top of every business agenda. He noted that the chemical industry in 1988 adopted "Responsible Care," an initiative that sets out standards of environmental and safety performance for the more than 170 member companies of the Chemical Manufacturers Association. Commitment to "Responsible Care" standards means that the CMA members, which manufacture over 90 percent of all the industrial chemicals in North America, have a stewardship for their products from development to disposal, Kennedy explained.

In a local environmental project, Kennedy said that as the result of the first six months of a paper recycling program at Union Carbide's Danbury headquarters, the equivalent of more than 2,400 trees were saved.

On education, Kennedy said "Our best students are just as good as the best students in any other country. But our best students are only 10 percent of our students. We have to work on everyone else. One million young people drop out of high school every year. Drop-out rates approach 50 percent in some inner cities."

Noting that Connecticut has made significant gains in education in the last few years, Kennedy said, "Even the state with the best school system should not be satisfied with what it has. The Japanese certainly aren't resting on their educational achievements. Neither are the Germans or anyone else. And they're all ahead of us to begin with."

Kennedy said that a Connecticut initiative by state businesses in partnership with education leaders is underway as the result of a challenge by President Bush to The Business Roundtable for business to get involved in improving education.

The Connecticut group, headed by Kennedy, will work toward the development of an educational system that meets the principles of excellence, accountability and quality control.

The Union Carbide chairman warned that if the United States fails to provide quality education to everyone, we will evolve into a two-tier society. "The inferior education that a vast majority of American students are getting now is eroding the middle class and doing almost nothing for the inner cities of America," he said. "That threatens the very foundation of our democratic society."

CHARLOTTE, NC (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Charlotte celebrates its 50-year anniversary in 1990. "First Federal attributes its success and profitable history to sound management and a philosophy of steady growth," says Bob Waugh, First Federal President.

A history of "firsts" has spurred First Federal's growth and stability. First Federal opened in 1940 with assets of $350,472. It was the first federally chartered savings institution in Charlotte.

The number of branches has grown from the initial location at 119 W. Fourth St. in Charlotte to nine branches across Charlotte and locations in Troy, Rockingham, and Biscoe. The Charlotte corporate headquarters is located at 801 E. Morehead St. First Federal also was the first savings and loan in Charlotte to install automated teller machines.

Another first was the "Early Mortgage Program," allowing prospective borrowers to pre-qualify for a home loan under a 90-day commitment at a specific interest rate. A similar program to pre-qualify mortgage loan customers is still offered today through First Residential Mortgage Group.

First Federal's subsidiaries include First Residential Mortgage Group, a home mortgage lender with offices in Charlotte and Greensboro, and Realtec Appraisal Group, an inspection and home appraisal firm.

First Federal recently became one of North Carolina's strongest savings institutions with its conversion to a stock savings and loan association. In June the conversion and the sale of First Federal's stock to Fairfield Communities, Inc. of Little Rock, Arkansas was completed.

This strengthened asset base made First Federal the 13th largest savings and loan association in North Carolina. After the conversion and transaction with Fairfield Communities, First Federal's assets rose to $393 million, and today they are at $483 million.

As part of the 50th Anniversary celebration First Federal is becoming a Habitat for Humanity Master Builder and sponsoring the construction of a Habitat house. "We are committed to this community," said Bob Waugh, President, First Federal, "and the concept of homeownership. This program demonstrates our desire to support that concept."

HARTFORD, CT (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Rogers (AMEX: ROG) projects first quarter sales volume will be the highest in the company's history. Earnings are expected to be better than those for the comparable 1989 period, Norman L. Greenman, president of Rogers, told shareholders at the company's annual meeting today. He stated, "Profits are being held down by start-up problems in new microwave circuits and in the ramp to full-scale production of multimetal layer TAB components, as well as lower than expected sales in Europe."

Greenman said, "Continuing progress is being made in the Flexible Interconnections Division, which had record sales and further improvements in operations in the first quarter."

"The matrix material printing plate product line of the Molding Materials Division was sold in the first quarter. This will allow the division more effectively to concentrate its resources on product areas where significant growth opportunities have been developed," Greenman said.

At today's annual meeting, 93 percent of the outstanding shares were represented, and all directors nominated were elected. Two new directors, D. Bruce Merrifield, former assistant secretary of the United States Department of Commerce and now professor of management at The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, and William R. Thurston, chairman of the board of GenRad, Inc. (NYSE: GEN), were elected members of the board of directors. Carl N. Hansen, board member since 1979, retired from the board.

Headquartered in Rogers, Conn., Rogers manufactures a broad range of engineered materials and components for the electronics and other selected industrial markets at 17 locations in the U.S., Europe and Mexico.

CHARLOTTE, NC (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - First Federal of Charlotte will award a vocational summer work grant for a Construction Technology student in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system at Habitat for Humanity's year-end banquet at Garinger High School.

Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit organization which builds homes in partnership with low-income families. In 1989 the Charlotte Home Builders Women's Council in conjunction with the Charlotte Mecklenburg Schools designed a program that enabled vocational students from 10 area high schools to serve as volunteer builders for Habitat.

Two new houses were built entirely by these students and their teachers. Any student who has helped build a Habitat house is eligible to apply for the grant, which will provide employment for the summer with Habitat.

"This is an outstanding opportunity for young people," says Susan Hancock, Executive Director of Habitat House, "because they learn about low income families and community service while learning about their trade."

Bob Waugh, President of First Federal, said, "We feel that a person who supplements classroom instruction with community involvment should be encouraged to continue their education. This scholarship is our way of showing First Federal's commitment to those who are dedicated to growing and learning."

"We'd like to express our appreciation to First Federal for encouraging the vocational students by giving them a pat on the back," said Maggie Gamble of the Charlotte Homebuilders Women's Council. "We have been thrilled with the participation and enthusiasm we've gotten from the CMS and thrilled with the support we've received from First Federal."

LONDON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - United Newspapers plc (NASDAQ: UNEWY) today reported pre-tax profits for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, of 111.2 million pounds sterling ($179.0 million), up 3.2 percent over 107.7 million pounds in 1988.

Net profit before extraordinary items increased 1.5 percent to 76.6 million pounds ($123.4 million), or earnings per ordinary share of 38.0 pence ($.61), as compared with 71.5 million pounds, or 37.5 pence, the year earlier.

Turnover was 801.6 million pounds ($1,290.6 million), up 6.3 percent over 753.8 million pounds the previous year.

According to Lord Stevens of Ludgate, chairman of the board of United Newspapers: "This was achieved in spite of difficult trading conditions in the second half of 1989."

The board of directors is recommending a final dividend of 13.5 pence, which would result in a total dividend for the year of 21.0 pence, as compared with 20.5 pence last year. ADS holders will receive the dividend translated at the rate of exchange in effect on the payment date.

"1989 was a year of mixed performances," Lord Stevens said. "The results are presented so as to reflect the divisional structure of the group as it is now managed.

"Although the effect of acquisitions played a part, there were strong underlying performances displaying good internal growth in regional newspapers and advertising periodicals. These two divisions generated 45 percent of operating profit and continued to show satisfying advertising gains throughout the year. Advertising revenues increased 12 percent in regional newspapers, and 20 percent in United Kingdom (UK) advertising periodicals. After allowing for the full-year effect of acquisitions, a 27-percent revenue gain was seen in U.S. periodicals.

"These strong performances, at a time of increasing pressure on both advertising volumes and rates, speak well for the respective management efforts and overall quality and strength of the titles themselves, which should hold us in good stead during 1990 and beyond," Lord Stevens said.

"It would be unwise of me to anticipate our performance in 1990. The year has started flat, and it is clear that the current high- interest rate policy will continue to affect consumer spending and related business expenditures. A number of our publication and businesses will not be able to escape the consequences of reduced advertising expenditures.

"Current high interest rates will continue to inflate our interest costs although two-thirds of the year-end debt was either in dollars or at a fixed sterling rate of 8 percent. Now that the major capital expenditure in restructuring the company is complete, we can expect, in 1990 and beyond, the generation of cash flows each year which can be employed in the business," Lord Stevens said.

"With the current downturn in advertising expenditures in the UK, it is difficult to forecast the rest of 1990 with any certainty. I am hopeful that, even if profits do not increase, the group has established a secure foundation from which to take rapid advantage as soon as the economy picks up again.

"During the last half of 1989, the tightening effects of the government's anti-inflation policy hit the magazine division in the UK, and resulted in reduced advertising with competitive pressure on rates and circulation. However, market shares were, on the whole, maintained.

"Tolley Publishing and Farming Press were notably successful in difficult markets. In the United States, after an indifferent start to the year, advertising volumes, although hard to win, stood up well in comparison with 1988. Gralla Publications benefited from the redirection introduced under its new management team, and Miller Freeman demonstrated the strength of its diversification and launch policy," Lord Stevens said.

"A very satisfying performance was achieved by the exhibition businesses in both the UK and the United States, where recent investments are developing well.

"The well-publicized weakness in the financial markets caused the information services division to record a marginally reduced performance overall, though there were some good signs of underlying growth in a number of specific areas and continued product development. The results are affected by the adverse trading performance of the computer maintenance division following the closure in June 1989 of the racing news service," Lord Stevens said.

"The performance of the national newspaper division was clearly a disappointment. Additional revenue from an increase in the cover price of all three titles (the Daily Express, the Daily Star and the Sunday Express) during the year was insufficient to outweigh reduced revenue from the decline in circulations on a year-to-year basis, as well as the cost of the editorial investment in the papers themselves.

"The moves into new editorial and printing facilities, completed ahead of schedule, have resulted in greatly improved production times which, together with the effective use of full color and overall higher print quality, have greatly improved our product," he said. "The manpower reduction and capital investment programs are now substantially complete and are in line with our original targets; the continuing need to increase circulation to reflect the editorial improvements remains a high priority.

"In this respect, the Daily Express showed month-to-month circulation gains in five, and the Daily Star in three, of the last six months of 1989. Our experience in the first two months of 1990 is one of stable circulation with marginally increased market share. Sunday Express circulations, however, remain a matter of concern," Lord Stevens said.

"Following an appraisal of the potential to develop the general sports agency business in a limited market after the ending of the current agreement with the Press Association in June 1990, it was decided to dispose of Extel's general sports business to the Press Association for 5 million pounds. The sale was completed today, March 29, 1990.

"The group continued to make selective acquisitions to support and develop its position in its chosen markets in the UK and the United States; some 54 million pounds was spent in 1989, principally in the United States. The major acquisitions were of eight apartment rental advertising periodicals in California and the Midwest, as well as two leading titles in the U.S. music instrument market," Lord Stevens said.

"At the same time, the commitment to invest in product development continued on both sides of the Atlantic, particularly in magazines, both business and consumer, as well as in the information services division, where new PC-based and on-line products serving corporate data users were introduced.

"Auto Express, launched in September 1988, was voted consumer magazine of the year for 1989 by Media Week and has maintained its position as the biggest selling motoring magazine in the U.K.," Lord Stevens said. "We have strong hopes for this title.

"In January 1989, United Newspapers acquired Expoconsult (Mentor Marketing Services), a Dutch-based exhibition business which will provide the platform for the development of a European exhibition business, for 24 million pounds.

"The restructuring of the share capital of Reuters Holdings PLC in April 1989 enabled the directors to revalue the group's interest in 12.1 million Reuters' shares to 82.3 million pounds, giving rise to a net extraordinary gain of 36.4 million pounds. The shares were used to secure long-term financing, of 105 million pounds at 8 percent by way of a preferred share issue in a subsidiary company, to reduce the overall cost of group borrowing.

"The accounts reflect the application of the accounting standard on the treatment of pension contributions (SSAP 24) for the first time. The accounting surplus credit in 1989 was 5 million pounds, which arises primarily in the regional newspapers division. Although the principle of SSAP 24 is stated to be recognition of the cost of providing pensions on a systematic and rational basis, the treatment of the accounting surpluses that arise do not necessarily reflect the actual level of funding within any particular pension scheme nor the level of assets available to secure the pension benefits of members and pensioners," Lord Stevens said.

"Thus, there is a difference between the net cost of charging pension contributions to the profit and loss account on the one hand and the actual cash contributions paid into the pension schemes on the other. These accounting surpluses will continue to be recognized as a credit in the profit and loss account over a 15-year period.

"The pension schemes themselves will continue to be managed by the trustees and their employing companies on the same basis as previously with the interests of the pensioners and present employees unaffected by the change.

"The strength of the U.S. dollar contributed 2 million pounds to profits compared with the overall exchange rate used in 1988," he said.

The exchange rate is one pound equals $1.61.

Or you could use Southern Bell's new Quick(SM) service and start looking for your wallet to pay for the pizza.

Quick service, which is now available throughout the company's North Carolina network, is designed to give customers same-day connection service on orders placed before 3 p.m. on weekdays.

Joseph P. Lacher, Southern Bell's vice president for North Carolina, said saving customers time and making doing business with the company easier is what Quick service is all about.

"We are constantly looking for ways to improve our service," said Lacher. "Quick service is just one of the ways new technology -- and the commitment to excellence on the part of our employees -- makes such innovations possible."

Lacher said the new service capitalizes on the company's system of computerized central offices.

The idea for Quick service was born in North Carolina, he said. The operating territory is the first in the Bellsouth (NYSE: BLS) system to implement it.

Quick service changes past connecting procedures by allowing customers to call Southern Bell's business office from their new residence. Previously, a person moving into a residence had to call the office from another location to request service.

But with Quick service, a dial tone is left on the line when a previous resident moves out. When a new customer moves in, all they need to do is plug in their phone and dial 780-BELL to place their order. Southern Bell checks the line for problems, issues the customer a new telephone number and adds his new address and number to the directory listing.

"We frequently ran into situations where customers might not know their new address or have nothing more than a post office box number," said Lacher. "This meant dispatching a technician to the residence or spending considerable time searching for the information we needed to set up service. The result was it could take four or more working days for a customer to get service."

Quick service is available only to residential customers moving into previously occupied houses or apartments. Customers moving into new homes, where there has been no service, should contact the company's business office to arrange for service as they have in the past.

Quick service was developed last year by a statewide team of mid-level managers given the charge of streamlining the service order process with existing capabilities, said Lacher.

"We gave them the assignment of finding ways we could improve our service " Lacher said. "Quick Service is one of the answers they gave us. We are extremely proud of that task force and the work they have done."

Quick service is expected to be offered in Southern Bell's South Carolina, Georgia and Florida operating areas this summer.

CHICAGO (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - First Chicago Corp. (NYSE: FNB) said a preliminary estimate for the first quarter indicates that earnings will decline about 50 percent from the level of a year ago, due primarily to an increase in the loan loss provision for commercial real estate loans. In addition, profits from venture capital and trading activities will be lower than expected for the quarter. Earnings for the first quarter will include a gain of $52 million from the partial settlement of the First National Bank of Chicago's pension obligations.

In the 1989 first quarter, First Chicago reported fully diluted operating earnings of $1.72 a share or $120 million.

First Chicago also said the loan loss provision is expected to be in the range of $150 million to $160 million and nonperforming assets will increase about 15 percent from the year-end total of $1.1 billion.

"Commercial real estate loans have become a widespread problem for the banking industry and First Chicago is not immune to this trend. We have been affected by several problem situations despite our well diversified portfolio," Chairman Barry F. Sullivan said. "We expect however that the loan loss provision will return to normal levels after the first quarter and we are optimistic about our prospects for the remainder of the year."

MIAMI (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Lennar Corporation (NYSE: LEN), one of the nation's leading home building and real estate organizations, today reported first quarter 1990 revenues and earnings.

Leonard Miller, chairman of the board and president, announced earnings of $3,280,000, or $.33 per share, on revenues of $81,431,000 for the quarter ended Feb. 28, 1990, compared with earnings of $5,767,000, or $.58 per share, and revenues of $84,645,000 for the same period of 1989. The company closed 702 home sales during the first quarter of 1990 compared with 833 closings during the same period of 1989.

At Feb. 28, 1990, Lennar had approximately $145 million in backlog of home sales for future delivery, as compared to $212 million at Feb. 28, 1989. These dollar amounts represent a 1,507 backlog of home sales as of Feb. 28 1990, as compared to a backlog of 2,378 a year earlier (A).

Miller stated that Lennar's first quarter 1990 results reflect the slower housing market generally being experienced in Florida and that the company's performance during the balance of 1990 would probably be below levels achieved in the prior year. He voiced great optimism about Lennar's financial strength and unique position in the market place. He concluded that the decline in the housing market, coupled with less real estate credit availability, would likely result in reduced competition and new opportunities for Lennar.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - At 4 p.m. EST today, Robert J. Herrmann, senior deputy comptroller for bank supervision, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), declared First National Bank of Garland Garland, Texas, insolvent.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) was appointed as receiver.

The bank became a matter of concern to the OCC in 1988. Poor underwriting standards and character based lending without adequate attention to collateral and the borrowers' ability to repay resulted in an excessive amount of problem loans. The bank entered into an agreement with the OCC in 1988 to correct deficiencies. However, substantial improvement was never reached and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency.

First National Bank of Garland received a national bank charter on Aug. 2, 1982. On Feb. 28, 1990, it had total assets of approximately $10 million.

The FDIC is expected to release additional information later today.

CALGARY, ALBERTA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Amoco Canada Petroleum Company Ltd. (Toronto: AN) today announced financial and operating results for 1989, reporting a net loss of $203 million, compared with a loss of $52 million for 1988.

The company attributed the larger loss to the fact that the 1988 results represented eight months of pre-merger, Amoco Canada-only operations, which were profitable, combined with four months of merged operations, during which interest and other costs associated with the merger with Dome Petroleum had a dramatic negative effect.

''Everyone should be careful in comparing our 1988 and 1989 results,'' said T. Don Stacy, Amoco's chairman and president. ''The figures are distorted by the fact that 1989 respresents a full year of operations following the merger with Dome Petroleum Limited, while 1988 represents eight months of Amoco-only operations, followed by four months of merged operations.''

''On a quarter by quarter basis, our results are improving, so the trend is right,'' Stacy said.

The company reported 1989 revenues of $3.5 billion, up from $2.1 billion in 1988, largely due to reporting 12 months of merged operations in 1989 versus four months of merged operations in 1988. Operating profit for 1989 was $294 million, up from $174 million in 1988, due mainly to increased volumes.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Ironstone Group Inc. (NASDAQ: IRON) announced today that it had signed an agreement with Texas Meridian Resources Ltd. which provides for the sale to Texas Meridian, upon the fulfillment of certain conditions, of approximately 82 percent of Ironstone's interest in American National Petroleum Co. for cash of $15.6 million and the assumption of certain contingent obligations. The sale would result in a gain to Ironstone before expenses and taxes of approximately $6.3 million. The transaction also involves the subsequent business combination of Texas Meridian and ANPC on a pro rata basis with all oil and gas properties valued on the basis of written reports of independent petroleum engineers prepared using Securities and Exchange Commission standard pricing and a 10 percent discount rate. As part of the transaction, Ironstone will purchase at book value ANPC's interests in certain energy-related enterprises and will enter into a consulting agreement with Texas Meridian to provide continuing services for a specified period. Michael Y. McGovern, president of ANPC, will become an officer of Ironstone and president of the subsidiary which will conduct the energy-related businesses.

The consummation of the sale transaction is subject to the execution of a mutually acceptable definitive agreement regarding the business combination, the finalization of the necessary financing and the fulfillment of other conditions customary in transactions of this nature.

The business combination of ANPC and Texas Meridian is also subject to the approval of the ANPC board of directors and stockholders and the Texas Meridian unitholders and the receipt of appropriate fairness opinions. It is expected that the transactions, if consummated, will be closed during mid-1990.

Ironstone also announced that, as part of the turnaround of its wholesale plumbing operations, it was further restructuring those operations by eliminating additional losing operations and consolidating administrative functions. The additional restructuring will result in a material charge for the fourth quarter of 1989 which will increase the loss for that period.

Philip J. Ablove, president of Ironstone, noted that the proposed transaction with Texas Meridian resulted form a review of Ironstone's strategic direction in light of current market conditions and a desire to position the company for further growth. He stated that "recently there has been an increased interest in purchasing reserves which we believe will facilitate a necessary consolidation among smaller oil and gas companies in order to enhance their value. The proposed sale recognizes this opportunity to reflect a good return on our investment and affords us the liquidity to take advantage of further turnaround investment opportunities which we expect to arise." Ablove further commented that the proposed transaction is intended to benefit ANPC shareholder values by enabling ANPC to become part of a larger organization. He also expressed confidence in the ability of the Texas Meridian management team to successfully manage the combined enterprise toward continued growth.

Ironstone Group Inc., through its majority owned subsidiaries, Iron- Oak Supply Corp. and American National Petroleum Co. (NASDAQ: ANPC), is engaged in wholesale distribution of plumbing and mechanical supplies and equipment and in oil and gas exploration and production and energy related services. Its common stock is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol IRON.

DEARBORN, MI (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS) and its Consumers Power subsidiary today announced they expect to appeal Circuit Court Judge Thomas Brown's decision granting a preliminary injunction against the transfer of CMS Energy's equity and debt interests in the Midland Cogeneration Venture (MCV).

The company said the judge's preliminary injunction is not a decision on the merits of the question of the authority of the Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) to prevent such a transfer, which will require further proceedings.

The company stated its satisfaction over Judge Brown's observations about the MPSC's lack of jurisdiction over CMS Energy's nonutility subsidiaries.

Consumers Power stated its intention to file an application with the MPSC in compliance with Judge Brown's direction and his interpretation of Condition II of the Financial Stabilization Order issued in 1985. The company also said it is pleased with the 45-day deadline set by Judge Brown for completion of this proceeding and expects that the MCV will go forward with its previous financing plans, including a proposed MCV sale/leaseback.

LONDON, (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - John C. Cahill, Chief Executive Officer of BTR plc, today stated, "The recommendation by the Norton board of directors that Norton shareholders reject ER Holdings' all cash tender offer of $75 per share is disappointing, particularly since the board reached its decision by, among other things, intentionally spurning all our repeated attempts to meet with it, management or their respective advisors to ensure that the best interests of all parties and their constituencies be served.

"Of course, we disagree with the board's posture. The board's and management's comfort in Norton's performance and future prospects would appear to be at severe odds with what has been written recently in professional investment research reports and in a stock price that in the entire history of the company has never gone above $64 per share. The Norton strategic plan, referred to by the board in the announcement of its recommendation, is ancient history and already fully known to the investment marketplace.

"Apparently the board's conduct with regard to the offer has been to spend time developing the poison pill defense against the non-existent threat of a coercive takeover, exploring ways to burden Norton with debt, alluding to possibly selling part of Norton to some as yet unidentified party and trying to ward off its accountability to shareholders by attempting to delay the company's regularly scheduled annual meeting on April 26, 1990, none of which appears to provide any benefits to employees, shareholders or any of the other constituencies the board claims to care about.

"It is clear to us that, based on the board's announcement today, its true purpose is to entrench itself and management, quite possibly at dire costs to shareholders, Norton, employees, and Worcester and in clear violation of the board's fiduciary duties. Moreover, the Norton board should provide us and the other Norton shareholders, at the very least, with whatever information it and Morgan Stanley, its advisor, used to formulate the opinion that the ER Holdings' offer is inadequate financially.

"For our part, we are proceeding forward with our efforts to ensure that Norton shareholders have the opportunity to act on ER Holdings' $75 per share all cash tender offer. We continue to urge the board and management to meet with us in a constructive manner to achieve a friendly transaction that serves the best interests of Norton, the shareholders, the employees, and the Worcester community," Cahill concluded.

JOHNSTOWN, PA (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Claude J. Incaudo, president and chief executive officer of Penn Traffic Co. (AMEX: PNF), said, "The financial results of Penn Traffic continued to be strong in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990.

"The acquisition of Big Bear had a significant impact on these results; therefore direct comparisons with the prior year are not necessarily meaningful. Sales for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 (14 weeks) were a record $787.8 million compared to $434.7 million for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989 (13 weeks). Operating income and operating cash flow (earnings before depreciation, interest, amortization, LIFO and taxes) also set company records in the fourth quarter of 1990. Operating income was $29.6 million in the fourth quarter of the current year compared to $13.6 million in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989. Operating cash flow (EBDIAT) was $46.0 million for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 compared to $22.5 million for the fourth quarter of the prior year.

"The primary reasons for the growth in our fourth quarter cash flow are the acquisition of Big Bear, the additional operating week and the very strong results in all operating companies. On a comparable proforma basis, Penn Traffic's cash flow was 30 percent higher than a year ago.

Individually, Penn Traffic (parent company), P&C Food Markets and Big Bear recorded comparable fourth quarter cash flow growth of 11 percent, 32 percent and 44 percent, respectively.

"Penn Traffic also achieved record sales and cash flow in fiscal 1990. Sales totaled $2.7 billion for the year, 129 percent more than in the previous fiscal year. Cash flow was $149 million, marking an increase of 133 percent over fiscal 1989. Most significantly, free cash flow (cash flow after interest, preferred dividends and minority interest) nearly doubled from $22 million in the prior year to $41 million. We believe this excess cash flow will provide future resources for uses such as debt reduction or capital reinvestment.

"As expected, Penn Traffic experienced an accounting net loss of $32.0 million for the year. In addition to increased acquisition-related interest expense, other reasons for this accounting loss were one-time acquisition costs, non-cash goodwill amortization charges arising from our acquisitions and a $7.9 million equity accounting loss in our GND Holdings investment."

HOUSTON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Union Exploration Partners Ltd. (UXP)(NYSE: UXP), has made or participated in five recent oil and gas discoveries onshore and offshore Texas and onshore Alabama.

Production of natural gas has begun at one field. Production of the four other discoveries will begin by late 1990, according to L. Carl Hebert, vice president for Unocal's Texas/Southeastern Region, which has headquarters here.

UXP, a master limited partnership, holds most of Unocal's oil and gas exploration, development and production assets in the region. Unocal is UXP's managing general partner.

At Matagorda Island Block 670, UXP completed the OCS G-6048 No. 2 well in a new fault block and put it on production with the discovery well. Production is from Lower Miocene sands at depths between 7,300 and 7,900 feet. Combined production from these wells is 13 million cubic feet of gas per day, with daily capacity to 20 million cubic feet. UXP, Pogo Producing Company and Pogo Gulf Coast Ltd. hold 60.7 percent, 25 percent and 14.3 percent interests, respectively.

At Matagorda Island Block 618, UXP drilled a sidetrack well that found 124 feet of net gas pay in Lower Miocene sands at depths between 6,746 and 8,330 feet. The well, OCS G-7201 No. 1, was completed in a lower sand and tested from an interval between 8,188 and 8,239 feet. In the test, the well produced 5 million cubic feet of gas per day with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,367 pounds per square inch (psi). UXP holds a 100 percent interest in this discovery.

UXP discovered 62 feet of gas pay in Middle and Lower Miocene sands at Matagorda Island Block 688. The OCS G-8548 No. 1 well was cased and suspended without testing. UXP holds a 100 percent interest in this well.

In East Texas, a well drilled by Prairie Producing Co. encountered more than 200 feet of gas and condensate pay in an Upper Jurassic Smackover Dolomite formation. This well, in Rains County, was tested at a rate of 6.3 million cubic feet of gas per day on a 22/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,598 psi. It confirms the discovery by Prairie in 1988 of the Green Valley Field. UXP holds a 45.7 percent interest in both wells.

The partnership holds a 100 percent interest in a new field discovery in Monroe County, Alabama. The No. 1 B. G. Mims 7-3 well found 60 feet of oil pay in an Upper Jurassic Smackover Dolomite formation. It was tested at a rate of 575 barrels of oil and 68,000 cubic feet of gas per day with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,060 psi. Permanent production facilities are expected to be installed early this year. Follow-up drilling is scheduled late in 1990.

AUSTIN, TX (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - The U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas today ruled that the Motorola 68030 microprocessor infringes on Hitachi's (NYSE: HIT) 4,646,271 ('271) patent. At the same time, Judge Lucius D. Bunton III also ruled in the Motorola vs. Hitachi suits filed last year that Hitachi's H8/532 microcontroller infringes Motorola's patents.

Motorola filed an action in Federal District Court in Austin in 1989, charging that the H8/532, Hitachi's microcontroller, infringes four Motorola patents. Hitachi denied the charges and counterclaimed, asserting that its '271 patent was infringed by Motorola's 68030 microprocessor.

Hitachi and Motorola each contested the validity of the other's patents. Hitachi also asserted that its use of Motorola's patents is licensed under a 1986 patent cross license agreement between Motorola and Hitachi. Judge Bunton found that one of the Motorola patents, 4,263,650 ('650), was invalid and not infringed. He rejected all other defenses by both parties.

A Hitachi spokesperson stated, "We are, of course, gratified by the ruling in the '271 case, and disappointed by the court's rulings on the H8/532, which we believe to be in error. We are considering all available options including appeal."

Three additional suits between Motorola and Hitachi remain pending in Federal Court in Austin. In one of those cases, Hitachi has charged that Motorola's 88000 family RISC chip infringes the '271 patent. The Hitachi spokesperson said that the court's finding that the '271 patent is valid and infringed by the 68030 should facilitate Hitachi's proof that the 88000 family also infringes the '271 family.

The Hitachi spokesperson said that a second suit, in which Motorola charged that Hitachi's microprocessor infringes Motorola's '650 patent, should be disposed of by the ruling that the '650 patent is invalid. The spokesman said that the company and its counsel were studying the court's decision to determine its effect upon the third of the remaining cases.

TORONTO (MARCH 28) UPI - With their playoff hopes hanging by a thread, the New York Islanders waited until the last moment to escape from their straitjackets and record a come-from-behind 6-3 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs Wednesday.

The win was only the second in the last 21 games for the Islanders, who went 2-14-5 in that stretch, but it was enough to keep them in the hunt for the final playoff berth in the Patrick Division.

''We've been in a 20-game paralysis,'' said the Islander's Al Arbour after coaching his NHL-record 1,277th game, passing Scotty Bowman. ''It's like we've been playing in a straitjacket and we finally slipped out it in the third period.

''I don't know what type of straitjacket it is, but it's a tight one.''

Entering the third period trailing 2-1 and with nothing to lose, the Islanders exploded for five goals, including a pair 55 seconds apart from David Volek and Allan Kerr.

''It was desperation, really,'' said Kerr, who left the ice with a damaged left knee shortly after scoring the go-ahead goal. ''Everything that had to be said was said. We had 20 minutes left to salvage something.

''We knew we had it; it was hidden way back there somewhere. All the guys were wondering why it took so long to come out.''

The task in front of the Islanders is still a formidable one, but it looked a little more possible after the game than it did before.

Even with the big win, the Islanders' fate does not rest in their own hands. In fact, in order to take part in post-season action the Islanders must beat Philadelphia in their last regular season game Saturday and hope the Flyers tie or lose their other two remaining contests and that Pittsburgh loses its two remaining games.

''We're going to beat Philly, I know that,'' assured Don Maloney, who scored into an empty net. ''Other than that, all we can do is go home and say our prayers.''

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - Vanderbilt Coach Eddie Fogler, who twice saw his team come back from 17-point deficits in the opening round of the National Invitation Tournament, nearly suffered through the reverse in the championship game Wednesday night.

The Commodores built a 17-point advantage in the second half and then almost had it wither away before holding on for a 74-72 victory over St. Louis in the 53rd edition of the nation's oldest postseason college basketball tournament.

Fogler, who steeled himself for such tension-filled circumstances by driving a cab in New York during his college summer vacations, watched as his team had its lead whittled to 2 points four times in the final 3:26.

''We came back from 17 twice in this tournament (against Louisiana Tech and Tennessee) and then we get here and get up by 17 and almost lose it,'' he said.

The Commodores, the third-best free throw shooting team in the country, converted 21 of 27 in the game, including 10 in the final 6:46 to keep St. Louis at bay.

Derrick Wilcox hit a pair of 3-pointers in a 15-5 surge that carried Vanderbilt, 21-14, from a 41-34 lead to a 56-39 advantage with 10:37 remaining.

St. Louis, which became the first team in 34 years to lose back-to-back NIT finals, then used a stifling defense and a 3-point binge to get back into the game.

Jeff Luechtefeld and Charles Newberry each hit a pair of 3-pointers to bring the Billikens within 59-51 with 7:15 remaining.

The only basket the Commodores could muster in that stretch was a 3-pointer by tournament MVP Scott Draud at 8:29.

''Luckily, we were able to keep our poise and beat a very well-coached team,'' said Draud. ''I thought I played well, but not that well.''

Wilcox and Kevin Anglin each hit a pair of free throws to put Vanderbilt ahead 63-51 with 6:27 remaining before Anthony Bonner keyed another St. Louis surge.

He scored six points in an 11-1 run that brought the Billikens within 64-62 with 3:28 remaining.

Wilcox then scored Vanderbilt's only basket from the field in the final 8:29, a 3-pointer with 2:24 remaining.

St. Louis, which lost to St. John's in the final last year, cut the deficit to two three times after that. The last was on a 3-pointer by Jeff Gaona at the buzzer.

Vanderbilt received 16 points from Wilcox, 15 from Draud and 13 from Morgan Wheat.

St. Louis, 21-13, was paced by Bonner with 19 points and 11 rebounds.

Newberry added 18 and Jorge Wallace 15.

Vanderbilt's ability to double-team Bonner, the nation's leading rebounder contributed to its success. The Commodores held Bonner, who entered with a 20.8 scoring average for the tournament, to just four points in the first half.

''Vanderbilt totally frustrated us with their defense in the first half,'' said St. Louis Coach Rich Grawer. ''They were physical, but legal. I think their defensive intensity affected us not only offensively, but defensively as well.''

Wallace picked up the scoring slack for St. Louis, hitting for 11 points in the opening period. Draud scored 10 of Vanderbilt's first 12 points, helping the Commodores to a 31-28 lead at intermission.

The all-tournament team consisted of Luc Longley of New Mexico, James Barnes of Penn State, Todd Milholland of Vanderbilt and St. Louis' Newberry and Bonner.

Penn State took third place in the 32-team tournament, beating New Mexico in overtime in the consolation game 83-81. Penn State finished the year at 25-9 and New Mexico at 20-15.

(MARCH 29) UPI - For months, the House has been deadlocked on the issue of child-care legislation. On Wednesday, the Rules Committee cleared the way for votes Thursday on two Democratic plans to fund day care- one of which is backed by the White House. The decision gives Speaker Thomas Foley a chance to keep his vow to pass a child-care bill in March. The Senate passed its child-care plan last June.

A smuggling ring with Middle Eastern links and involving nuclear-triggering devices was broken Wednesday. U-S and British customs agents raided a cargo hangar at London's Heathrow Airport and seized 40 components for nuclear triggering devices bound for Iran. At least five people, including two Iraqis, were arrested. NO comment from the Iraqi Embassy in London.

The B-B-C reports the devices conficated were harmless dummies, substituted by British officials for the real things which came from Los Angeles. The only U-S maker of such devices... a Massachusetts-based company... says it supplied federal agents with phoney components recently but wouldn't say if the fake devices seized Wednesday came from the firm.

A spokesman for Eastern Airlines says the carrier will recheck the drug test results of all 700 pilots rehired after crossing picket lines during the one-year strike against the company. The review was prompted by the arrest of a rehired Eastern pilot for allegedly buying cocaine in Florida. Airline officials say when they reviewed the man's files, they found indications of past drug use. And they say he had tested positive for drugs upon his rehiring but the results were overlooked through a clerical error.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The House, bucking a veto threat from President Bush, approved a bill to give the Environmental Protection Agency a place in the Cabinet and insulate a new branch of the agency from party politics.

Bush has supported making the EPA the 15th Cabinet department, but strongly objected to creation of an Environmental Statistics Bureau as an independent, non-partisan agency within the new Department of Environmental Protection.

Supporters of the bill say the statistics bureau must be free from political influence so it will be an objective source of information, not a vehicle of administration policy.

Last week, a White House memo said the statistics bureau language raises ''serious constitutional concerns'' and severely ''restricts executive branch oversight of the new bureau.''

Before the House vote Wednesday, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater reiterated Bush's opposition, saying Congress was trying to ''micromanage the agency.'' He repeated Bush's threat to veto the legislation ''if it is passed as it is now.''

In the key vote, the House rejected, 266-166, a proposal by Rep. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., to meet Bush's demand by eliminating the controversial language and organizing the new department the same as other Cabinet departments. That margin, however, is not enough to override a veto.

The final vote to approve the bill and send it to the Senate was 371-55.

In rejecting Bush's objections, Rep. Esteban Torres, D-Calif., said, ''The creation of a Department of Environmental Protection is too important to be reduced to a name change.''

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee has approved own version of EPA legislation, but without some of the contentious provisions in the House measure. Congressional leaders have said they want the final legislation on the president's desk by April 22, the 20th anniversary of Earth Day.

Following the vote, White House spokesman Steve Hart said the administration believes it can muster enough support to sustain a veto in the House, if needed, but the effort will now focus on getting the Senate to adopt an acceptable version.

The chief sponsors of the bill, Reps. John Conyers, D-Mich., and Frank Horton, R-N.Y., drafted a compromise last week aimed at making their measure more palatable to the White House.

The measure would have stricken a provision that strictly limits the circumstances under which the chief of the statistics bureau could be fired.

It also would have softened language giving the bureau virtually exclusive authority to collect, analyze and publicly release environmental information without review by other agencies, such as the White House budget office, which now can effectively censor any executive branch report.

However, Conyers and Horton decided Wednesday against offering their proposal because the administration refused to agree in writing to support it, aides to the two lawmakers said.

An aide to Horton held out hope that a compromise on the bill could still be reached with when the House and Senate negotiate over differences between their two versions of the bill.

Further abandoning attempts to accommodate Bush, the House later strengthened another provision he objected to, voting to require regional administrators of the new department be appointed soley on the basis of managerial and environmental qualifications, without regard for their political positions.

''We're only asking that quality and competence prevail over politics,'' said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., sponsor of the amendment.

The House also adopted an amendment by Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., directing the new department to increase its staff of criminal investigators by 30 percent annually for five years.

The EPA, created in 1970, would become the 15th department in the president's Cabinet, the first since the Veterans Administration, another major indepedent agency, became the Department of Veterans Affairs one year ago.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - University of Utah physicists attacked cold fusion in their own backyard, reporting they found no signs of nuclear fusion in the device their chemist colleagues unveiled with much fanfare a year ago.

Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann rocked the scientific world March 23, 1989, when they announced at the University of Utah that they had created nuclear fusion in a laboratory jar at room-temperature.

They touted the process as a potential source of cheap, clean energy.

In a study published Wednesday in the journal Nature, a 10-member team of Utah physicists and nuclear experts said it found ''no evidence'' of any known fusion reactions after monitoring four of Pons's ''cold fusion'' devices for five weeks.

''During the time we were in his laboratory, there were no fusion processes occurring as we know them. ... There wasn't even a single 'peep ''' said Michael Salamon, an associate physics professor who headed the investigation.

''In my professional opinion - I could be wrong and I hope I'm wrong - I don't think cold fusion is a real phenomenon,'' Salamon said in an interview. ''The evidence is not there.''

Last fall, British researchers working in consultation with Fleischmann failed to reproduce the Utah findings and speculated scientific sloppiness may lie behind the original claim. Teams from Yale, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and California Institute of Technology have also been unable to duplicate the results.

The Pons-Fleischmann device consisted of palladium and platinum electrodes in a jar of ''heavy'' water, made of oxygen and a form of hydrogen called deuterium.

When electricity was run through the jar, the chemists theorized deuterium and oxygen split, and the palladium electrode absorbed deuterium in such high concentrations that the atoms fused, releasing more energy in the form of heat than was put into the experiment.

In the new report, the physicists monitored the devices for signs of all known fusion reactions. No neutron, gamma ray or electron emissions were found to indicate the heat bursts reported by Pons and Fleischmann stemmed from fusion, they said.

For some reactions, radiation levels were ''a thousand billion times smaller'' than necessary for fusion, Salamon said. In all cases, he said radiation was ''well below'' any fusion route proposed for the device.

Even the unusual scenario in which the fusion byproduct tritium is trapped in the palladium electrode should produce ''strong and distinct'' gamma rays, Salamon said.

Pons and Fleischmann's original argument for fusion was based on their observations of what appeared to be excess gamma rays and neutrons. But Salamon said that data did not hold up, leaving only claims of excess heat.

''Fusion evidence based on heat alone will not sway anyone in the physics community. It is so easy to make mistakes in calorimetry (measuring heat) '' he said.

In Salamon's view, cold fusion's only hope lies in a handful of reports that the devices appear to generate excess tritium. But the physicist said he suspects contamination underlies those reports, noting a study in India was conducted near a nuclear reactor, which releases large amounts of tritium.

Federal officials recommended against establishing a cold fusion research center. But using state funds, the University of Utah set up the National Cold Fusion Institute.

The institute's director, Fritz Will, said Wednesday the physicists examined devices that produced no heat bursts during the five-week period so ''one shouldn't be too surprised that no particular nuclear signatures were being monitored.''

But the physicists said Pons informed them that when lightning knocked out their detectors for 48 hours, they missed a ''two-hour segment in which there was excessive thermal release'' from one device being monitored.

If a fusion-generated heat burst occurred during the outage, Salamon said, an excess of neutrons should still have been detectable several days later but nothing was observed.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Amnesty International accused the United States of violating the law by routinely refusing political asylum to persecuted refugees from U.S.-supported countries.

Under the 1980 Refugee Act, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, acting on the advice of the State Department, is required to grant asylum to people with a ''reasonable fear of persecution'' in their native countries.

An Amnesty International report released Wednesday said different standards are set for refugees from countries such as El Salvador, Guatemala or Honduras, whose governments are backed by the United States.

According to a statistical study by Amnesty International, the INS granted asylum to about 2 percent of the refugees from El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras, compared to the average of 25 percent for refugees coming from all countries.

''At a time when freedom is winning around the world, this type of discrimination is particularly abhorrent,'' said John Healey, executive director of Amnesty International USA.

The group presented a Salvadoran refugee, Omar Centurion, who described how he was beaten, threatened with death, and nearly drowned by a ''death squad.'' Centurion fled to Mexico and then to the United States, where he said he was denied asylum because the U.S. authorities ruled that he had not proved a ''well-founded fear of political persecution.''

In the past year, a total of about 100,000 applications for political asylum in the United States were filed, 85 percent of them from Central American countries.

Amnesty International report said that its study demonstrated ''a clear bias against asylum seekers from certain countries, and therefore contravenes the principles of the Refugee Act of 1980, which established a single standard for evaluating all asylum claims irrespective of national origin.''

In contrast to the approximately 2 percent rate of success for asylum-seekers from Central American countries, 81 percent of requests for asylum from refugees from the Soviet Union and China were approved.

The organization pinned the blame on the State Department's Human Rights Bureau, which routinely recommends rejecting asylum requests from Salvadoran refugees on the grounds that the U.S.-backed police and armed forces in El Salvador do not arrest persons without cause and that death squads do not maintain lists of people suspected of left-wing sympathies.

The report also criticizes the U.S. government for intercepting desperate boat people from Haiti and returning them to Haitian government control after they are picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard.

According to the reports, of those Haitians who managed to reach American territory, only three out of a total of 82 requests for asylum were approved by the INS.

In one Central American case cited by the Amnesty International report, a Guatemalan citizen active in trade union affairs was arrested and tortured by Guatemalan armed forces. His wife was abducted, tortured and killed.

He fled Guatemala and applied for asylum, providing physical and written evidence. His request was turned down on the grounds that he had demonstrated ''maltreatment, but not persecution.'' On appeal, the denial was reversed and he was granted political asylum.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The 400,000 Indian adolescents living on American reservations suffer a higher rate of emotional problems than white children, but only 17 mental health professionals are available to help them, according to a report released Thursday.

According to the Office of Technology Assessment report, Indian adolescents face a higher rate of suicide, substance abuse, stress, depression, anxiety and neglect than their white counterparts.

They are also more likely to be physically and sexually abused, to have alcoholic parents or disrupted families and to have school related stresses.

But despite the high rate of emotional distress, the report said the federal Indian Health Service funds only 17 mental health professionals trained to serve children and teens, one-tenth the number needed.

The report, ''Indian Adolescent Health,'' notes that data on the emotional problems of Indian children and the professionals available to aid them is scarce. ''The information that does exist makes clear, however, that mental health services for Indian adolescents are inadequate.''

The 17 health professionals cited by the report serve 12 Indian Health Service areas, each covering from one to 11 states.

The Billings IHS area, with more than 12,000 Inidan adolescents in Montana and Wyoming, has the most mental health care providers with nine. Five of the areas, together serving about 80,000 Indians in 16 states, have no mental health professionals trained to treat children and teens, according to the OTA report.

Denise Dougherty, project director for the report, said data from a variety of studies on the frequency of various mental health problems among American teens was used to conclude that the Indian adolescents have a higher rate of emotional ills than whites, aged 10-17.

''You have to piece together the the data from studies and other sources '' she said, noting suicde figures show the 1986 mortality rate for Indians age 15-19 was 26.3 per 100,000 while the rate for all other U.S. races was 10 per 100,000. In the 10-14 age group, Indian suicides were four times higher than all other races combined.

Doughtery said there are no figures available on the rate of mental health professionals to adolescents of other U.S. races, but the study concluded the rate shoudl about 4 to 5 professionals per 10,000 adolescents. Based on that assumption, she said, the number of professionals serving Indian reservation adolescents should be increased from 17 to about 200.

The report concludes that the reasons for the high rate of emotional probelms among Indian children ''are not known with certainty, (but) the life situations of many Indian adolescents are filled with stressors that can lead to emotaional distress and serious mental and behavioral problems.''

Among these are high rates of fetal alcohol syndrome and its consequences for mental retardation, physical and sexual abuse and neglect, parental alcoholism and family disruption and poor school environments.

''In addition,'' according to the report, ''because of their developmental need to establish their own identities, Indian adolescents often feel particularly caught between two cultures.''

(MARCH 29) UPI - Don't let Michael Jordan hear you bad-mouth Cleveland - he loves it there.

He proved it once again Wednesday when he completed the most prolific night of his career, a 69-point, 18-rebound performance, both career highs.

The Bulls, who defeated Cleveland 117-113 in overtime, have now beaten the Cavaliers in all four meetings this year and Jordan has averaged 50.5 points in those games.

''It was by far my best game,'' Jordan said after posting the ninth-highest point total in NBA history. ''I try to do whatever I can to help the team win. My heart goes into every game and this exemplified that.''

Jordan connected on 23 of 37 shots from the field, 21 of 23 shots from the line, hit two 3-pointers, had six assists and four steals. It was the highest point total since David Thompson scored 73 points on April 9, 1978.

Jordan's previous career high was 63 points against Boston in the 1986 playoffs, and his previous regular-season high was 61 points in 1987. He scored 15 in the first quarter, 16 in the second, 20 in the third, 10 in the fourth and eight in overtime.

Horace Grant, with 16 points, was the only other Bull in double figures.

Cleveland was led by Mark Price's 31 points, 26 from Craig Ehlo, and 23 points and 10 rebounds from John ''Hot Rod'' Williams.

''I played well, I must admit,'' Jordan said. ''Everything seemed to energize, all parts of my game. I just tried to jump on it and ride it as far as I could.

The Cavs opened the game with Winston Bennett guarding Jordan, then switched to Ehlo. They tried double-teaming him; they tried fouling him.

Nothing worked.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 29) UPI - Erich Honecker, the disgraced communist who ruled East Germany with an iron fist for 18 years, may not be brought to trial on corruption charges because of ill health, a prosecutor said.

Deputy Prosecutor General Lothar Reuter said Wednesday he asked for a medical report on the health of the ailing Honecker, 77, and six other former top communist officials charged with misusing state property to build private vacation homes and sprawling hunting estates.

East Berlin authorities said earlier that lack of evidence forced them to drop high treason charges against Honecker and three other former politburo members.

Reuter said a ''prominent independent medical team'' will assess the health of Honecker, who was ousted late last year in the face of the popular demands for reform that led eventually to free elections and widespread support for unification with West Germany.

Reuter said the medical team will also examine six other defendants, including former Prime Minister Willy Stoph and Erich Mielke, who headed the once-feared State Security police.

The prosecutor said he expected the team to present its findings by the end of April but that investigations against the seven would continue.

Reuter said the investigations would be dropped if it is proven that the defendants were too ill to stand trial. The remark was widely interpreted as an indication the authorities may not proceed with the charges against Honecker, who recently underwent a cancer operation.

On his release from the hospital in January, Honecker was held briefly in police custody and then taken to the home of a Protestant pastor in Lobetal, just outside East Berlin.

Attempts last weekend to move him and his wife, Margot, 63, to a government guest house failed after outraged villagers protested. Protesters at one stage beat their fists on the hood of the car carrying the Honeckers. The authorities then decided it was safer to keep them in Lobetal.

BEIJING (MARCH 29) UPI - The president of the supreme court attacked Western nations Thursday for criticizing last year's Chinese crackdown on the pro-democracy movement, saying the charges of widespread human rights abuses were ''vicious slanders.''

Also, the country's attorney general pledged that authorities would maintain a tight grip on all criminal offenses.

The tough warnings were contained in annual reports on crime and justice to the ongoing session of the National People's Congress, China's rubber-stamp Parliament.

Ren Jianxin, president of the Supreme People's Court, delivered a vitriolic broadside at Western criticism of mass arrests, detentions without trial and other abuses in the crackdown that followed the army's firing on protesters in Beijing last June.

He assailed ''Western hegemonists,'' using a term that until last summer had been in disuse since the turbulent 1966-1976 Cultural Revolution. The term describes nations that bully others and was reserved during the 1960s for criticism of the Soviet Union.

''The hegemonists accused us of conducting secret interrogations, handing out secret verdicts, refusing to conduct fair, open trials and extensively trampling on human rights,'' Ren said. ''These accusations are deliberate fabrications and absolutely groundless.

''These are vicious slanders on China's judicial organs ... and wanton interference in the exercise of judicial power by a sovereign state,'' Ren said.

The U.S. State Department and human rights groups have cited repeated, credible accounts of secret trials, beatings of prisoners and other abuses in the nationwide dragnet last year. Hundreds of people are believed to have been tried and imprisoned secretly.

Ren omitted any estimate of the number of people arrested last year, but claimed ''those already sentenced by the people's courts according to law are small in number.'' He said the courts have combined ''punishment with leniency.''

Chinese officials have steadfastly refused to give figures on arrests and imprisonments. Western analysts believe more than 10,000 people were detained last year, although some are known to have been released in recent months.

Many of those released from prisons and detention centers have told Western journalists of crowded conditions, repeated interrogations, beatings and lengthy detentions without formal charges or trial.

Ren said that while China now has attained relative stability, ''the situation of social order is still quite severe.'' He did not elaborate.

In a separate report, Liu Fuzhi, procurator-general of the Supreme People's Procuratorate, or the nation's attorney general, said authorities had ''tightened their fists'' in cracking down on crime during the suppression of the pro-democracy movement.

He pledged to ''keep cracking down on serious criminal offenses as a major and long-term task,'' noting that criminal cases had increased last year and that some offenses, including murder, robbery and rape, ''were still rampant.''

BANGKOK, THAILAND (MARCH 29) UPI - Vietnam's Communist Party fired one of its senior leaders in a struggle over political reforms meant to save Vietnamese communists from the fate of their comrades in Eastern Europe, official media and diplomats said Thursday.

Diplomats in Bangkok said the abrupt dismissal and harsh criticism of Tran Xuan Bach was highly unusual for the party, which has usually preferred to edge out failed leaders gracefully and without publicity. The diplomats said it may indicate a heightened power struggle within the party before a party congress set for next year.

They said Bach, 65, once considered a contender for the party leadership, was associated with a conservative faction, but had recently advocated faster and more democratic changes in the Vietnamese political system.

Hanoi radio, in a broadcast late Wednesday, carried an official communique from the party Central Committee at the conclusion of a 15-day meeting that ended Tuesday.

Communist leaders ''decided to remove Comrade Tran Xuan Bach from his positions as (politburo member), party Central Committee secretary, and party Central Committee member for having seriously violated the party's organizational principles and discipline, leading to many bad consequences.''

The communique gave no further details.

Diplomats said Bach, ranked third in the party secretariat and ninth in the politburo, was long a key operative in the party bureaucracy. His only stumble came in 1976 when he was briefly dropped from the Central Committee, apparently because he had married a woman 30 years his junior.

One diplomat said Bach was an ally of retired hard-line leader Le Duc Tho, the senior communist who rejected the Nobel Peace Prize for having negotiated the Paris Peace Accords that ended U.S. participation in the Vietnam War in 1975.

But in recent months, Bach has also spoken out for faster political reforms, leading to some puzzlement among diplomats.

In a speech in December, Bach warned against xenophobic sentiments that would ''perpetuate the need to maintain a large defense budget.''

He said the fear of being accused of ''slackening vigilance, veering from socialism, worshiping the West, and failing to grasp Marxist-Leninist principles still acts as an obstacle to renovation and creativity.''

Bach said ''old-fashioned socialism'' had ''inherent contradictions'' that had led to communism's downfall in Eastern Europe.

He said political reform must catch up with economic reform because ''you can't walk with one long leg and one short one.''

But Bach also denounced moves toward capitalism and espoused communism as the ideal system.

''I don't think he was a genuine reformer,'' said a diplomatic source. ''So his sacking is not a reversal of the reforms, not a toughening of the line.''

A Thai intelligence official, however, said the dismissal of Bach appeared to be a victory for party conservatives.

''When we were in Hanoi (during a visit by Thai Army commander Gen. Chavalit Yongchaiyudh last week), it was clear most of the top leaders want as little change as possible,'' he said. ''Bach seemed to be different.''

Some diplomats tied the dispute to a power struggle within the leadership.

The party announced it will hold its next national congress in the second quarter of 1991, when the leadership is expected to consider major changes in policy and personnel.

The current party general secretary, Nguyen Van Linh, considered a cautious reformer, has been ill and is rumored to be considering resigning at the congress. Bach was one of those expected to contend for his position.

(MARCH 29) UPI - Thunderstorms, gusty winds and hail pounded the southern Plains Thursday, flooding streets and damaging car windshields, while rain soaked major areas of the South and Midwest, and New Englanders saw more snow.

Up to 3 inches of rain in parts of Texas and Louisiana caused water to back up on several roads, and police in Bridgeport, Texas, said one squad car was up to its hood in flood waters.

Baseball-sized hail damaged windshields in Knox County in north Texas, while sheriff's deputies in Cottondale spotted a tornado.

''It touched the ground and then it went back up,'' said Wise County dispatcher Tammy Scott. No damage or injuries were reported.

Rain spread throughout the South, where temperatures shot up considerably from near-freezing levels earlier in the week. The National Weather Service said the region was caught between a high-pressure system circulating moisture from the Atlantic and a low-pressure system pushing rain from the Gulf.

A band of light rain early Thursday stretched from south-central Missouri through central Illinois, where temperatures were in the moderate 40s. Skies across Wisconsin and Michigan were cloudy.

Patchy light rain and snow fell over parts of Maryland, West Virginia and southern New Jersey early Thursday, with lows throughout the region ranging in the 30s to low 40s.

Southwestern Pennsylvania also saw some precipitation overnight, while the rest of the state was mostly cloudy. Lows were in the 20s to low 30s.

Spring had yet to arrive in New England, where clouds and light snow were forecast for parts of Vermont, Maine and New Hampshire. Snow throughout the Northeast was expected to get worse on Friday, the weather service said.

The region experienced unusually cold temperatures Thursday morning, with Boston at the freezing mark and forecasters predicting little relief before the end of the weekend.

In the West, clear skies and mild temperatures prevailed throughout Oregon and Washington, while occasional light rain and snow fell in parts of Idaho.

Mostly cloudy skies and rain prevailed through most of northern Utah while the NWS issued snow advisories in mountain areas of Wyoming.

In Colorado, a slow moving, unorganized storm system was working its way through the region. Mostly cloudy skies and occasional rain or snow were commonplace across the state, with heavy downfalls in mountain and foothill areas.

NAIROBI, Kenya (MARCH 29) UPI - An international ban on ivory trade has crippled east Africa's illegal ivory market, a wildlife official was quoted as saying Thursday.

Kenyan Director of Wildlife Services Richard Leakey, quoted in the official Kenya Times newspaper, said the price per kilogram for poached elephant ivory sold in neighboring Somalia had fallen to $2 to $3 from $30 to $40 a year ago, more than a tenfold reduction. A kilogram is about 2.2 pounds.

''The trend has proved wrong critics of the Kenyan policy who predicted a rise in the value of ivory as a result of the ban,'' said Leakey, the internationally famous anthropologist who was described by the Times report as ''elated'' at the news.

The Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, or CITES, in October adopted a world ban on ivory trade, designed to protect the African elephant, whose numbers have dropped by 85 percent in the past 15 years in Kenya alone.

It was feared in some conservationist circles that the ban might stimulate poaching by driving up illegal ivory prices.

That fear was reinforced when Britain in January entered a reservation to the ban on behalf of Hong Kong, allowing the colony to sell off a stockpile of 670 tons over six months.

In the first two months of this year, poachers killed 57 elephants in one Kenyan game park, whereas the whole country lost only 100 head of elephant in all of 1989.

However, Leakey said, ''We received information that the price being paid to poachers and other field agents in their illegal sales in Somalia was down to $2 per kilo and only $3 a kilo for the best quality tusk.''

''It is simply not worth the effort or risk to kill elephants at the present value of ivory,'' he said. ''There is no future in ivory trading.''

Under Leakey, Kenya has launched an all-out war on poaching, arming game wardens with high-powered telescopic-sighted rifles and licensing them to shoot poachers dead on sight.

The country's new Anti-Poaching Unit shot dead 50 poachers in the second half of last year alone.

(MARCH 29) UPI - The Iron Curtain may be falling but General Colin Powell says the ''Ice Curtain'' isN'T.

The head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff says it is too soon to think about reducing troops along the Alaska border with the Soviet Far East. Powell made the statement during his first tour of Alaska, where 27-thousand American servicemen are stationed.

Powell says despite improved relations between the superpowers, the ''Ice Curtain'' of U-S forces guarding the border will remain in place. America's top military man says he wants to be sure the United States does NOT reduce its capabilities too quickly.

Powell observed joint Air Force and Army live fire exercises yesterday near Fairbanks... then flew to Elmendorf Air Base near Anchorage where he held a news conference.

A Lebanese newspaper says the brother of Iranian president Hashemi Rafsanjani held secret talks with Moslem extremists in Beirut in bid to gain freedom for 18 Western hostages.

The story was published today in a newspaper with close ties to Syria. The paper says the clandestine meetings involved Mahmoud Rafsanjani and leaders of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah... which is believed to be holding the hostages.

The report says the Iranian emissary also met with Hussein Musawi , the leader of the splinter group of the pro-Syrian Amal forces called the Islamic Amal movement. That group also is believed to be backed and funded by Iran.

The newspaper said NOthing about the success of Rafsanjani's mission. Analysts speculate that Iran's president favors ending the hostage crisis as part of his policy to improve relations with the West.

(MARCH 29) UPI - AIDS activists vow to protest this morning outside a Washington, D-C, hotel where officials say President Bush will make his first major speech on the deadly AIDS epidemic.

An unidentified White House official says Bush will speak about compassion and hope for those suffering from AIDS. He will address the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS.

The White House source says Bush will tell the group that the nation is fighting the disease with ''dignity, compassion, care and without discrimination.''

But AIDS activists are critical of the Bush administration's position. AIDS Action council spokesman Jean McGuire branded as inadequate the president's budget request for one-BILLION 600-Million dollars to fund AIDS research and treatment.

A group called ACT-UP says it will protest outside the hotel when the president speaks to show the administration that it is NOT doing enough to stop the spread of the disease and help those who have contracted it.

(MARCH 29) UPI - One year after two scientists in Utah announced they had created ''cold'' nuclear fusion... the jury is still out as to whether they succeeded.

Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann rocked the scientific world in March of 1989 when they announced at the University of Utah that they had created nuclear fusion in a laboratory jar at room-temperature. Such a discovery... if verified... would change the world with a source of cheap, clean energy.

In a study published yesterday... a 10-member team of Utah physicists and nuclear experts says it found ''NO evidence'' of any known fusion reactions after monitoring four ''cold fusion'' devices for five weeks.

Associate physics professor Michael Salamon led the investigation. In his words... ''During the time we were in his laboratory, there were NO fusion processes occurring as we know them. There wasn't even a single 'peep.'''

On the other hand... virtually every research paper submitted for a three-day workshop in Salt Lake City on cold fusion is expected to support the theory.

Fritz Will is the director of the University of Utah's National Cold Fusion Institute. He says the Indian and Japanese governments each have about 150 scientists involved in cold fusion research.

Will also says the university sent ''special letters of invitation'' to some of the dozens of researchers who said they could NOT duplicate the findings.

(MARCH 29) UPI - The founder of ''The Hemingway Review'' says ''the scholars are going to go crazy'' when his journal prints two previously UNpublished short stories by Ernest Hemingway next month.

Charles Oliver, a Hemingway scholar, says the UNpublished works were found among handwritten manuscripts at the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston.

An apparently complete story titled ''Philip Haines Was a Writer'' was discovered in 1988 by Donald Junkins, an English professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Junkins says the story is set in Paris in the 1920's. It's about a love triangle after a separation has taken place between a married people... a situation that resembles Hemingway's own life in Paris in the 20's when he left his first wife.

Independent scholar Susan Beegel found the second story, called ''A Lack of Passion.'' It is an incomplete work. She says the story about a disgraced bullfighter is set in Spain and dates it to 1924... adding that the it appears to be a ''companion piece'' to another Hemingway story, ''The Undefeated.''

The manuscripts were among thousands of pages Mary Hemingway, the author's fourth wife, gave the library... which is the home of about 80 percent of Hemingway's manuscripts and other memorabilia.

(MARCH 29) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange fell Thursday despite a turnaround on the foreign exchange market that saw the dollar lose nearly two yen for the first slide in ten trading sessions.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which fell 562.39 points Wednesday, lost another 237.41 points to 31,026.16. The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major listed shares fell 20.00 points to 2,286.85 after tumbling 32.23 points Wednesday.

Trading was moderate, with an estimated 700 million shares changing hands, compared with 628 million shares Wednesday. Declining issues outnumbered advances 667 to 301, with 120 issues unchanged.

Stocks rebounded in the morning in response to the dollar's fall against the yen, but fell back in the afternoon on index-linked selling. On the Tokyo Foreign Exchange the dollar fell 1.98 yen on widespread profit taking to close at 156.65 yen. Rising interest rates have dampened investor interest in stocks which continues to bleed the market, analysts said.

On the trading floor, Hitachi paced the actives followed by NEC, Sato Kogyo, Mitsubishi Electric, and Toshiba.

Elsewhere, large-capital steels such as Sumitomo Metal and Kobe Steel and shipbuildings ended lower along with banks and insurance firms. Electricals and medicines also lost ground.

Elsewhere in Asia, stocks closed slightly higher in moderate trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange as investors stepped to the sidelines to await earnings reports from several blue-chip companies.

The key Hang Seng Index, which fell 20.15 points Wednesday, added 9.82 points to 3,000.52. Utilities rose 24.56 points, financials added 13.17, properties closed up 15.71 and industrials bucked the trend, easing 1.95 points.

Turnover amounted to 1.54 billion shares, compared with 1.45 billion shares traded Wednesday.

Dealers said corporate maneuverings and crossings in secondary stocks boosted turnover and sent the Hang Seng Index above the 3,000 level. "As far as the blue chips were concerned, people were waiting around for the earnings results," a dealer said.

Analysts said there had been a switch back to selected secondary issues with buying interest mainly from Taiwanese investors. The Taiwan market was closed Thursday for a holiday.

Prices ended lower in featureless trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange. The blue-chip Straits Times Industrial Index, which eased 1.96 points Wednesday, fell 10.95 points to 1,594.21. The narrower All Singapore Index fell 3.25 points to 434.82.

Turnover amounted to 87.4 million shares, compared with 82.3 million shares traded Wednesday.

Analysts said the market was undergoing a technical correction before a new trend could emerge. Market watchers said the correction was expected and could be healthy for the market.

On the trading floor, Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. (foreign shares) paced the declining issues, followed by Isetan Co. and Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. (domestic shares).

Jurong Shipyard led the advancing issues, followed by Singapore Press (foreign shares) and Development Bank of Singapore.

In Australia, stock prices closed lower on the Sydney Sharemarket in light trading as large institutional investors stepped to the sidelines to await Friday's report on February's balance of payments.

The All Ordinaries Index, which eased 0.8 points Wednesday, lost 9.7 points to 1,546.9. The All Industrials Index fell 15.6 points to 2,372.7 and the All Resources Index lost 4.8 points to 913.4.

Turnover amounted to 82.5 million shares, compared with 73.7 million shares traded Wednesday.

Attention focused on banks amid speculation that ANZ Bank had signed a deal to buy National Mutual Royal Bank for $500 million.

In the banking sector, Westpac Bank lost two cents to $5.15, NAB Bank eased two cents to $6.38, and ANZ Bank fell eight cents to $5.42.

Elsewhere, Brambles lost 20 cents to $12.85, Coles Myer lost ten cents to $7.60, Elders IXL eased four cents to $2.08, and Pacific Dunlop fell ten cents to $4.84.

(MARCH 29) UPI - A referendum could be a step toward resolving a stalemate between Vilnius and Moscow over Lithuania's bid to secede from the Soviet Union. Lithuanian President Landsbergis says any referendum must decide whether an independent Lithuania wants to join the Soviet Union. He spoke yesterday, shortly after Parliament began considering a plan to effectively ban the Moscow-line Communist Party from the Baltic republic.

A New York City report says real estate tycoon Alex DiLorenzo... owner of a fire-ravaged building housing an illegal nightclub... has been slapped with nearly 16-hundred housing violations in four Harlem apartment buildings. 87 people died in arson fire at the club last weekend. The report says the husband of actress Kathleen Turner... Jay Weiss... leased the building from DiLorenzo and was cited last year for failing to provide heat and water at another building.

Diplomats say one of Vietnam's senior Communist Party leaders has been fired in a struggle over political reform. Diplomats in Bangkok say the abrupt firing of the leader was highly unusual for Vietnam's Communist Party, which has generally preferred to edge out failed leaders gracefully. Diplomats say the Vietnamese leader recently advocated more democratic changes in Vietnam's political system.

PIETERMARITZBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (MARCH 29) UPI - Clashes appeared to subside between rival Zulu mobs in the strife-torn valley outside the provincial capital Thursday after 15 people died and 60 were wounded in a day of intense fighting.

Thousands of black workers were unable to report to work in Pietermaritzburg as public transport was in chaos and more than 100 schools in the area remained closed, affecting some 63,000 children, local education officials said.

Police said at least 138 houses and two shops were destroyed by arsonists Wednesday as more than 12,000 Zulus fought running battles in townships and villages of the Edendale Valley leading into the capital of Natal province.

An official report on the unrest said the death toll was expected to rise ''as police comb the area.'' Among 15 deaths reported by police were eight people burned and stabbed to death in the township of Kwashange in an area where 100 houses had been set ablaze.

The clashes, between supporters of the African National Congress-linked United Democratic Front and the rival Inkatha tribal movement of moderate black leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi, were regarded as the worst this year.

Anti-apartheid sources in the Indian Ocean port city of Durban said efforts were under way to advance a meeting between ANC leader Nelson Mandela and Buthelezi to try to end the conflict, which has killed some 3,000 people since 1987.

Police reinforced by army units were called to the area Tuesday and Wednesday in a bid to control the fighting. Witnesses Thursday said the fighting appeared to have subsided but reported sporadic clashes between the rival factions.

At the lower end of Retief Street, a crowd of as many as 1,000 Inkatha supporters began massing around lunchtime but no trouble in the provincial capital itself was immediately reported.

The fighting Wednesday covered a 120-square-mile area encompassing several townships, especially Edendale, and semi-rural areas and the main road through the valley leading from the hills down to Pietermartizburg, witnesses said.

Hospital sources at Edendale said all non-emergency operations had been suspended to handle the casualties and reported medical supplies running low. Dozens of victims of the fighting were treated through through the night, the sources said.

A delegation of white anti-apartheid activisists from the national women's organization Black Sash joined about 400 black women from Edendale Thursday morning for a peace march through the township. Police halted the march, however, and detained the Black Sash women for more than three hours before releasing them.

The fighting intensified Sunday after Buthelezi held an Inkatha rally in Durban and busloads of supporters were stoned as they moved through UDF strongholds in the lower parts of the Edendale Valley.

The flare-up in the internecine strife coincides with a sharp upsurge in unrest throughout the country since President Frederik de Klerk lifted on Feb. 2 a 30-year ban on the ANC and ordered the release of Mandela from 27 years imprisonment on sabotage charges.

The Inkatha-UDF conflict is regarded as the single greatest obstacle to black unity in power-sharing negotiations de Klerk has proposed holding with the country's black majority.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The personal income of American workers increased by 0.9 percent in February and the rate of personal savings was up substantially but spending slowed, the Commerce Department said Thursday. Some private analysts said that it appears there is widespread concern about the state of the sluggish U.S. economy.

The $40.6 billion increase in personal income brings the monthly total to $4.6 trillion, the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said. The revised January total was just shy of the $4.6 trillion mark. In December, personal income rose by 0.5 percent, slightly above $4.5 trillion.

Erich Heinemann, chief economist at Landenburg, Thalmann & Co. in New York, said, "The consumption numbers ... are essential dead in the water." "It's a good indication things are essentially stagnant at the present time," Heinemann said. "We think this means there'll be further cutbacks in production."

Personal consumption was up by only 0.4 percent in February to $3.6 trillion after a revised one percent jump in January and a one percent increase in December, the government said.

Personal savings, meanwhile, climbed by 8.9 percent to $224.7 billion in February following a revised $206.3 billion in January and $211.5 billion in December, the department said.

Disposible personal income, which accounts for income after taxes and other non-tax payments, was up by 0.9 percent in February to almost $3 trillion, the Commerce Department said. Disposible personal income increased by 0.8 percent in January and 0.4 percent in December, the department said.

All the figures were adjusted to reflect critical seasonal factors, including an increase in subsidy payments to farmers and a pay increase for federal employees, the report said. The revised January total also reflected "an increase in personal contributions for social programs," the Commerce Department said.

VILNIUS, LITHUANIA (MARCH 29) UPI - Lithuania's President Vytautas Landsbergis implored the U.S. Congress Thursday to recognize Lithuania's independence as part of the liberation of Eastern Europe.

Earlier, the Soviet military appeared to soften its stance in the rebellious republic by offering Lithuanian deserters amnesty if they return to their military units, but vowed to flush out adamant draft dodgers.

Landsbergis, who has failed to coax recognition of Lithuania's declaration of independence from a single country, directed his appeal to lawmakers of the United States - which never recognized the 1940 Soviet annexation of the Baltic states of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

''The freedom of Lithuania is in great danger,'' Landsbergis said in an appeal that began with the words, ''dear senators, dear congressmen.''

''Support for Lithuania is support for freedom and democracy in eastern Europe,'' he said.

''The recognition of the government of the re-established republic of Lithuania that we request is a very important step towards strengthening peace in the world,'' Landsbergis said.

''We wait with strong hearts and with no weapons in our hands for your help in this difficult struggle against militarism and aggression, in this struggle for peace and justice.''

Washington has called on Moscow to avoid violence in Lithuania but has avoided formally recognizing the republic's declaration of independence.

The clemency order announced by the Soviet general staff appeared aimed at avoiding a repetition of Tuesday's embarrassing action when Soviet troops marched into a psychiatric hospital and dragged away about 20 deserters as 12 others fled.

There are about 1,500 deserters in hiding and Soviet Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev vowed last week they would be flushed out no matter how the operation was perceived in the West. But the military softened its tone Thursday.

''The leadership of the Ministry of Defense decided not to to institute legal proceedings against Lithuanian servicemen who left their Soviet regiments without permission - if they voluntarily announce at enlistment offices their willingness to continue service,'' the order said.

''Those who continue to violate the law of the U.S.S.R. of universal military service will be found, detained and they will be subjected to the legal punishment according to the present legislation,'' it said.

After the deserters were taken away Tuesday, Soviet troops seized the headquarters of the republic's independent communists, which had broken with the Moscow party.

Lithuania's government protested Tuesday's forceful Soviet actions as ''inexcusable aggression'' and demanded the return of the deserters it said were kidnapped. Lithuania also recalled Parliament deputies from Moscow and demanded immediate negotiations with Moscow in ''neutral territory.''

Wednesday, Landsbergis acknowledged a referendum can be held on the future of the rebellious republic but said it should determine whether Lithuania would join the Soviet Union.

''I am ready to exchange opinions (with Moscow) on any question, including the question of a referendum,'' Landsbergis told United Press International.

But he sought to soften his concession by saying a referendum should decide whether an independent Lithuania wants to join the Soviet Union.

''What kind of concessions should we make - to join the Soviet Union? In order to decide this issue we have to hold a referendum,'' Landsbergis said. ''The starting point must be the independence of Lithuania.''

Vilnius and Moscow are in a standoff over the issue of the rebellious republic's fate. Lithuania's communists were unseated by the Sajudis nationalists in February parliamentary elections and on March 11 the new Parliament declared independence from the Soviet Union.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev called the declaration illegal and invalid. He said the Soviet Union negotiates only with foreign countries and demanded a referendum on the issue.

Landsbergis said, ''If the people will agree to a referendum, how could I not agree?'' He said a referendum on any question may be demanded by 300,000 signatures under Lithuanian law passed last November.

His statements Wednesday came shortly after the republic's Parliament began considering a proposed law that would effectively ban the Moscow-line Communist Party from the republic.

Legislator Stanislovas Ilgunas said the bill calls for a ''multi-party system'' that is in line with the Baltic state's quest for self-rule.

It also was a defiant answer to Moscow's contention that the party building seized Tuesday was built by the Soviet Communists and is its property.

Soviet officials maintain Lithuania's declaration of independence is invalid because a law of secession is still being prepared in the Soviet Union.

Landsbergis has appealed to the West to step in and allow Lithuania to break away cleanly. In an interview Wednesday with NBC News, he said he welcomed any U.S. backing for his republic's efforts to secede.

But in Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler earlier said with caution, ''This is a very complex, delicate diplomatic situation.''

Pro-Lithuanian independence rallies slated for Sunday in the Ukraine have been banned by the government of that Soviet republic, Soviet media reported.

Ukrainian nationalists, however, vowed to defy the order in widening repercussions of the Baltic crisis, media reports said.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (MARCH 29) UPI - The government Thursday charged French-based Airbus Industrie, a U.S.-based aircraft engine consortium and four former government officials with bribery and corruption in a $1.4 billion purchase of 31 Airbus jets.

An official spokesman, who requested no further identification, said the Central Bureau of Investigation filed the charges with the court of a special anti-corruption judge.

The government document named as defendants Airbus Industrie, International Aero Engines of East Hartford, Conn., and S.S. Sidhu, former secretary of civil aviation and currently secretary-general of Montreal-based International Civil Aviation Organization.

International Aero Engines is a consortium of aircraft engine makers from five countries - the United States (Pratt & Whitney whose parent company is United Technologies Corp.) Japan, West Germany, United Kingdom (Rolls-Royce PLC) and Italy (Fiat SpA).

Also named were R. Prasad and Capt. Kamini Chadha, former managing directors of state-owned Indian Airlines, and B.K. Bhasin, former deputy managing director of the country's main domestic carrier, the spokesman said.

Sidhu already faces charges of corruption in connection with a 1981 $330 million purchase of four submarines from a West German company involving $23 million in kickbacks. At the time, Sidhu was defense secretary. There was no immediate reaction from any of the defendants.

The charges are the latest development in a series of investigations ordered by Prime Minister V.P. Singh into cases of alleged corruption that occurred during the five-year rule of his predecessor, Rajiv Gandhi, that ended in December.

The most prominent case involved the alleged payment of kickbacks by A.B. Bofors of Sweden in the $1.3 billion 1986 sale of artillery to the Indian army. Gandhi has vehemently denied allegations that he personally shared in payments.

The spokesman said the CBI was asked to investigate the Airbus purchase following the Feb. 14 crash of an A-320 in the southern city of Bangalore in which 90 people died, sparking a flurry of Indian news reports alleging corruption in the deal.

He said the former officials allegedly accepted an undisclosed amount of kickbacks in return for changing plans by Indian Airlines to purchase aircraft from The Boeing Co. "by brushing aside all objections and giving a favorable picture of the A-320."

The former Gandhi government signed in July 1984 a letter of intent to purchase 12 Boeing passengers jets. It abruptly canceled the plans after receiving an "unsolicited offer" in October that year from Airbus Industrie, the Press Trust of India quoted the government document as saying.

On March 15, 1986, Indian Airlines and Airbus Industrie signed a $1.4 billion contract for the purchase of 19 A-320s, with an option for 12 more of the sophisticated jets. India exercised the option in June 1989. The decision to opt for the A-320s was taken "in total disregard" of recommendations made by an expert panel, the document said.

The committee, according to the spokesman, reviewed a number of aircraft as replacements for aging Boeing 737-200s and turboprops and recommended the Boeing 757-200. The government document said the panel did not consider the Airbus A-320 because it had not been officially launched, the Press Trust reported.

However, the Civil Aviation Ministry "insisted on a quick evaluation of the Airbus A-320, which was done informally. Eventually, on the basis of misrepresented facts and deliberate projection of the Airbus A-320 as a better and economical offer, orders of the government were obtained," the agency quoted the goivernment paper as saying.

It said that Boeing submitted a revised offer for its Boeing 737-300, but the offer "was brushed aside," it added. Indian experts became concerned about the Airbus aircraft after an A-320 crashed at the June 1988 Paris Air Show.

"Yet the accused officers, in conspiracy with others, brushed aside all the objections and gave a favorable picture of the A-320 on the basis of which, purchase of the aircraft was approved by the government," the government charged.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (MARCH 29) UPI - The defense minister said Thursday the army will be slashed by almost 100,000 troops because of ''the new atmosphere of peace in Eastern Europe,'' but warned against removing nuclear weapons from the continent.

Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg also said compulsory military service might be shortened from 18 months to 12.

''We intend to reduce the number of active soldiers from 495,000 to 400,000 (because of) the new atmosphere of peace in Eastern Europe,'' Stoltenberg told a Bonn conference on the role of the army.

Stoltenberg gave no date for the planned cuts.

The defense minister reminded the conference of a tentative agreement that NATO reached with the Warsaw Pact in February under which the number of U.S. troops in West Germany would fall to 195,000.

''We figure on a reduction of U.S. soldiers in Germany from around 250,000 to fewer than 200,000,'' he said.

But he warned that the situation in Eastern Europe and particularly in the Soviet Union remains unstable, leaving a strong need for Western defense commitments.

''A complete denuclearization of Europe or Germany is not in the best interest of the security or stability of our continent but might rather encourage a regional political conflict,'' Stoltenberg said.

''The use of military power to achieve one-sided political goals is not out of the question, as we have so painfully seen in Lithuania recently,'' he said.

He reiterated his commitment to Germany's membership in NATO after the likely unification of the two German states.

But he said no NATO units will be stationed in what is now East German territory.

He criticized suggestions that both German states quit their respective military alliances as a first step toward unification.

''A neutral Germany would not contribute to the stability of Europe but would rather create instability,'' he said.

Several Western leaders said recently they would agree to a scenario that entailed a continued Soviet military presence in the eastern part of a reunited Germany.

''The German unification process is parallel to the changes in Eastern and Western Europe,'' Stoltenberg said. ''The solution to the German question is of great importance for the building of a new European security system.''

MIAMI BEACH, FL (MARCH 29) UPI - A Norwegian freighter rammed a Coast Guard patrol boat that was docked at the agency's Miami Beach station Thursday, gouging out a huge dent in the Coast Guard vessel and damaging two concrete piers.

No one was injured, Coast Guard Petty Officer Carl Vitevich said.

The 82-foot patrol boat Point Charles was tied to the pier at the Coast Guard's Miami Beach station, where it had just had its engines replaced. The 250-foot container ship Sokan was trying to dock at a commercial container dock nearby shortly after 8 a.m.

''When they were coming in, turning around, they rammed our boat,'' Vitevich said.

The impact left a huge dent in the right side of the Point Charles' hull, crushed a forward cabin and caused at least two forward decks to buckle, the Coast Guard said.

The cutter remained watertight and Coast Guard investigators were still on board Thursday inspecting the damage.

Seas in the area were calm and there was no immediate indication what caused the accident.

Vitevich said the Miami Marine Safety Office would investigate and that there was a chance charges could be filed against the freighter's crew as a result.

The freighter also gouged out 20 feet of one concrete pier and damaged another concrete pier.

The patrol boat Point Charles is homeported in West Palm Beach. The Sokan's homeport is Haugesund, Norway.

MINNEAPOLIS (MARCH 29) UPI - Control Data Corp. has said it will pay retired top executive Robert Price $7.9 million from 1989 through 1992. The computer systems company also said it laid off 7,750 employees in 1989 at least twice as many as previously announced.

Price's benefits, disclosed in Control Data's proxy statement Wednesday, include about $5.5 million to be paid in 1990 for salary, benefits, and severance.

The size of last year's layoffs was disclosed in the company's 1989 financial report, also released Wednesday, said CDC spokesman Frank Ryan. Control Data had announced only 3,000-4,000 layoffs during the year.

Control Data said Norbert Berg, the retired deputy chairman who was criticized by stockholders for his 1988 retirement package of $4.7 million in salary, severance, and benefits, will not stand for re-election to the board of directors at the annual stockholders meeting May 2. No reason was given for Berg's decision. He will not be replaced, and board membership will be reduced to 11.

Price retired as a Control Data employee this month but continues as chairman. He is receiving the multimillion-dollar financial package despite the company's 1989 loss of $680.4 million, possibly the largest corporate loss in Minnesota history.

The financial report said employment declined by 15,500 last year to the current 18,000 workers. According to Ryan, about half the reduction came through layoffs and the other half through divestitures, retirements and attrition. Ryan also said he did not know how many of the layoffs were in Minnesota.

Ryan said Price's financial package was a contract approved by the board of directors in 1986 when Control Data also had serious problems. He said the amount was deemed appropriate because of the risks and the task of turning the company around. "The amount shouldn't surprise anybody," Ryan said.

Analysts have said Price is retiring at a time when the company appears to be on the verge of a financial turnaround, although they give much of the credit to Lawrence Perlman, who succeeded Price as chief executive officer in January.

MACAO (MARCH 29) UPI - Police fired shots into the air Thursday and arrested at least 1,000 people in order to control a mob of some 50,000 illegal Chinese immigrants demanding to be included in an immigration amnesty in the Portuguese enclave.

Witnesses said dozens of people were trampled as the mob converged on a dog racing track in the normally sleepy gambling center 40 miles west of Hong Kong to be registered by police.

Doctors at a nearby hospital said they had treated and released more than 100 people and at least five people remained hospitalized.

The government announced Tuesday it would grant the right to live legally in Macao to some 4,200 people - the parents of illegal immigrant children allowed to remain in during an amnesty in 1989.

Following the announcement, huge crowds of illegal immigrants began streaming across the border from China, demanding to be included in the amnesty.

Macao, the oldest Western settlement in Asia, is a 6 square mile Portuguese territory at the tip of southern China.

Police closed Macao's border with China for three hours Thursday morning in a bid to stop Chinese nationals from entering the Portuguese enclave and ordered the growing crowd of illegal immigrants already in Macao to proceed to the dog track for processing.

Hundreds of people began pushing as the crowd got close to the track, triggering a panicked run into the stadium, witnesses said.

They said scores of people were trampled in the stampede and police fired shots in the air to bring the crowd under control. Authorities said they arrested more than 1,000 people.

Police took each person's name and thumb print, but said they were skeptical about the group's chances of gaining the right to live in Macao.

The Portuguese enclave, with an estimated population of 500,000, reverts to Chinese control in 1999, two years after Hong Kong returns to Beijing.

Some 100,000 of Macao's mainly ethnic Chinese population who were born in the enclave have been granted the right to live in Portugal after 1999.

OSLO, NORWAY (MARCH 29) UPI - A rare lithographic print of Norwegian painter Edvard Munch's ''Madonna'' was stolen from an art gallery in central Oslo early Thursday, police said.

Munch's ''Madonna,'' one of the most famous lithographic works, and three lesser-known works of art were removed by the thieves, who used an iron rail to batter down the entrance to the gallery.

A witness delivering newspapers in the area told police that two suspicious looking men were seen entering a car near the gallery about 5 a.m. Thursday.

According to one of the gallery owners, the theft of the ''Madonna'' was likely to have been what he called a ''contract job'' for a collector.

Kjell Wenstad of the Kunsthuset gallery said the print, estimated to be worth about $245,000, was very rare and would be extremely difficult to sell.

''Any legitimate buyer would want to see a certificate from the Munch Museum in Oslo as to the exact condition of the print,'' he said.

Edvard Munch (1863-1944) is Norway's most famous painter. The bulk of his large production is housed in a museum in the center of Oslo.

Three years ago another of his most famous works, ''The Vampire,'' was stolen from the museum. It was later retrieved.

EAST RUTHERFORD, NJ (MARCH 29) UPI - Sam Bowie, finishing his first healthy season in five years, Thursday signed a five-year, $12.5 million contract with the New Jersey Nets.

Bowie, who joined the Nets last summer from Portland, would have become a free agent after this season. New Jersey acquired the 7-foot-1, 240-pound center along with a first-round draft choice from the Trail Blazers for power forward Buck Williams last June. The draft pick became point guard Mookie Blalock.

Bowie, 29, is averaging 14.4 points and 10.0 rebounds in 33 minutes per game for the NBA's second-to-worst team. He moved past Joe Barry Carroll as the starting center last November, enabling New Jersey to trade Carroll to Denver.

''I'm happy that this is over,'' Bowie said at a Thursday news conference.

''I'm very happy to stay with New Jersey and I want to be part of this team as it builds its way towards contention.''

Bowie missed 319 games because of injury in his four years with Portland. After playing 76 games as a rookie in 1984-85, he sat out most of the last three seasons with leg injuries.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 29) UPI - Col. Yehuda Meir, charged with ordering soldiers to break the limbs of nearly two dozen Palestinian prisoners, went on trial Thursday more than two years after the military announced its ''beatings policy.''

Meir, dressed in civilian clothes, denied the eight charges brought against him during the court-martial proceedings, including abuse, intentionally causing serious damage and behavior unacceptable for an officer.

Meir is the highest ranking officer charged in the Israeli military's controversial beatings policy. He is on leave from the military without pay.

''The whole army functioned by the same norms, or at least similar norms as were explained,'' said Meir, a resident of the West Bank settlement of Oranit ,who arrived at the packed courtroom with family and friends.

''It is as if they didn't do anything and it was only us. We are only part a small part,'' he said. ''As it is, there is a serious prbolem for officers and soldiers to stand up to the problems in the field. I hope that such trials will not have a bad influence on them.''

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who resigned his Cabinet post during this month's collapse of the Likud-Labor coalition government, announced on Jan. 19, 1988, the military's controversial policy of ''force, might and beatings.'' Condemned both within Israel and abroad, the military has backed down on officially sanctioning such measures to quell the 27-month-old uprising.

The charges against Meir stem from incidents Jan. 20 and 21, 1988, in the Israeli-occupied West Bank villages of Hawara and Beita in the Nablus region under the colonel's command. Meir allegedly ordered soldiers under his command to break the legs and arms of 20 handcuffed Palestinian prisoners.

During testimony at the opening of Meir's court-martial Thursday, an officer identified only as ''Lieutenant A'' told the military prosecutor that Meir told soldiers to beat the detainees and leave them because the prisons were full, Army Radio reported. ''This was an order from up high '' Army Radio said Meir told ''Lieutenant A.''

In May 1989, Meir was severely reprimanded for allegedly ordering the soldiers to abuse the Palestinian prisoners and stepped down from his post without a court martial.

When the military decided against a court martial, the Association for Civil Rights in Israel filed a petition to Israel's High Court to force proceedings against Meir. In December 1989, the court accepted the association's arguments and ordered that Meir face a court martial.

In the aftermath of Rabin's announced beatings policy, four Israeli soldiers were acquitted in May 1989 of beating to death a Palestinian prisoner in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip, but found guilty of brutality. The Givati trial, so named because of the soldiers' brigade, was a key test of the military policy.

As part of that military court's 100-page ruling, the three-judge panel recommended that soldiers receive clear instructions on what they cannot do and that guidelines be established on the detention of prisoners.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - Donald Trump hates divorce but finds it is good for business.

''Getting a divorce is a very horrible thing on a personal basis. I hate it. I hate the concept of divorce. It's not nice. It's not something I relish at all,'' Trump told Charles Gibson, co-host of ABC's ''Good Morning America,'' in a taped interview to air April 2, opening day of Trump's new Taj Mahal resort casino in Atlantic City, N.J.

Trump, who is being sued for half of his estimated $5 billion fortune by his estranged wife, Ivana, took Gibson on a tour of the new project.

The developer was asked if the publicity about his divorce and relationship with model Marla Maples would help or hurt business.

''It brings people maybe for the wrong reasons,'' Trump said. ''I don't like bringing people for that reason, but nevertheless, the controversy, probably, is not a negative thing in terms of a building or a business.''

''The 200 press people we were expecting are now over 2,000,'' Trump said of the hoopla surrounding the opening of the Taj Mahal. ''I don't know why exactly, but perhaps, unfortunately, I can guess.''

Trump was indignant about suggestions that his divorce is a publicity stunt.

''I've read aricles where people think I'm staging this. They're sick. These are sick people,'' he said, adding:

''I do not like getting divorced, but it's someting that has to be done. People grow apart.''

Asked about his attitude toward money, he spoke of the Taj Mahal, which he described as a billion-dollar building, and said: ''To me it's fun and if you make money with it, that's good, that shows the scorecard that you've won. ... Life's a game when you get right down to it.''

Gibson did not quite finish asking whether money buys happiness when Trump cut in and said: ''No, but it makes life a lot easier.''

ORBE, SWITZERLAND (MARCH 29) UPI - Lebanese hijacker Mohamed Hussein Hariri, serving a life sentence for air piracy and murder, was caught in a night escape attempt, officials at the Bochuz maximum security prison reported Thursday.

Hariri had managed to file through the bars of his cell but set off alarms and was found at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday close to the high wire fencing surrounding the penitentiary, an official statement said.

''It is not known where he obtained the file or if there was an outside accomplice,'' the statement said.

Hariri, 23, received a life sentence in February 1989 for the 1987 hijacking of an Air Afrique DC-10 airliner on a flight from Brazzaville to Paris. Hariri forced the plane to land in Geneva.

Hariri demanded the release of fellow Lebanese Shiite terrorists imprisoned in West Germany known as the Hamedi brothers and shot a French passenger in the back of the head before being overpowered by police who stormed the plane.

Swiss officials believe there could be a link between Hariri's sentence and the abduction last Oct. 6 of two Swiss orthopedic technicians working for the International Committee of the Red Cross in the Lebanese port of Sidon.

The Red Cross workers, Elio Erriquez and Emmanuel Christen, have not been heard from and the kidnappers have not made themselves known.

There have been anonymous messages demanding Hariri's release as the price of freedom for Erriquez and Christen, who had been training Lebanese in fitting artificial limbs for victims of the country's civil conflict.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - The prosecution in the Rev. Al Sharpton's fraud and grand larceny trial Thursday described the Pentecostal minister's youth organization as a ''charade'' to bilk donors of their money.

''This case, ladies and gentlemen, is about fraud, a particularly ugly type fraud - charity fraud,'' Assistant Attorney General Victor Genecin told the jury in state Supreme Court in his opening statements.

Sharpton, 35, is accused of stealing at least $250,000 from the National Youth Movement, a Brooklyn charity he founded while in high school in 1971. If convicted, he faces up to seven years in prison.

Sharpton's attorney, Alton Maddox Jr., was scheduled to make his opening remarks later Thursday.

Genecin told the nine-woman, three-man jury it would hear from more than 50 witnesses and see piles of bank records.

He termed the youth organization a ''sham ... which was supposed to benefit minority youth through anti-drug programs and the creation of jobs.'' Instead, Genecin said it was ''a charade that bore no resemblance to the organization he represented on paper to the donors.''

As Genecin spoke, the portly civil rights gadfly, nattily dressed in a navy blue pin-striped suit, sat impassively at the defense table. The courtroom behind him was packed with his supporters and others waited out in the hallway.

When Genecin finished shortly before noon, Sharpton turned to the crowd and shook his head in disgust.

Sharpton has claimed he is the target of a political vendetta sparked by the Tawana Brawley case.

Genecin said Sharpton told donors that the youth organization had more than 30,000 members and chapters in 16 cities nationwide, and that it had created 15,000 jobs.

In fact, Genecin said, the National Youth Movment was a one-room office with an ever-changing staff whose main responsibiities were getting coffee and running errands for Sharpton.

''It was hardly a headquarters of a national organization,'' he said. ''It was nothing but a way to get money and publicity for Al Sharpton.''

Genecin told the jury that Sharpton had three purposes in creating the organization: To get money for himself, to promote himself as a show business entrepreneur for fund-raising affairs, and to set up a bank account so he could conceal his own earnings and avoid paying taxes.

LONDON (MARCH 29) UPI - Neckties have been used to join the legs of single beds in hotels, make a bikini top for a suddenly topless woman and support an exhaust pipe on a sports car, tie makers said Thursday in celebration of their 104th anniversary.

The Guild of British Tie Makers heralded the necktie as an essential fashion item in the male wardrobe that also ''has served its wearer above and beyond the call of duty - and survived.''

''When Sir Walter Raleigh sacrificed his cloak in a puddle of mud, for the benefit of a lady, he established that the mark of a gentleman was his unreserved willingness to utilize treasured garments from his wardrobe to assist others - and, indeed, to assist himself,'' the guild said in its own birthday card.

''No male garment has served its master better than the tie. It is a vital fashion item which has, over the years, established itself as man's best fashion friend.''

The guild said ties have been put to use in the heat of passion to link the legs of two single hotelroom beds, create ''a bikini top for a lady in distress after the top had been swept away by the tide,'' and as a bonnet during hurricane winds.

One tie's last use was as a support for an exhaust pipe on an Aston Martin sports car.

Ties also are essential for emergency first aid, the guild said, having been used as a tourniquet on a badly cut arm, to bind a handkerchief to a leg wound and as a splint wrap on a fractured ankle.

A tie has doubled as a dog's lead when the pooch ate the original, to support a grape vine when the original twine had snapped, and to hide soup stains on a shirt - if the soup missed the tie.

A custom persists from the 19th century of looping a school tie through one's trousers while playing cricket.

The 70-member guild, which is about two decades old, was ambigious about what it is celebrating.

Spokesman Tony Edwards said, ''it is thought the tie made its first appearance 104 years ago,'' and tie manufacturing certainly dates from then.

Avril Hart, a fashion expert at the Victoria and Albert Museum, said ''You are allowed to be fairly imprecise'' about the origin of the modern slip-knot tie because the facts are unclear.

Clip-on ties were popular in the 1860s but a man of fashion preferred to tie his own, which apparently led to the manufacture of slip-knot ties, Hart said.

The self-tie necktie was slow to gain popularity, however, Hart said. ''It wasn't considered terribly smart to wear a pre-knotted tie, but there are some men who are too lazy and not terribly talented and preferred clip-ons.''

Today, even young boys commonly wear ties in Britain. Their ties often reflect their age and station in life. They move from school, to regimental, to club, to corporate tie, Edwards said.

As part of the birthday celebration, guild representatives are touring television stations, ''to see that they are wearing the right ties,'' Edwards said.

''The right tie now is a fairly colorful tie, multi-patterned. It should be worn with a white shirt and a muted suit.'' The blade of the tie is properly 3 inches wide, although Americans are wearing narrower ties, he said.

LONDON (MARCH 29) UPI - Stock prices closed lower Thursday on the London International stock exchange in light trading amid some disappointing earnings reports.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 8.0 points Wednesday, fell 12.0 points to 2,263.02. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 11.8 points to 1,781.2.

Volume amounted to around 435 million shares, compared with 359 million shares changing hands on Wednesday.

A string of corporate results released early in the day represented a large source of the movement in individual issues, analysts said.

However, market watchers noted that several of the companies reported earnings that were below market expectations and the earnings reports were the main source of trading in what was described as an otherwise dull session.

On the economic front, the Bank of England reported Britain's narrow money supply M-0 rose a seasonally adjusted 6.4 percent in the 12-month period ending February 1990.

The increase was unchanged from the bank's preliminary estimate March 20 and above the government's target range of 1 percent to 5 percent for growth in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1990.

On a monthly basis, M-0, which consists of notes and coins in circulation plus banks' operational balances with the Bank of England, rose 0.2 percent.

Analysts noted the government report went unnoticed by most investors.

On the earnings front, building materials group Redland eased 3 cents to $9.01 after reporting a 13 percent rise in pretax profits for 1989, but a 19 percent drop in new orders.

RMC, another major building product concern, lost 33 cents to $10 after announcing that cement prices are softening.

Guardian Royal Exchange gained 3 cents to $3.64 despite reporting a 38 percent decline in pretax profits. The results, which were in line with expectations, were attributed to GRE's Irish and French subsidiaries as well as an unusually large number of fire claims in Britain.

Burmah Oil gained 15 cents to $9.58 after the oil company reported a 9.5 percent gain in pretax profits for the year and Polly Peck lost 8 cents to $6.24 on news of a 44 percent increase in its latest profits.

Carlton Communications lost 56 cents to $8.48 amid speculation that it may buy the combined 56 percent stake in Thames Television which owners BET and Thorn EMI said Thursday they will be selling.

Thames TV climbed 53 cents to $8.10 after the news.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ (MARCH 29) UPI - Donald Trump received approval Thursday from state gaming regulators to open the palatial $1 billion Taj Mahal Casino Resort, the developer's third casino in the famed resort city.

The state Casino Control Commission voted unanimously to grant Trump a license. The New York developer also owns the Trump Plaza and the Trump Castle resorts. New Jersey law allows a single licensee to own a maximum of three casinos.

The property's grand opening next week will feature fireworks and a laser show. "This was the greatest job I've ever done," said Trump, adding: "Most people did not think it could be built."

Industry analysts have said that Trump will have to take in more than $1 million daily to make the 1,250-room Taj a success. Trump floated $675 million in junk bonds to build the extravagant Boardwalk casino and must obtain $94 million annually to service the debt.

Marvin Roffman, a veteran securities analyst who tracks casino companies, was fired Friday from Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. of Philadelphia after refusing to retract his opinion that the Taj might have difficulty during the traditionally slow winter months. Trump had complained to the firm about the analyst's views.

Taj President Walter Haybert fended off questions whether the new casino could take business away from Trump's other resorts. "The better facilities very quickly regain their market share through the growth of the new market," he said. Valerie Armstrong, acting casino commission chairwoman, said, "We wish our new licensee the very best and hope that things go successfully."

The Taj, which sports minarets and $14 million worth of chandeliers, has a 120,000-square-foot casino area said to be the world's largest gaming hall and 12 restaurants. At 42 stories, the Taj is New Jersey's tallest building.

The casino is scheduled to open its doors Monday for "play money" gambling with the casino commission and the Division of Gaming Enforcement evaluating operations until they are satisfied the staff is capable of handling real money.

"This operator is seasoned," said Anthony Parillo, director of the state Division of Gaming Enforcement. "They have been through two openings before. It should be a fairly smooth opening." Taj executives hope to get all regulatory approvals by next Thursday's official opening.

Resorts International Inc., Atlantic City's first gaming company, began construction on the Taj in 1983. Work on the project was halted several times as a result of financial problems.

Trump won the Taj from entertainer Merv Griffin in November 1988 after a bitter battle for control of Resorts. The two agreed to split the company, with Trump getting the Taj and Griffin the existing Resorts International Casino Hotel as well as a casino in the Bahamas. Griffin is hoping spillover business from the Taj would swell his casino's depleted coffers.

There had been reports that model Marla Maples, who has been romantically linked to Trump, would attend the ribbon-cutting ceremony. Trump, who is seeking a divorce from his wife, Ivana, reportedly has withdrawn an invitation for Maples to come to the Taj debut.

CAIRO, EGYPT (MARCH 29) UPI - Iraq denied Thursday it was involved in an attempt to smuggle trigger devices for nuclear weapons, while Arab diplomatic sources said Saudi Arabian aid for Baghdad's nuclear program was for peaceful purposes only.

Saudi Arabia's King Fahd signed a non-aggression pact with Iraq last year and pledged to bankroll Iraq's nuclear program after a 1981 Israeli air raid knocked out an Iraqi nuclear reactor under construction near Baghdad.

Arab diplomats in Cairo said Saudi Arabia's growing concern about Iran persuaded King Fahd to brush aside earlier reservations about providing Iraq with aid after the 8-year Iran-Iraq war, which ended with a cease-fire in August 1988.

''Saudi Arabia's gesture to Iraq is definitely helping Iraq rebuild its nuclear capacity, there is no doubt about that,'' one Arab envoy told United Press International.

''But the Saudi cash is meant to help Iraq's peaceful nuclear program. Iraqi nuclear weapons would threaten Saudi Arabia as much as anybody else.''

It was not immediately known how much Saudi money has gone to help Iraq's nuclear project, but one Gulf-based banker said: ''We're talking billions of dollars.''

The war-shattered economy of Iraq, one of the world's largest oil producers, is short of cash.

Authorities in Britain Wednesday intercepted 40 components for nuclear trigger devices they said were bound for Iraq. An 18-month investigation by U.S. and British customs agents resulted in confiscation of the components and the arrests of five people in raids at London's Heathrow Airport, an Iraqi Airways office and the suburban headquarters of Euromac, an export firm.

In Baghdad, the official Iraqi News Agency INA made no mention of possible Saudi and other Gulf Arab concern over its nuclear program after Wednesday's arrests, but quoted a foreign ministry spokesman as denying British charges.

The Iraqi foreign ministry spokesman said his country reserved the right to take similar measures in response to Britain's arrest of an Iraqi employee.

Iraqi Foreign Undersecretary Nizar Hamdoun told Britain's charge d'affaires in Baghdad that Iraq had not violated any laws, and had a right to transfer technology like any other country.

State-owned Baghdad Radio quoted Hamdoun telling the British diplomat that Iraq was one of the signatories of a nuclear non-proliferation treaty, and that London's anti-Iraqi campaign had the aim of preparing for an Israeli attack against Iraq similar to the 1981 Israeli strike.

Arab political observers in Cairo said Iraq would never contemplate using a possible nuclear capability against a fellow-Arab nation such as Saudi Arabia, but admitted that the obvious aim would be to achieve strategic parity with Israel. Arabs believe the Jewish state has a nuclear strike capability, but Israel has never admitted this.

It also remained unclear if Saudi Arabia was fully aware of Iraq's nuclear program and its repercussions.

''Even if we assume the Saudis wouldn't mind having nuclear weapons for their own missiles, how can they be sure such weapons in Iraqi hands would not allow an aggressive, postwar Baghdad to impose its will on the rest of the Arab world?'' asked one Arab observer.

''It's no secret that Gulf Arabs allied with Iraq against Iran also fear Iraq,'' the observer said.

A published report Thursday quoted U.S. intelligence officials as saying Iraq is installing medium-range Soviet-made ballistic missiles capable of striking targets in Israel, Turkey and Cyprus with nuclear or chemical warheads.

The Washington Times quoted intelligence officials as saying more than a dozen missiles have been detected at three remote bases in Iraq.

Abdulrahman Jamil, press counselor for the Iraqi Embassy in Washington, confirmed his nation is developing intermediate-range missiles, but said he had no knowledge of any missiles at the three bases identified by intelligence officials.

The report said Iraq is not expected to have nuclear warheads for several years. Jamil denied Iraq is developing nuclear weapons or has any chemical weapons at all.

The report said the missiles at the three bases have a range of about 558 miles.

The United States has long warned about the dangers of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East.

''We again call upon nuclear suppliers to exercise special restraint in providing materials related to the development of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and intermediate range missiles in this volatile area '' President Bush said Wednesday.

His warning came the same day reports from Beijing indicated China was preparing to deliver a new shipment of missiles to an unnamed Mideast nation, even though it had pledged to the United States that it would not sell any more intermediate-range missiles in the region.

Saudi Arabia is known to have secretly acquired Chinese intermediate-range ballistic missiles, in a move that soured relations with the United States. The Saudis later tried to mend ties with Washington by agreeing to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and vowing never to place nuclear warheads on their missiles.

(MARCH 29) UPI - Top Soviet military officials are promising Lithuanian deserters from the Red army that they will be given a general amnesty if they return to their units. The order was announced today by the Soviet general staff. There are an estimated 15-hundred deserters now in hiding. The move appears aimed at avoiding a repeat of Tuesday's arrests of about 20 Lithuanian deserters by Soviet troops.

A report in New York City indicates the proverbial ounce of prevention would have save the lives of 87 people who died last weekend in an arson fire at an illegal social club. The report says the New York officials repeatedly cited the landlords of the social club for hazardous conditions in buildings they own or lease... citations which were ignored.

A report today says the Pentagon is planning to cut BILLIONS of dollars from U-S strategic weapons-building programs. Senator William Cohen already has served noticed that there's a growing consensus on Capitol Hill to cut production of the B-2 Stealth bomber. Defense Secretary Cheney is pressing Congress for funds to modernize the U-S arsenal.

The president of China's supreme court today attacked Western nations for criticizing last year's crackdown on the pro-democracy movement. He decried so-called ''Western hegemonists'' for making groundless accusations that China conducted secret interrogations and refused to conduct fair trials. He also said alleged human rights abuses were ''vicious slanders.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (MARCH 29) UPI - Technicians carefully loaded the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope aboard the shuttle Discovery Thursday in a major step toward putting the most expensive civilian satellite ever built into orbit in two weeks.

The delicate six-hour procedure began about 10:40 a.m., two days late because of work to capture or kill dozens of tiny ''midges'' - small flies that look like tiny mosquitoes - that infiltrated the telescope's ultra-clean launch pad storage room earlier this week.

Concerned about the remote possibility of contamination, engineers did not remove two giant plastic bags around the telescope until after the bugs were eradicated and NASA spokesman George Diller said the pesky insects never had a chance of getting inside the instrument.

''I am not aware of a single problem we've had since we started,'' he said of the 25,500-pound telescope's installation aboard Discovery. ''It's gone very well.''

The Hubble Space Telescope, the most expensive civilian satellite ever built, was taken to launch pad 39B a day ahead of schedule Sunday and even with the delay in installation, NASA officials say Discovery and its four-man, one-woman crew remained on track for takeoff around April 12.

Because launch processing has proceeded so smoothly, NASA managers are leaning strongly toward moving the flight ahead two days to April 10.

But sources said while Discovery should be ready to go April 10, the agency may stick with the original launch date because of ''political'' considerations, including logistics for VIPs and scheduled appearances by top NASA officials before Congress.

An official launch date will be announced Saturday at the conclusion of a two-day flight readiness review at the Kennedy Space Center chaired by William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight.

An April 10 launch would be scheduled for 9:24 a.m. and Discovery's countdown would begin at 3 p.m. Saturday, April 7. The April 12 launch time is 9:21 a.m. with the countdown beginning at 3 p.m. Monday, April 9.

At the controls will be commander Loren Shriver, 45, and co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43. Their crewmates are flight engineer Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38, the first American woman to walk in space.

Operating 380 miles above Earth's turbulent atmosphere, the Hubble Space Telescope is expected to revolutionize optical astronomy, allowing scientists to see farther into the universe than ever before and with 10 times the clarity of ground-based instruments.

The telescope's installation in Discovery's cargo hold Thursday thus marked a major milestone for a project running seven years behind schedule and more than $1 billion over budget.

Technicians planned to work overnight Thursday hooking up electrical cables before a six-hour test to make sure power and computer commands can travel to and from the telescope.

''Starting on Sunday, we will begin with 52 hours of pad confidence testing,'' Diller said, in which engineers will ''check out the telescope's systems and science instruments. This is the last big major test that the telescope has to achieve before we say we think we're ready to go.''

After the 2 1/2-day test, engineers will charge up the telescope's high-tech battery packs before closing Discovery's payload bay doors two days before launch.

(MARCH 29) UPI - Political observers say Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke appears to have won a record fourth term in what may be down under's closest election since 1961. Hawke today pledged that his Labor Party will move quickly to solve the economic, social and environmental problems facing Australia. The official results from Saturday's balloting have NOT yet been confirmed.

Good news from elephant and rhinocerous protectionists. Kenya's Director of Wildlife Services Richard Leakey says the international ban on ivory trade appears to have crippled East Africa's illegal ivory market. Leakey says the price for poached elephant ivory sold in neighboring Somalia had fallen to two or three dollars per kilogram compared to 30 or 40 dollars one year ago.

Authorities in Dania, Florida, have charged a four-year-old boy with arson for allegedly setting fire to a bed. Officials say the fire triggered a blaze that caused 15-thousand dollars' damage to an apartment. The youth... who was NOT identified... has been charged and released into the custody of his parents and ordered to undergo counseling with his family.

LONDON (MARCH 29) UPI - Shell UK Oil said Thursday it is raising gasoline prices Apr. 2 in a move that could add about 0.1 percent to Britain's retail price index if followed by other major gas retailers.

Shell said it will increase the price of leaded gasoline by 0.088 cents to $3.34 a gallon and unleaded gasoline by 0.587 cents to $3.25 a gallon.

Shell attributed the price rises to higher spot oil prices and a lower pound sterling.

The price hikes followed tax increases announced in the budget Mar. 20, which added 0.147 cents to a gallon of unleaded gasoline and 0.18 cents to a gallon of leaded gasoline.

British Petroleum, the country's largest gas retailer, said it would be monitoring prices over the next few days before deciding whether to follow suit.

''It is too early to see whether the recent rise in petroleum prices over the last few days will be sustained,'' a BP spokesman said.

Keith Skeoch, economist at brokers James Capel, said the gas price rise is ''distinctly unhelpful'' to the government in its battle with inflation.

He raised his forecast for April retail price index 0.1 percent to 9 percent and now expects inflation to peak at 9.4 percent this year.

MOSCOW (MARCH 29) UPI - The Soviet Union has appointed a senior career diplomat as its first ambassador to the Vatican, the Soviet news agency Tass reported Thursday.

Tass said Juri Karlov, 52, at present a member of the Executive Council of UNESCO, had been appointed ''Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary'' to the Vatican.

The Vatican announced March 15 that the papal state and the Soviet Union had agreed to establish formal diplomatic contacts, naming its own ambassador, or apostolic nuncio, to Moscow as Archbishop Francesco Colasuonno.

A Vatican spokesman said at the time the move fell short of establishing full diplomatic relations, but was rather ''an exchange of official representatives at a personal level.''

Neither Karlov now Colasuonno are expected to take up residence in the Vatican or Moscow. Colasuonno is the Vatican's roving ambassador with special responsibility for Eastern Europe.

It was not immediately clear where Karlov would be based. An expert on Vatican affairs, Karlov previously served for six years with the Soviet embassy in Rome.

Last Aug. 26, Karlov delivered a letter from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to Pope John Paul II that paved the way for the Dec. 1 meeting between the two men - the first ever such official meeting between a pope and a leader of that communist country.

TOKYO (MARCH 29) UPI - U.S. Ambassador Michael Armacost, conceding he lacks the arm-twisting clout in Congress of his illustrous predecessor Mike Mansfield, said Thursday he hopes the United States and Japan may be on the verge of a breakthrough in crucial trade negotiations.

''I don't despair at all. I would like to think that some understanding will fall into place on each of these issues in the very near future,'' Armacost said in an interview with United Press International.

His comments came five days before Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu was to arm Japanese trade negotiators with a package of concessions to present to their U.S. counterparts in Washington in talks Apr. 2-3.

If the concessions - aimed at removing Japanese structural barriers to trade and investment - fail to satisfy the U.S. administration, Congress is expected to step up demands for economic retaliation against Tokyo.

Armacost, belying the traditional role of an ambassador who quietly carries out the wishes of his president, has played no small role in trying to ease escalating trade friction between the two countries.

Armacost was appointed as the United States' 23rd ambassador to Japan a year ago, succeeding Mansfield, the former Senate majority leader, who served in the post 11 years.

Mansfield was praised in Japan as an elder statesman who was able to smooth over potentially contentious issues by ''getting on the phone to members of Congress who would give him a friendly ear,'' according to his embassy associates.

Armacost, a distinguished career diplomat but never a politician, lacks clout in Congress but has made up for the shortcoming by immersing himself in the trade problems and personally attending many of the crucial negotiations.

''Mike Mansfield had a special rapport which I doubt anyone could match,'' Armacost said.

''I don't have any illusions about that, that I could muster that kind of clout with Congress. I like to to think I have a certain credibility. It's naturally harder work for me than it was for Mike because I don't bring to it the years of experience he had on the Hill. I'm not one of them.''

''And the mood has changed substantially,'' Armacost said. ''It was beginning to change even as Mike was here and in the last year there's been a discernable sharpening of the mood. So it has meant that I'm spending a lot more time back there (in Washington) than I normally would have.''

Armacost, a big man with a gentle demeanor, is no stranger to turmoil.

He was ambassador to the Philippines when Benigno Aquino was assassinated on Aug. 21, 1983, leading to the downfall of Ferdinand Marcos.

Later, as under secretary for political affairs at the State Department, he was credited with playing a key diplomatic role in the Soviet Union's decision to withdraw from Afghanistan.

''I would be very proud if during my time here I could make some small contribution to broadening the range of cooperative activity we have with Japan and at the same time assure that our economic relationship is equitable and growing, as it is and is destined to continue,'' he said.

''We have some big problems and there isn't any point in trying to shove them under the rug. I'm not an economist, but I know that when you have a $50 billion trade imbalance in Japan's favor you have a problem.''

But Armacost said he is cheered by Japan's recent resolve to try to meet U.S. demands to open its markets to supercomputers, satellites and manufactured wood products. The Bush administration last year labeled Japan an unfair trading partner over the three issues and set a June deadline for Tokyo to open the markets or face possible retaliation.

''In the last two weeks it appears a supercomputer understanding has fallen into place. There are discussions in Washington today on satellites with hints in the press suggesting some likely movement on the issue, and there is evidence of foward movement on wood products.

''There is a lot of evidence of activity here and we should know by early next week what the Japanese package looks like,'' Armacost said.

(MARCH 29) UPI - TODAY'S PEOPLE:

BLADES CUT FROM GMA: ''Good Morning America'' hostess Joan Lunden was left to interview an empty chair Thursday when her subject, singer-actor Reuben Blades, was pulled off the set by movie director Stephen Hopkins. Lunden was in New York and interviewing Blades live by remote from Los Angeles, where he is filming ''Predator II.'' Suddenly, Hopkins stepped in front of the camera in Los Angeles, told Blades, ''We have a film to shoot,'' pulled the earplug from his ear and started leading him away. Blades shrugged and went with his director. The stunned ''GMA'' people were left with empty air time, which they filled by making wisecracks about Hopkins. ''Well, gee, as I was saying before we were so rudely interrupted ...,'' Lunden said after a commercial. Co-host Charles Gibson turned to Lunden and said, ''You asked him (Blades) what attracted him to the movie. I wonder if it was the chance to work with such an amiable, congenial director? Nice friendly fellow.'' The movie people said they had to hurry up and finish a night scene before the sun came up in Los Angeles.

BAD REVIEWS FOR WRITER'S MANNERS: Spanish writer Camilo Jose Cela, the 1989 winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature, didn't impress a group of Miami students with his demeanor. Cela, 73, is attending a two-day conference on his work at the University of Miami and also visited the Carver Middle School. ''He was quite rude,'' said Karla Agurcia, 15. ''We asked him to sign a paper and he said, 'No, I only sign books.''' Cela, who has a reputation for being eccentric and not overly concerned with what people think of him, was described by other students as snobby, terse and mean during a question-and-answer session. ''He should have expressed his feelings better,'' said Christine Turner, 11. ''I think he said what first came to his mind and he didn't think about the answers. I don't think he was organized; like he didn't have any notes.''

THE BOOK ON HALSTON: The late designer Halston will be the subject of a biography, ''Simply Halston,'' being published next fall by G.P. Putnam's Sons. Steven Gaines, who has been researching his subject for the past three years, said Halston's death from AIDS this week was ''a great loss to both the design industry and to all the people who cared about him.'' Gaines's previous work includes books on the Beatles, the Beach Boys, Alice Cooper and evangelist Marjoe Gortner.

FROM HOMELESS TO MONKS: Homeless advocate Mitch Snyder of Washington, D.C. is planning a sabbatical in a Trappist monastery to rekindle his spirituality. ''It's not really time away from the madness,'' Snyder said. ''It's more a matter of time spent just with God. Over the past month, I've been increasingly feeling that need. Sometimes you become distant from the real power and the source, which is God.'' Snyder, 46, is awaiting formal permission from the Trappists at a Virginia monastery so he can stay for a month or so. Snyder, whose battles for the homeless were portrayed in a TV movie starring Martin Sheen, denied his decision was influenced by a hunger strike he aborted last week and recent setbacks for his movement in Washington.

SNAKE EYES: X-rated comic Andrew ''Dice'' Clay has something new to curse about. His ex-wife, Kathy Swanson, is suing him for $3 million she says she deserves for helping get his career started. Swanson, who has palimony lawyer Marvin Mitchelson representing her, says she agreed to put aside her acting aspirations after meeting Clay in 1980 in order to support him and help write his comedy act. In exchange, Clay agreed to share his earnings with Swanson after he became successful, the suit contends. ''It was the promised land,'' Mitchelson said. ''If she stuck with him and helped support them both, he would share with her when he arrived.'' They married in 1984, but divorced two years later. During their divorce proceedings, Swanson says Clay intimidated her into not using a lawyer. She consequently received support of $1,000 per month for 18 months under their divorce agreement. Her new suit seeks to set aside that settlement.

GDANSK, Poland (MARCH 29) UPI - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa urged all nations to stand up and be counted by recognizing Lithuania's declaration of independence from the Soviet Union.

Walesa charged that many world powers have a wait-and-see attitude regarding Lithuania.

''I am concerned with what the world is doing,'' he told a news conference. ''I am concerned that most (governments) do not want to expose themselves to risk and are waiting for the others to move.''

Walesa described government leaders as ''calculating people'' who do not want to alienate Moscow.

''World public opinion will put pressure on those who make decisions and it will say that Lithuanians can decide about their own fate,'' he said.

On Tuesday Walesa urged Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to negotiate with Lithuanian leaders just hours after Soviet paratroopers dragged Lithuanian army deserters from a psychiatric hopsital in Vilnius and took over the headquarters of Lithuania's breakaway Communist Party.

Bronislaw Geremek, chairman of the Solidarity parliamentary caucus who went to Vilnius earlier in the week, said Wednesday that Poland may be the first country to recognize the rebellious Baltic republic.

He pointed out that Poland is the only country to endorse the Lithuanian government's move towards independance and ''no other country has gone so far.''

In Warsaw, a lonely hunger striker remained for a second day outside the U.S. Embassy to protest Washington's cautious stance toward the Lithuanian crisis.

Andrzej Petruczanin, a 24-year-old student and activist in the Federation of Fighting Youth, said he would fast until the United States officially recognized the Baltic republic's independence.

''My hunger strike is directed against Washington's attitude because nobody will dare to recognize Lithuania if the United States does not do it first,'' he said.

Petruczanin, whose relatives came from Lithuania, has been camping out in front of the embassy.

BANGKOK, Thailand (MARCH 29) UPI - Thai police are trying to find a way to stop a new ''Nigeria connection'' that is funneling Southeast Asian heroin to Europe, Thailand's top anti-narcotics officer said Thursday.

''Nigerians have suddenly become the leading drug couriers,'' said Lt. Gen. Chavalit Yodmanee, secretary general of the Narcotics Control Board.

Chavalit said police and customs officials have arrested 41 Nigerians on narcotics-trafficking charges since the beginning of the year, compared with only eight Nigerians arrested in all of last year.

So far this year, 198 pounds of heroin have been seized from the Nigerian couriers.

''The evidence is that the heroin is going through Lagos (Nigeria's capital) and on to Europe, or sometimes it goes directly to Europe,'' he said.

The indirect routing, the lack of Nigerian diplomatic representation in Thailand and Thai unfamiliarity with the African nation make investigation difficult, he said.

Chavalit said about 300 Nigerians come to Thailand each month - often on shopping expeditions.

''Normally they buy lots of clothes and electrical goods and tie it all together in a huge bundle,'' he said.

The big bundles are difficult to X-ray properly and time-consuming to unpack and then repack, creating particular problems for customs officials at Bangkok's busy airport, he said.

Chavalit said the government was trying to work out measures to stop the trafficking via Nigeria and that some kind of ban on visas was being considered.

''But you can't punish an entire country for the criminal acts of a few,'' he said.

Chavalit said Thai police were trying to forge closer links with their counterparts in Nigeria to try to get to the mastermind and financiers behind the traffic instead of only the lowly couriers.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - Soviet citizens questioned on their attitudes toward Jews show ''disturbingly high'' levels of anti-Semitism, a survey reported Thursday.

However, the poll, the first of its kind in years, showed high majorities insisting that Jews were entitled to all civil rights, including equal education, employment and the right to stay in the Soviet Union or emigrate.

The survey was conducted with the cooperation of the Institute of Sociology of the Soviet Academy of Sciences and directed by politican science professors James Gibson and Raymond Duch of the University of Houston.

It was funded by the American Jewish Committee, the National Science Foundation and the University of Houston.

''The first systematic study of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union in decades has found disturbingly high levels of anti-Jewish feeling,'' said Sholom Comay, national president of the American Jewish Committee, in releasing the results.

He said the organization urged Soviet leaders to ''condemn manifestations of anti-Semitism in their country.''

Between February 16 and March 4, 506 adult Soviet citizens were questioned in the Moscow area. Eighty-eight were of Russian background, the report said.

Asked how widespread anti-Jewish feeling is in the Soviet Union today, 60 percent said some people are anti-Jewish, 17 percent said most people are and 19 percent said very few.

Asked whether they liked or disliked Jews, on a scale ranging from 1 to 11 18 percent said they liked them, 18 percent expressed dislike, including 6 percent who indicated strong dislike. The other 65 percent were neutral, the survey said.

Fourteen percent indicated they favored the extreme anti-Semitic group, Pamyat.

Asked about anti-Semitism in general, 48 percent said it was on the rise, 44 percent said it was unchanged and 5 percent said they thought it was diminishing.

Thirty-three percent agreed with the statement, ''When it comes to choosing between people and money, Jews will choose money,'' the survey reported.

Ten percent said they agreed with the statement ''Jews deserve to be punished because they killed Christ.''

In the area of civil rights, 91 percent said Jews should be free to decide whether to stay in the Soviet Union or emigrate.

Ninety percent said the Soviet government should guarantee the rights of educational opportunity and 88 percent said the same rights should apply to equal employment opportunities.

Seventy-four percent said the government should do more to control anti-Semitism in the country.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The turf war between Wall Street and Chicago's La Salle Street surfaced Thursday as a Senate panel considered how financial futures should be regulated and which federal agency should have jurisdiction.

The jurisdictional dispute pits the Securities and Exchange Commission, which regulates the stock market in New York and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, regulator of Chicago's futures market. "If bullets fly between Wall Street and La Salle Street, the bodies will fall on Main Street," said Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa.

The dispute arose amid debate within the securities industry about whether computerized program trading, which involves both markets, has triggered the volatility that has chased individual investors away from the markets. A proposal to merge the CFTC into the SEC has been made in a bill introduced in the House and is supported by many in the securities industry.

CFTC Chairman Wendy Gramm, defending her agency's ability to regulate futures trading, said there is no evidence to support theories that stock index futures are driving investors away from the market.

"Direct stock market participation by individuals has indeed declined, but not because of stock index futures," she said. "The decline has been going on for decades and is transforming the financial services industry around the world."

Gramm told the securities subcommitte of the Senate Bank Committee that the commission opposes any changes in its jurisdiction because it does not believe such a change would resolve problems facing the market today.

"The commission believe that the case for shifting jurisdiction over stock index futures to the SEC or for merging the two agencies simply has not been made," she said.

But Richard Breeden, chairman of the SEC, told the panel that the current fragmented regulation of the markets is stifling and driving new investment products to overseas markets.

"Unlike every other country with developed capital markets, the United States alone divided regulation of equity securities from regulation of derivatives on equity securities," he said.

Breeden said the stock and futures markets should be regulated by one agency, the SEC. "Common sense may be a useful tool in analyzing this problem," he said. "Traffic control on a highway could not be expected to work effectively if northbound lanes were under one set of rules and enforcement, while southbound lanes came under different laws and a different highway patrol."

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who along with Gramm, Breeden and Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady make up a White House committee on financial markets, said the Fed did not think that consolidation of jurisdiction was needed.

Greenspan said he personally believed, with some reservation, that the SEC should regulate both stock futures indexes and stocks. "I feel that we'd probably be ill served by too much consolidation," he added. "As a consequence, I feel uncomfortable about trying to push our organizations under a single head."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, which oversees the CFTC, told the panel the jurisdictional dispute did not need congressional involvement.

"If the current incumbents cannot settle their arguments, that is no reason for Congress to conduct radical surgery on a regulatory structure evolved over 60 years," he said. "Instead, President Bush should take his appointees to the woodshed and remind them that they are on the same team."

(MARCH 29) UPI - Three people were charged in a London court today with trying to smuggle to Iraq 40 components needed to trigger nuclear weapons. Iraq is denying interest in the components and accused Britain of starting a slander campaign against Baghdad. U-S and British Customs agents raided a hangar at Heathrow Airport in London yesterday, arresting five people and seizing dummy components that had been substituted for the real triggers in a ''sting'' operation.

The Soviet military softened its rhetoric today. It now is promising amnesty for Lithuanian deserters if they return to their units... but that is coupled with a vow that any who do NOT return will be flushed out. Soviet troops earlier this week stormed a psychiatric hospital and dragged out about 20 deserters. There are about 15-hundred Lithuanian deserters in hiding.

The chief political parties in East Germany open talks today on establishing a broad coalition that would form the nation's first NON-communist government in 40 years. Party officials arriving for the talks in East Berlin expressed confidence that conservative and liberal officials will be able to agree on a coalition by Easter Sunday, April 15th.

VILNIUS, Lithuania, U.S.S.R. (MARCH 29) UPI - Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis implored the U.S. Congress Thursday to recognize the rebellious Soviet republic's independence as part of the liberation of Eastern Europe.

Landsbergis has previously asked for Western recognition of independence, but his entreaty Thursday was the first direct request to Congress.

''The freedom of Lithuania is in great danger,'' Landsbergis said in an appeal that began with the words, ''Dear senators, dear congressmen.''

Vilnius and Moscow are in a showdown over the issue of the breakaway republic's fate. Lithuania's Communists were unseated by the Sajudis nationalists in February parliamentary elections and on March 11 the new Parliament declared independence from the Soviet Union.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has called the declaration illegal and invalid and refuses to recognize the republic's claim to self-rule.

Soviet paratroopers arrested about 20 Lithuanian army deserters in a psychiatric hospital Tuesday and later seized the headquarters of the republic's independent communists, who broke with the Moscow party after last month's elections.

In an interview Thursday with the Soviet news agency Tass, a senior Lithuanian Communist Party official still loyal to Moscow said Gorbachev may have to impose direct presidential rule on the restive republic.

Vladislav Shved, second secretary of Lithuania's Moscow-loyal Communist Party told Tass that Lithuania is in a state of constitutional crisis and the republic was becoming ungovernable.

Shved added that, if no changes occurred, ''the only way to settle the crisis would be to introduce presidential rule on Lithuanian territory.''

Direct rule by Gorbachev, using the new powers vested in his semi-dictatorial presidency, would entail a decision by the Supreme Soviet to allow Lithuania to be ruled by decree from Moscow, suspending local government and the Lithuanian Parliament.

If direct rule were imposed on Lithuania from Moscow, it would be the first time Gorbachev made use of his new executive powers, which enable him to govern unruly republics, declare war and restore citizenship.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov predicted the Lithuania crisis will grow calmer with time and that the republic would follow legal procedures.

''If they want to go, then they have the referendum, a transition period and then they can leave - not just shutting the door,'' Gerasimov said.

He was referring to Gorbachev's entreaties that Lithuania await a law on secession now making its way through the Supreme Soviet. The draft law provides for a plebiscite and a five-year transition period.

But Gerasimov said Landsbergis has not been helpful.

''Gorbachev has sent two cables to that professor of music, Mr. Landsbergis, the chairman of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet, but got no real answer,'' he said, refusing to call him president but noting his musicology profession.

Landsbergis's appeal to Congress came hours after Lithuanian and Soviet officials said Lithuanian citizens are largely ignoring Gorbachev's orders to turn in their firearms and stop forming civilian brigades.

Landsbergis, who has failed to coax a single country into recognizing Lithuania's independence, directed his appeal to legislators of the United States, which has never recognized the Soviet annexation of the three Baltic states in 1940.

''Support for Lithuania is support for freedom and democracy in Eastern Europe,'' he added.

''The recognition of the government of the re-established republic of Lithuania that we request is a very important step towards strengthening peace in the world,'' Landsbergis said.

Meanwhile, the war of nerves wore on in the Baltic republic.

Soviet army Col. V. Uskhopchik, in a statement delivered to Landsbergis earlier in the week and released to reporters Thursday, said Lithuanians had recently assaulted military bases in abortive weapons raids.

The commander of the Soviet army garrison in Vilnius cited five incidents March 17-23 in which he said Lithuanians attacked military facilities in the capital and in the cities of Kaunas and Trakai.

''Weapons are being sold secretly in the market places of various cities

'' said Uskhopchik, adding that vendors were demanding an equivalent of $2,400 for a submachine gun.

Earlier, the Soviet military, softening its stance, promised Lithuanian deserters amnesty if they return to their units. The clemency order announced by the general staff appeared aimed at avoiding a repetition of Tuesday's embarrassing hospital raid.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 29) UPI - Thousands of demonstrators marched to Parliament Thursday to back demands that new deputies be screened to make sure they never worked for the ''Stasi,'' or secret police of the former hard-line communist government.

Several thousand people held similar demonstrations in other east German cities.

In East Berlin, the demonstrators, chanting ''Stasi out,'' assembled at the Alexander Platz, scene of massive rallies during pro-democracy protests that played a key role in ending four decades of Stalinist rule last fall.

From the downtown plaza the demonstrators marched to the Palace of the Republic, seat of the East German Parliament.

Several thousand people roared approval as a speaker declared, ''We need deputies we can trust.'' There have been claims recently that the new 400-seat Parliament will include several former Stasi informers.

Conservative Prime Minister-designate Lothar de Maiziere and his main opponent in March 18 elections, Social-Democrat Ibrahim Boehme, have rejected recent claims they worked for the once-feared secret police.

''Without a clearing-up of the Stasi question, the new East German Parliament will have no authority,'' said Werner Schultz of the New Forum group - which was one of the leading movements in what became known as East Germany's peaceful revolution last fall.

A New Forum parliamentary deputy called for the formation of an independent commission to scrutinize files recently seized in offices of the now-disbanded State Security Service.

The formation of a new government has been complicated by the claims that leading politicians worked for the Stasi.

But officials of the main political parties said Thursday they were confident a government will be formed by Easter.

Leaders of the Christian-Democratic Union and the Social-Democratic Party said they had found many common points during initial coalition talks Thursday.

De Maiziere, who led the CDU to electoral victory with 163 seats, said both parties opposed the integration of the country into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization after German unification.

The CDU and SPD officials said they will hold further talks to clear outstanding issues.

A liberal alliance, which will have 21 parliamentary seats, had indicated earlier it was willing to join a government coalition.

Although a conservative-liberal coalition without the SPD would hold an absolute majority, it would not have the two-thirds majority needed to implement the constitutional amendments that will legally open the way for reunification with West Germany.

The SPD will have 88 parliamentary seats.

(MARCH 29) UPI - Violence between warring Zulu supporters of the United Democratic Front and the rival Inkatha tribal movement appeared to ease in South Africa's Natal province today. But chaos with public transportion kept thousands of black workers home and more than 100 schools closed for the day. Police say at least 15 people were killed and 60 injured in running battles involving more than 12-thousand Zulus yesterday. At least 138 homes were burned to the ground.

UNICEF is appealing to warring Christian factions in Beirut to observe a three-day cease-fire next week so the agency can vaccinate the nation's children. A UNICEF official says that if such basic needs are ignored, then the existence of Lebanon's next generation is at stake. The appeal comes today as the rival forces exchanged heavy machine-gun and artillery fire... pinning thousands of civilians in underground shelters.

A one-time champion powerboat racer, his father and his business lawyer have all been convicted of running a multi-Million-dollar marijuana smuggling and money laundering operation. A federal court jury in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, yesterday returned the verdicts against champion racer Benjamin Kramer and the others. Kramer is already serving a life prison term for a 1988 drug smuggling conviction in Illinois.

There were fewer people filing claims for state unemployment insurance benefits for the week ended March 17th. The Labor Department reports that initial claims for the benefits dropped to 350-thousand... a decline of 10-thousand. The government also says that during the week of March 10th, the unadjusted rate of insured unemployment fell from two-point-nine percent to two-point-seven percent.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The nation's three "hottest" housing markets are West Palm Beach, Fla., Akron, Ohio, and Greenville, S.C., a survey released Thursday said.

U.S. News & World Report, in its forthcoming edition, also reported in a survey made in conjunction with the Wharton Econometric Forecasting Group that the three "coolest" housing markets are Youngstown, Ohio, Flint, Mich., and Jersey City, N.J.

The survey analyzed trends in the country's 100 largest metropolitan areas to identify the 25 markets where house prices are appreciating and depreceating the fastest.

The magazine reported that West Palm Beach's country-club atmosphere has helped lure newcomers to increase population by 40 percent since 1980.

Housing prices in Akron have been rising rapidly because of a recent increase in white-collar workers, the survey found, while the Greenville area has grown because of a number of foreign firms moving there.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The National Association of Securities Dealers Inc. said Thursday it has proposed to the Securities and Exchange Commission raising the basic listing requirements for the NASDAQ Stock Market.

The new standards, adopted by the NASD board at a meeting earlier this month, would not affect NASDAQ National Market companies, whose current listing requirements are considerably higher, said John T. Wall, executive vice president for marketing and market services.

The NASDAQ National Market includes stocks of larger companies than those on the NASDAQ Stock Market. The National Market trades about two-thirds of NASDAQ stocks.

For initial listing of a security on the NASDAQ Stock Market, the filing proposes setting minimums of $4 million in the issuer company's assets and $2 million in capital and surplus, compared to present requirements of $2 million and $1 million, respectively.

In addition to the current requirement that an issue have a public float of 100,000 shares, the float would have to have a market value of $1 million. There would also be a minimum bid price of $3; there is now no such dollar standard.

The filing also proposed higher standards for securities to continue to be listed in the NASDAQ Stock Market. The revised maintenance standards would require $2 million in assets, instead of the current $750,000; $1 million in capital and surplus, up from $375,000; a market value of float of $200,000; two market makers, instead of one; and a minimum bid price of $1.

Market makers are dealers committed to making a market for a certain issue. They may do so by trading in the stock or holding some stock for their own account, and they effectively act as a stock's wholesalers, explained NASD spokesman Robert Ferri.

Increasing the various listing requirements would take into account the effects of inflation since they were last amended in 1981, Wall said. The action was also prompted by a Jan. 10 letter in which the SEC expressed concern that some promoters might seek a listing on the NASDAQ Stock Market to try to circumvent a recent rule that imposes restrictions on trading penny stocks in the over-the-counter market.

The NASD noted that raising the standards may result in certain low-priced securities being deleted from the NASDAQ market. In addition, potential issuers that previously may have qualified under the present listing requirements may not qualify under the proposed requirements. As a result, the NASD said it would delay the date that the new maintenance criteria would take effect until Jan. 1, 1991.

The NASD said it will also provide an alternative trading medium, the OTC Bulletin Board, for companies having securities that are not eligible for listing on or may be deleted from NASDAQ. The OTC Bulletin Board would provide brokerages with more company information than the current Pink Sheet.

CHICAGO (MARCH 29) UPI - Grain and soybean futures were supported by fairly active buying and light country movement and closed higher Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Gains were limited by the weather and positioning ahead of the acreage and stocks reports to be released Friday. Rain was predicted for much of the Grain Belt into the weekend.

The overall volume was light and trading ranges were narrow.

Soybeans rebounded from the sharp losses Wednesday and were higher across the board. Most of the gains were attributed to short-covering and a slight rally in soybean oil.

Scattered buying activity in oil and meal was based on hopes of near-term export sales.

The grains were mostly higher, although widespread selling kept a lid on the market.

May wheat made a contract low of $3.47 per bushel and closed at $3.53, a gain of 3 cents on the day.

South Korea bought 50,000 tons of corn and Algeria was in the market for 75,000 tons of wheat, otherwise the export market was quiet.

Basis levels were steady to firm.

At the close, corn was up 1/2 to 3/4, soybeans up 3/4 to 4, wheat up 1 to 3 and oats up 1 1/4 to 1 3/4.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (MARCH 29) UPI - The government fired the head of Malev airlines and announced Thursday it was resuming flights to Tel Aviv, halted last week because of terrorist threats linked to Jewish immigration to Israel.

Transportation Minister Andras Derzsi said Malev was resuming its regular tri-weekly flights to Israel but would no longer operate special charter flights for Israeli-bound Soviet Jews.

Malev suspended both regular and chartered flights to Israel last week after the terrorist group Islamic Jihad threatened to attack airlines transporting Soviet Jews to Israel, where some have been settling in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank.

Airline director-general Lajos Jahoda, who canceled the Budapest-Tel Aviv service last week, was fired Wednesday, the government said.

Although no official explanation for the dismissal was given, the decision to cancel the flights had exposed the Hungarian government to criticism from the United States and several other countries.

Derzsi said Malev halted the service without consulting Foreign Ministry officals.

''The incident has caused Malev more loss of face'' than income, the official news agency MTI quoted Derzsi as saying.

MTI said Malev would now ''carry on its regular Tel Aviv flights all passengers who bear valid passports and tickets irrespective of their nationality and religion.''

But it said the earlier agreement on operating charter flights for Israeli-bound Soviet Jews ''was not sufficiently circumspect.''

Malev spokesman Ferenc Urban said Thursday the airline, in resuming service to Tel Aviv, has asked the government to beef up security to ensure the safety of Malev passengers and crew.

Tuesday, the U.S. State Department criticized Malev for canceling the flights and denounced as ''outrageous'' the threat by the Islamic Jihad to attack air carriers transporting Soviet Jews going to Israel.

Malev initially decided to offer direct flights to Israel after the Soviet government, under pressure from Arab countries, refused to allow direct flights from Moscow to Tel Aviv.

The Malev office in Moscow sold at least 1,300 advance tickets for flights to Tel Aviv, MTI said. About 500 people who were stranded by the decision to cancel the flights were rerouted by other airlines.

The immigration of Soviet Jews to Israel became an explosive political issue after the Israeli government began settling some of the newcomers in occupied lands annexed by Israel in 1967.

Besides canceling flights to Tel Aviv, Malev also suspended its service to Beirut, saying Lebanese airspace was unsafe because of factional fighting.

STUART, FL (MARCH 29) UPI - An animal rights activist who characterized greased pig contests as cruel filed a criminal complaint Thursday against the Martin County Fair to stop the 27-year tradition.

Lacey Fox, a graphic artist from Stuart, and other animal rights activists appeared before the fair board two weeks ago and asked that members end the contest. The board deferred action indefinitely.

Fair manager Gregory Bean said the matter probably would not be decided until board members consulted with officials from other Florida county fairs next month.

In the contest, held at the fair earlier this month, six to eight young pigs are greased, then turned loose in front of a crowd, and school children try to catch them. The first one who does gets to keep the pig, said Bean.

Bean said the contest is not cruel.

But Fox said the animals are frightened by the crowd noise and commotion, are pounced on by ''big fat guys'' and may be injured when contestants carry them by the back legs.

Sgt. Billy Chase of the Martin County Sheriff's Office said the case would be investigated and the results would be presented to the state attorney's office, which would decide whether to prosecute.

CLEVELAND (MARCH 29) UPI - A city that had virtually no downtown life after dark five years ago celebrated the arrival of a shopping center Thursday that will remain open evenings and weekends with 110 stores and 11 movie theaters.

The Avenue at Tower City Center begins at the heart of downtown, Public Square, cuts through Cleveland's tallest building, the Terminal Tower, and dips underneath two city streets before ending with a view of the Cuyahoga River. In the middle is the hub of the county's commuter train system.

Downtown is also the proposed site of a baseball stadium-indoor arena complex that voters are being asked May 8 to help pay for with a tax on cigarettes and alcohol.

''This is only the beginning,'' Mayor Michael White said. ''We're going to build a new Cleveland and Tower City Center will be the center.''

Scheduled to open later this year are Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Marriott and Hyatt Regency hotels. Old buildings, such as the city's former main post office, are finding new uses.

The Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame and Museum is to open at Tower City Center in late 1992.

The Avenue at Tower City Center arrived with more fanfare than any recent downtown Cleveland development.

''Our city, Cleveland, is on a roll for the '90s,'' Mayor White said. ''It eptomizes what our community is all about ... commitment to this city.''

Forest City Enterprises, owner of Tower City Center, said it was amazed at the response from people interested in being tenants.

''Our retail space is over 93 percent committed,'' Forest City Vice President Emerick Corsi said. ''It is one of the highest preleasing percentages of any center in the country. We have been able to put together a balanced mix of fashion tenants thanks to the hundreds of Greater Clevelanders who told us what types of signature stores they wanted.''

Forty percent of the stores, representing 60 percent of the 350,000 square feet, opened Thursday. The others will open during the next several months.

With the varied mix of stores, developers hope to attract people both from the nearby suburbs and cities half-day trips away. There is little downtown population in Cleveland.

LONDON (MARCH 29) UPI - Three people were charged Thursday with trying to smuggle to Iraq 40 components needed to trigger nuclear weapons, and two of them were indicted on similar charges in the United States.

An 18-month investigation by U.S. and British customs agents resulted Wednesday in confiscation of the shipment and the arrests of five people in raids at London's Heathrow Airport, an Iraqi Airways office and the suburban headquarters of Euromac, an export firm.

Baghdad denied seeking the restricted materials and accused Britain of mounting a slander campaign against Iraq.

Britain ordered the deportation of one of the five people arrested - Iraqi Omar Latif, an employee of the state airlines.

Three others were charged in Uxbridge Magistrates Court with trying to illegally export restricted equipment.

French-born export executive Jeanine Celestine Speckman, 41, was released on bail until May 10; Toufic Fouad Amyuni, 37, a Lebanese engineer, and Ali Ashour Daghir, 49, director of the export firm Euromac, were detained until an April 5 hearing. Daghir was born in Iraq and is a naturalized Briton.

A fifth person was released after questioning.

In the U.S. case, Daghir and Speckman were among five individuals and two British companies named in a five-count federal indictment in San Diego released Thursday.

Also named were Karim Dhadis Omran, Dafir Al-Azawi and Wallid Issa Ahmad, all identified as Iraqi citizens living in Iraq.

The two British companies were identified as European Manufacturer Center Ltd. and Atlas Equipment (U.K.) Ltd.

The defendants were all charged with conspiring to export banned military equipment to Iraq. Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The U.S. Attorney's office had no immediate comment on the indictments, which were handed down March 23 and unsealed after the London arrests. It was not known if the defendants held in Britain would be extradited to the United States.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said in Parliament the seizure Wednesday showed that his nation was commited to stopping nuclear proliferation. He called on all nations to try halting the spread of ballistic missiles now possessed by 20 countries.

''Iraq is not the only power in the Middle East with nuclear ambitions,'' he said. ''It shows that vigilance pays off and it points to the vital need to solve by negotiation the wider conflicts in the Middle East.''

A Customs official said the London sting operation netted 40 capacitors, which can be used to trigger a nuclear weapon.

Capacitors emit a powerful electrical jolt that detonates conventional explosives, which in turn causes fissionable material to collide, triggering a nuclear explosion. The devices, which are made by six countries, cost about $40 each and are the size of a thimble.

In Baghdad, an Iraqi Foreign Ministry spokesman quoted on the state-run

INA news agency denied as ''baseless'' Britain's allegations that Baghdad sought the components.

''Iraq holds British authorities responsible for the repercussions of the measure that was taken against the Iraqi citizen,'' the official was quoted as saying about the expulsion of the airline employee. Iraq also reserved the right to reciprocate, he said.

The spokesman said the actions were part of a slander campaign ''by the British authorities and media along with Zionist circles ... against Iraq, with the aim of threatening its security and paving the way, politically and media-wise, to attack it.''

Saudi Arabia's King Fahd signed a non-aggression pact with Iraq last year and pledged to bankroll Iraq's nuclear program after a 1981 Israeli air raid knocked out an Iraqi nuclear reactor under construction near Baghdad.

"Saudi Arabia's gesture to Iraq is definitely helping Iraq rebuild its nuclear capacity, there is no doubt about that,'' one Arab envoy told United Press International. ''But the Saudi cash is meant to help Iraq's peaceful nuclear program. Iraqi nuclear weapons would threaten Saudi Arabia as much as anybody else.''

In Washington, Iraqi Ambassador Mohamed Al-Mashat said on Public Broadcasting Service television that his nation is not developing atomic weapons and that all of its nuclear facilities are subject to international inspection under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

SPRINGFIELD, MO (MARCH 29) UPI - A black bear cub that was abandoned in a supermarket parking lot last week in southwestern Missouri was being comforted Thursday with a teddy bear in the nursery of a Springfield zoo.

An anonymous caller told Barry County officials the cub was in the parking lot at Ramey's Grocery Store in Cassville, about 80 miles southwest of Springfield, on Mar. 21, said Bill Stimson, an agent with the Missouri Department of Conservation.

The cub, about 5 weeks old, was left in a small cardboard box, Stimson said. He said the box also contained a blanket and baby bottle filled with milk.

''Somebody had to have the cub in their possession,'' Stimson said.

''Missouri law doesn't allow animals to be taken from the wild into captivity,'' he said. ''I think the person either learned that they weren't allowed by law to keep it or decided they didn't want it. They thought they would get in trouble and didn't know what to do with it.''

John Collette, curator of the Dickerson Park Zoo, said the cub is in a nursery and ''two or three people are taking care of it.''

''They have to take it home and feed it through the night and then through the day in the nursery,'' he said.

He said the cub, which was named Melvin, is fed ''about six times a day. He gets frustrated when he's hungry and you don't feed him. He's sleeping pretty good now that he's got a full belly.''

Melvin has gained two pounds since he has been living at the zoo, officials said. Collette said the cub will be transferred to another zoo when it is about 5 or 6 months old.

As for the teddy bear, zoo officials hope the toy will ease the cub's loneliness, Collette said.

''We just put it in there so he has something to snuggle with,'' he said. ''He plays with it. We're just trying to give it some company.

''The best thing would be to have another baby bear with him, but you do what you can. He's chewing on it and throwing it around. It gives him something to do.''

However, Stimson said he still was concerned about the possibility that the cub had siblings.

''Usually there's twins or triplets born, so we think there are one or two siblings around, which causes us some concern,'' he said. ''We don't know whether they were taken at the same time or left with their mother.''

Stimson also discourages such bear-napping for practical and legal reasons.

''People think any baby is cute and they take it home with them,'' he said. ''We've had that happen with all animals. People see the animal by themselves and think the mother has left them, which is not the case.

''They should do the baby and themselves a favor because they don't make good pets.''

BOISE, ID (MARCH 29) UPI - With pressure intensifying on both sides of the issue, Gov. Cecil Andrus for the first time Thursday voiced grave concerns about a bill that would end 95 percent of all abortions performed in Idaho.

Andrus, consistently an abortion foe, gave no indication, however, whether he would sign or veto the bill that would prohibit abortion as a means of birth control, giving Idaho the most restrictive state abortion statute in the nation.

''I am concerned that this bill may narrow it to the point a person - a woman who has suffered rape, incest, a mother's life is in danger - might not even be able to receive an abortion,'' Andrus said.. ''Basically, that's what I'm agonizing over right now.''

There would not be enough votes to override a veto, based on lawmakers' votes on the issue.

The same concerns were voiced by constitutional scholars who testified to lawmakers on behalf of pro-choice forces during a series of public hearings on the bill this month before it was passed by the Legislature.

They said the restrictions are drawn unconstitutionally narrow, especially for rape, incest and threat to the life and health of the mother. But scholars for pro-life forces testified the restrictions are constitutional and humane.

The bill would prohibit all abortions except in cases of severe fetal deformity or in restricted cases of rape and incest or when a woman's life or health is in danger.

Andrus cautioned reporters not to read too much into his concern and promised to take action on the bill by the end of the week, possibly as late as midnight Saturday.

Janet Crepps, legislative coordinator for the Idaho Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, echoed Andrus' concerns.

''Abortions for rape victims could be totally unavailable within the state '' Crepps said. ''The abuse which these victims suffered by the rapist will be compounded. It amazes me that the bill's proponents call this a 'compassionate' bill.''

For example, victims of rape could not receive an abortion unless the crime is reported within seven days after it occurred - unless the victim is physically unable to report the rape.

The National Right to Life Committee, which helped draft the measure, views the bill as its best hope to force the Supreme Court to overturn its landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which legalized abortion nationwide.

Andrus said his decision would not be affected by a potentially disastrous boycott of Idaho potatoes - Idaho' No. 1 cash crop - and other products as well as tourism threatened by the National Organization of Women and other groups if he signs the bill.

''I can't ignore it, but it will not have anything to do with my decision-making process,'' said Andrus, a Democrat seeking election to a fourth term. ''Economic threats, outside influence and interests are not going to weigh in this.''

Idaho leads the nation in potato production with an estimated value of $630 million in 1989.

The J.R. Simplot Co. in Boise supplies more than half of the french fries for McDonald's restaurants worldwide. Tourism is Idaho's third-largest and fastest-growing industry.

Meantime, forces on both sides of the issue turned up the heat Thursday on Andrus to make a decision in their favor.

Beverly LaHaye, president and founder of Concerned Women for America, which she said represents 600,000 women nationwide, launched a massive counter offensive in Boise to ensure a boycott will not be effective.

LeHaye said the campaign, ''If You Love Life, Eat Idaho Potatoes,'' will more than offset a boycott, which she said was engineered by ''militant feminists ... trying to hold Idaho's farmers and their families hostage.''

Abortion-rights advocates dumped what they said were a total of 10,000 ''Idaho pro-choice potatoes'' in bags Thursday on the Capitol steps during a rally - saying they would be donated to feed the needy after the demonstration.

''Let's not make the women of Idaho pay for the actions of small groups with even smaller minds,'' said Bill Howard, a Boise State University student and part of the national pro-choice group Students Organizing Students.

Candlelight vigils have been held every night by pro-choice forces since the bill cleared the Senate last Thursday.

An initiative drive is under way to place a referendum on the November ballot that abortion rights groups say would invalidate the bill if it becomes law.

MINNEAPOLIS (MARCH 29) UPI - U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said Thursday national hearings on milk prices will be held this fall but denied they are in response to a lawsuit filed by four states and two milk cooperatives claiming price discrimination against Midwest dairy farmers.

"Some will say it is in response to a lawsuit filed by Minnesota and some milk producers," Yeutter told the annual convention of the Associated Milk Producers Inc. "I will say that is not the case. The pending lawsuit is a negative, not a positive, in this process. "We do not make policy on the basis of intimidation. We do not respond to lawsuits."

Bill Dropik, president of the 8,500-member Minnesota Milk Producers Association, said Wednesday the federal suit would be "put on the back burner" if Yeutter announced hearings.

Yeutter gave two federal lawmakers, Sen. Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota and Rep. Steve Gunderson of Wisconsin, both Republicans, credit for prompting the Agriculture Department to schedule hearings.

Yeutter said the proposed hearings would be conducted over a 60-day period this fall at a half-dozen areas of the country. He said the hearings would mark "a major change in modus operandi" on the part of the agency because it has never taken a complete look at the entire dairy pricing since marketing orders were created in the 1930s.

The marketing orders cover 41 areas of the country and regulate 80 percent of the Grade A fluid milk by setting minimum prices that must be paid to farmers by processors. The orders also cover other grades of dairy products and the amount of money that may be paid to shippers.

"Anyone with legitimate interest," including industry and consumer groups, can testify at the hearings, said Yeutter. A notice will be published in the Federal Register inviting all interested parties to submit proposals by May 31.

The secretary would not indicate what decisions the agency might make based on the hearings except to say the department is not likely to increase prices for high butterfat milk. "I see no reason to reward the production of fat," Yeutter said. "Most Americans try to reduce."

In January, the Minnesota Milk Producers Association filed a class-action suit on behalf of state dairy farmers and asked a federal court to force the secretary to hold hearings on price differentials for various dairy products.

The trade group sued because it contended that milk prices were more favorable for producers in southern and western states and that rules barred its members from shipping into those other markets and still make money.

Minnesota Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols, a Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, joined the suit. Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota said they would file friend of the court briefs. "Had the lawsuit been filed by Republicans, I would have responded negatively to them," Yeutter said.

ANKARA, TURKEY (MARCH 29) UPI - Prime Minister Yildirim Akbulut, shaken by the second resignation from his Cabinet in five weeks, appointed a new finance minister Thursday amid speculation that his government was crumbling.

Akbulut appointed Adnan Kahvechi, 40, as finance minister, replacing Ekrem Pakdemirli, who resigned late Wednesday after criticizing government handling of the economy.

Political sources said Pakdemirli handed his resignation to Akbulut at a Cabinet meeting that included discussion of, among other things, measures to fight rising violence in southeastern Turkey, where Kurdish separatists recently stepped up their activities.

On Feb. 20, Mesut Yilmaz resigned as foreign minister and Akbulut replaced him next day with Motherland Party stalwart Ali Bozer, 65, until then deputy premier.

Political sources said Akbulut's government now looks very shaky and could be crumbling.

Like Yilmaz, Pakdemirli resigned after a row with Akbulut. On Tuesday, he criticized the government for the way it handled the economy, after complaining that ''more than one head is trying to run the economy.''

Pakdemirli said Turkey's high inflation rate, which was crippling the economy, could be checked if a concerted effort was made.

In the past few days, the Motherland Party has come under sharp criticism for its inability to stem rising violence in the Kurdish areas of southeastern Turkey, where five people were killed this month in street clashes with security forces.

In a televised speech Wednesday, President Turgut Ozal invited the leaders of two opposition groups, the Social Democratic Populist Party and the True Path Party, to a discussion on ways to fight the Kurdish separatists.

Social Democratic leader Erdal Inonu accepted, but True Path Party leader Sulaiman Demiral said he would await a party decision on whether he should attend.

Kurdish guerrillas, led by the Marxist Leninist Kurdish Workers Party, or PKK, made a series of armed attacks on Turkish troops in the southeastern provinces, after vowing in August 1984 to set up an independent Kurdish state on Turkish soil.

MOSCOW (MARCH 29) UPI - Estonia's new nationalist parliament Thursday elected Arnold Ruutel to continue as president and lead the tiny Baltic republic on a non-confrontational path to independence, in contrast to the Baltic republic of Lithuania.

The smallest of the three Baltic states incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940, Estonia has promised it will not follow in the footsteps of nearby Lithuania, which unilaterally decided to secede March 11.

But the official Tass news agency said that para-military defense units were being formed across Estonia to protect the borders of a ''future independent republic.''

A leader of the Estonian Popular Front said that the paramilitary units will number 10,000 people by Aug. 1 in the republic, which has a population of 1.5 million.

Estonia's 105-member parliament, elected on March 18 with Popular Front candidates winning a majority of seats, wasted little time at its first session in electing Ruutel president.

In choosing Ruutel, Estonia opted for a veteran politician instead of selecting a leader of the Popular Front, such as Lithuania did when it chose Vytautas Landsbergis, leader of the Sajudis nationalist movement.

Ruutel, 61, an ethnic Estonian, is a member of the Communist Party and an agronomist by profession. He previously held the now defunct post of president of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, which lapsed with the election of the new parliament.

Like Lithuania, Estonia's Communist Party has voted to split from Moscow and declare itself independent.

The independent party will be headed by Vaino Vyalyas, a unifying figure who garnered the votes of 589 delegates out of 669. Vyalyas has led Estonia's Communists for the past two years.

Unlike the Lithuanian Communists, whose declaration of an independent party went into effect immediately, the Estonian Party Congress voted for gradual departure from the Soviet Union. It established a transition period, to end in October, to give Estonian Communists time to make up their mind on the independence issue.

In the interim, representatives of both pro- and anti-independence forces will share in running the party.

Lithuania's Communist Party also broke from the Soviet Communist Party in December but still suffered a resounding defeat in elections. Estonian communists, by comparison, won 55 of the 105 seats in the republic's parliament.

Lithuanian Communist leader Algirdas Brazauskas, who had helped spearhead the move toward independence, became an assitant to the prime minister in the new Sajudis-led government and he is perceived as someone who could possibly negotiate an end to the Lithuanian crisis with Gorbachev.

Vyalyas may be able to assume a similar role in Estonia, but from a stronger position.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Sales of stock, bond, and income mutual funds dropped to $11.8 billion in February from $13.7 billion in January but were up from the $8.1 billion in sales recorded in February 1989, the Investment Company Institute said Thursday.

The national association of the mutual fund industry said assets of all mutual funds increased to an all-time high of $1,006.7 billion in February from $984.4 billion in January.

Assets of stock and bond funds increased to $542.7 billion in February from $535.2 billion in January. Assets of money markets funds, including both taxable and tax-free, increased to $464.0 billion in February from $449.2 billion in January.

"Although total stock fund sales were down somewhat from January, the rebound in stock market prices in February attracted new money into stock funds, in addition to boosting the value of equity fund portfolios," said Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the institute.

(MARCH 29) UPI - President Bush says the nation is fighting AIDS with ''dignity, compassion and care.'' Bush is delivering his first major speech on the AIDS epidemic this morning to 400 business executives and labor leaders at the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS meeting in Washington, D-C.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis is pleading with the U-S Congress to recognize Lithuania's independence... saying its freedom-quote- ''is in great danger.'' Landsbergis says support for the Baltic state is support for freedom and democracy in eastern Europe. NOT one country has formally recognized Lithuania's independence.

West Germany is responding to the lessening communist threat in Europe with a plan to cut the nation's defense force by nearly 100-thousand troops. In Bonn today, Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg said compulsory military service may be shortened from the current 18 months to just one year.

The fighting between rival Zulu groups in the South African province of Natal appears to have subsided today after 24 hours of intense clashes. 15 people were killed in the running battles and 60 wounded. Officials say the death toll is expected to rise as police seach the area.

Peach growers in Delaware and parts of Maryland say the changeable Spring weather has destroyed their 1990 peach crop. Recent overnight temperatures dipped into the 20's after a false spring sent the mercury into the 80's. The unseasonal warmth brought out the peach blossoms and the freeze killed them.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - It may take a little more persuasion this year to convince Americans to set their clocks ahead Sunday to daylight-saving time - this spring's clock adjustment falls on April Fools' Day.

The ''spring forward'' part of the old addage, ''spring forward, fall back'' occurs at 2 a.m. local time on the first Sunday of April, depriving most Americans of an hour of sleep and plunging the nation into daylight-saving time and more sunlight at the end of the day.

The clocks go back at 2 a.m. local time on the last Sunday of October.

It has not always been so, and not everyone in the United States observes the practice.

For instance, Hawaii, Arizona, the Eastern Time Zone part of Indiana, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and American Samoa are not making the switch.

The seven months of daylight saving time now observed is based around the idea of providing an equal amount of extra evening sunlight on either side of the hottest days of the year, generally in late July.

Historically, the idea of juggling the hour hand about to adjust personal schedules to the longer and shorter days can be traced to Benjamin Franklin, who wrote a paper while serving as the U.S. envoy to France recommending that shops be opened and closed earlier during summer months to cut the costs of providing lighting.

William Willett began urging the adoption of daylight-saving time in England and during World War I it was adopted by England, France, Germany and a few other nations.

The United States took up the concept late in the war when President Wilson, on March 31, 1918, signed legislation promoted by Robert Garland of Pittsburgh. However, it was repealed the following year.

In the United States the practice was revived in World War II, and in 1966 the Uniform Time Act provided for the first nationwide observance of daylight-saving time during peacetime.

During the energy crisis of 1973 and 1974 the nation went to daylight-saving time year-round to conserve energy, but standard time was reinstated late in 1974 for the four-month winter period with the fewest hours of daylight.

Assignment to the Transportation Department of responsibility for administering the time law dates to the days when time zones were of importance because of the need for publishing standardized railroad schedules.

A study undertaken for the department during the energy crisis also revealed daylight-saving time to be both a life- and a money-saver.

The study indicated a 1.5 percent to 2 percent reduction in March and April highway traffic deaths any increase in hazards to early morning travelers. It showed a 6 million barrel savings in oil use for March and April, and noted that a study of violent crimes in Washington, D.C., indicated a 10 percent to 13 percent reduction in violent crimes during daylight saving time. In addition, the study listed a number of polls showing a public preference for eight months of daylight saving time, with standard time running from November through February.

The study, however, cited some disadvantages to extended daylight saving time, including uncomfortably late sunrises for several days in early March for those who live at the western edge of a time zone, and apprehension about early morning hazards to travelers. It said complaints might come from farmers more attuned to natural sunrise and sunset than time zones, from fundamentalist Christians who consider daylight-saving time unnatural, from outdoor theater owners, and from the elderly who have difficulty adjusting to the changeovers to and from daylight saving time, regardless of when they take place.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - World heavyweight boxing champion James Buster Douglas endorsed Thursday a federal program providing home fuel assistance for the poor, saying his family relied on a similar program to help pay heating bills.

Douglas testified at a Senate Labor and Human Resources subcommittee hearing on reauthorizing the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance program. President Bush has proposed $1.05 billion for fiscal year 1991, down from the current $1.39 billion level.

''My family and I fell upon hard times and weren't able to pay our bills, and through this funding, we were able to pay our bills and continue on. It would be tragic thing to ... not have it exist,'' said Douglas, 30, who grew up in Columbus, Ohio.

''Everyone wants a warm and safe home for their family. Nobody wants a handout, but some folks today need a helping hand,'' he said.

Douglas's family took advantage of a precursor to the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance program, which began in 1981.

ARLINGTON, VA (MARCH 29) UPI - In his first major speech on AIDS, President Bush pledged Thursday to press a ''wartime'' effort against the deadly disease, urged compassion for the infected and deplored discrimination.

Speaking to business executives and labor leaders in a Washington suburb, Bush asserted the country would ''meet the challenge'' and ''beat this virus'' because ''America will accept nothing less.''

''We're going to continue to fight like hell,'' he told the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS. In an emotional passage, he mentioned the death of his daughter from leukemia, compared the epidemic to outbreaks of crippling polio during his childhood and said he had friends who had died of AIDS.

''There is only one way to deal with an individual who is sick - with dignity, compassion, care, confidentiality, and without discrimination,'' he said.

''Once disease strikes, we don't blame those who are suffering,'' Bush said.

''We don't spurn the accident victim who didn't wear a seatbelt. We don't reject the cancer patient who didn't quit smoking. We try to love them and care for them and comfort them.

''We do not fire them. We don't evict them. We don't cancel their insurance.''

Activists praised Bush as the first president to make a major statement on acquired immune deficiency syndrome but also blasted him for failing to take more definite steps, such as eliminating immigration rules against people infected with the AIDS virus or seeking more money for treatment and research.

''In the end, the speech ... was long on compassion and short on commitment,'' Jean McGuire of the AIDS Action Council told a news conference. ''A decade of neglect requires more aggressive and substantive and meaningful leadership than we heard today.''

Protesters picketed the speech and five members of the AIDS group ACT-UP were arrested before Bush spoke. The 20-minute address also was interrupted by hecklers who were hustled out of the hall.

One man shouted, ''Too little, too late'' and ''Why did it take you 14 months?'' and Urvashi Vaid of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force held up a sign that said, ''Talk is cheap. AIDS funding is not.''

In response, Bush said, ''I can understand the concern these people feel and I hope that if we do nothing else by coming here I can help them understand that not only do you care, but we care too.''

During the speech, Bush said federal researchers are ''on a wartime footing'' against the AIDS, which destroys the body's disease-fighting system.

Transmitted by sexual or blood-to-blood contact, AIDS has stricken at least 124,984 Americans and killed 76,031 since it was first identified a decade ago. Its toll has been particularly heavy among homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

Describing the federal effort, Bush said, ''We are slashing red tape, accelerating schedules, boosting research. And somewhere out there, there's a Nobel Prize ... awaiting the man or woman who discovers the answer.''

Despite modest advances, Bush said, the ''crisis is not over.''

''Our goal is to turn irrational fear into rational facts,'' he said.

''The HIV virus is not spread by handshakes or hugs. You can't get it from food or drink, coughing or sneezing, or by sharing bathrooms or towels or conversation.''

''The transmission of HIV is as simple as it is deadly,'' he said. ''People are placed at risk not by their demographics, but by their deeds, by their behavior.''

But Bush added, ''We won't tolerate discrimination (because) we're in a fight against a disease, not a fight against people.'' He urged the House to pass the Americans with Disabilities Act, which prohibits discrimination against AIDS patients.

The president said that in 1982 only $8 million was spent on AIDS research but for 1990 the figure is $3.5 billion.

McGuire said figure was misleading because it included money for mandatory AIDS testing and from Medicare and Medicaid for caring for AIDS patients. Bush has asked for only about $1.6 billion for research and treatment, he said.

''We are calling for federal disaster relief,'' McGuire said. ''Compassion is going to do nothing for the people who are dying in our streets.''

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater defended the spending level, saying ''no matter how much the figure was, I'm sure (the activists) would be asking for more.''

On the immigration law, Fitzwater said the administration has been pushing ''to make those rules workable.'' The rules have prompted groups to threaten to boycott an upcoming international AIDS meeting in San Francisco.

At another news conference following the speech, members of the National AIDS Commission were less critical of Bush, calling the speech ''a milestone'' that was ''very strong and very eloquent.''

NEW YORK - Ivana Trump, criticized by some fashion experts for dressing like a Christmas tree, got her revenge Thursday by being named to the 50th annual International Best Dressed List.

The estranged wife of billionaire real estate developer Donald Trump made the list for the first time with her sister-in-law, Blaine Trump, who dresses more conservatively than Ivana. Blaine is the wife of Robert Trump a Trump Organization executive.

Ivana Trump, a one-time Czech fashion model, prefers suits for daytime wear and draped evening dresses in glittery bright fabrics set off by elaborate jewelry for her appearances on New York's charity party circuit. Among her favorite designers are Arnold Scaasi, Victor Costa and Carmelo Pomodoro.

The results of a poll of more than 400 garment industry personalities and fashion journalists were announced by Eleanor Lambert, a publicist who started the list during World War II to promote American design at a time when European couture was in mothballs.

The list included three special citations to people who have had ''significant influence on fashion change.''

They named Soviet Union President Mikhail Gorbachev for reopening the door to fashion in the East Bloc after 40 years of ''forced anonymity,'' Empress Michiko of Japan for her style sense in combining both Eastern and Western fashion, and New York Mayor David Dinkins for restoring the well-dressed male image to New York politics.

Other women on the best dressed list were:

- Ines de la Fressange, Paris, former model for Chanel.

- Gwendolyne Bemberg, Paris, wife of French industrialist Peter Bemberg.

- Nina Griscom, New York, socialite-model and TV commentator.

- Carolina Herrera Jr., New York, daughter of fashion designer Carolina Herrera.

- Jenny Lumet, New York, actress daughter of director Sidney Lumet and granddaughter of singer Lena Horne.

- Irith Landeau, Paris, socialite.

- Anne McNally, French born wife of international restaurateur Brian McNally.

- Yvette Ruby, Los Angeles and Paris, formerly the actress Yvette Mimieux before she married real estate developer Howard Ruby.

- Alexandra Theodoracopulos, New York and London, divorced wife of gossip columnist Taki Theodoracopulos.

- Victoria Niarchos, New York and Paris, wife of Greek shipping heir Philippe Niarchos.

-Daphne Niarchos, New York and Switzerland, wife of Spyros Niarchos, brother of Philippe.

Men named to the Best Dressed List were:

- John F. Kennedy Jr., New York, an assistant district attorney and son of the late president.

- Paul Newman, American film actor.

- Daniel Day-Lewis, Oscar winning Irish star of the film, ''My Left Foot.''

- Alec Baldwin, American film actor now appearing in ''The Hunt for Red October.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The Senate, brushing aside pleas for compassion, rejected a plan Thursday to pay hundreds of millions of dollars to help coal miners and others who lose their jobs due to tougher clean air legislation.

Senate leaders and the Bush administration strenuously opposed the plan, which was defeated 50-49 after an intense five-hour debate.

Proponents argued Congress could not ignore the thousands of Appalachian and Midwest coal miners certain to be hurt by proposed acid rain reduction rules. Foes warned it would unravel a delicate compromise between Capitol Hill and the White House and could provoke a veto from President Bush.

The Senate is expected to vote on the full bill Tuesday and send it to the House.

The relief plan, backed ardently by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., would have provided about one year of extended, regular unemployment benefits for all workers thrown out of work by a clean air law, but mainly would have helped coal miners, who could get three years of special aid of up to $42,500 a year.

The silver-haired Byrd, chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee, entranced a packed Senate gallery with his passionate remarks on the floor, referring to Roman history at one point, then speaking poignantly about the hard life of coal miners, whose cause Byrd has championed throughout his long Senate career.

''The coal miner, when he sits down at night, his body knows the pain of the day's work,'' Byrd said. ''He knows the sweat, the toil, the back-breaking pain that went into the earning of that dollar.

''We are not asking for welfare,'' he said. ''We are asking for justice.''

Byrd also criticized the administration for rejecting help for American workers while at the same time seeking $500 million for Panama to rebuild its economy following U.S. military intervention.

It was estimated Byrd's plan would cost $500 million to $600 million.

Senate leaders countered that Byrd's amendment would unfairly give coal miners higher benefits than workers who lose jobs in other industries likely to be hit hard by tighter emission controls, such as chemicals and steel.

''It unfairly discriminates against workers other than coal miners,'' said Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine. ''Under this amendment, coal miners - only coal miners - are eligible for higher benefits.''

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas warned that Byrd's plan could prompt a flood of proposals to give aid to specific groups and suggested special aid to economic victims of military base closings would be next.

After the vote, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., a key swing vote who voted against Byrd, said he got a phone call moments before the vote from White House chief of staff John Sununu, who said Bush would veto the bill with the Byrd amendment.

Richard Trumka, president of the United Mine Workers, said the union was ''greatly disappointed'' by the vote, but vowed to press for protection for coal miners as the bill continues its way through Congress.

Byrd said his proposal was essential to protect dozens of impoverished coal-field communities in states such as West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio Indiana and Illinois.

The clean air legislation would strengthen federal emission controls on factories, power plants and cars to reduce acid rain, toxic and cancer-causing industrial pollution and urban smog now choking 101 cities.

Many of the proposed restrictions would have a pronounced effect on the coal industry because it requires about 100 coal-burning power plants to sharply reduce sulfur dioxide emissions linked to acid rain and environmental damage across the Northeast and areas of Canada.

Many utilities are expected to achieve those cuts by switching from high-polluting coal - mined mostly in Appalachia and the Midwest - to low-sulfur coal from Western states.

Diminished utility demand likely would shut down mines in the high-sulfur coal fields of the East, where an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 coal miners are expected to lose their jobs by 1995 and possibly 15,000 by 2000.

Under the rejected Byrd plan, coal miners could get three years of assistance - 70 percent of their estimated $50,000 annual salary and health benefits in the first year, 60 percent in the second and 50 percent in the third.

In contrast, workers in other industries would have received one year of extended unemployment aid as provided under current laws helping workers in industries that are hurt by foreign competition.

SALT LAKE CITY (MARCH 29) UPI - Despite doubts raised by other researchers, a University of Utah chemist said Thursday he has continued to gather evidence backing his claim to have harnessed the power of the sun in a laboratory flask.

Stanley Pons said his team had set up more than 200 cold fusion devices using more power than was employed in the initial experiment. Putting more electricity into the devices produced more consistent results and a ''very large'' amount of excess heat, Pons said.

Other scientists may have been unable to reproduce his results because they were using lower levels of electricity, he said.

In addition, Pons maintained his team has also detected several signs that the energy is being produced by a nuclear reaction and that ''it is inconceivable that they are caused by any chemical reaction.''

Pons spoke during the first day of a three-day conference organized by his university to explore his claims.

Pons and Martin Fleischmann startled the scientific world last year when they announced they had produced nuclear fusion at room temperature, without the extraordinarily hot reactors other scientists have used to replicate the sun's energy-producing process.

The cold fusion reaction could provide a bountiful source of cheap energy, they said.

Since then, the researchers' claims have been repeatedly attacked. Most recently, physicists at the University of Utah reported Wednesday in the scientific journal Nature that they could find no evidence of nuclear fusion during tests they conducted on Pons's experiments.

During a news conference Thursday, Pons and Fleischmann charged Nature had taken an editorial position against them that had ''polarized the scientific community'' by pitting physicists against chemists.

The pair's experiment uses palladium and platinum electrodes in a glass container filled with so-called heavy water, water formed from oxygen and a form of hydrogen known as deuterium.

The pair believes an electrical current splits the heavy water into oxygen and deuterium and the palladium attracts the deuterium, absorbing it in such concentrations that the atoms fuse, releasing more energy than it consumes.

During the conference, Oliver Murphy of Texas A&M University said his team had duplicated Pons's results.

''We've tried it over and over again. To us it's real,'' he said.

Murphy said his team also believes the strength of the electrical current is ''critical for switching on this effect. We're quite in agreement with him. It doesn't always give the same magnitude, but 80 percent of our samples give heat.''

Murphy also said critics' comments that the measurements might not be accurate are ''bordering on the amusing.'' Texas A&M's measurement are not the result ''of leprechauns or Murphy's Law,'' he said.

Fritz Will, director of the National Cold Fusion Institute, which the university established to study the claim, defended the work.

''The multitude of results obtained by so many different groups can no longer be explained away as experimental artifacts,'' Will said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Since the increase in the minimum wage promises them more than it will deliver, America's working poor may find it bitterly ironic that their pay raise goes into effect on April Fools' Day.

The hourly wage of 3.2 million workers will climb Sunday from $3.35 to $3.80, but the boost will reduce the food stamp allotment many of them depend on for survival.

The second half of the first increase in the minmimum wage since 1981 - approved by Congress in November - will raise the floor to $4.25 an hour in April, 1991.

Two-thirds of the nation's minimum-wage earners are women. The Labor Department acknowledged last October that a single mother trying to maintain a family on the minimum wage usually cannot escape poverty.

One out of five American children, according to the Census Bureau, lives in poverty.

The poorest of the poor already knew that the gap between them and the rich was widening before that dismal fact was confirmed last fall by the release of national income figures.

Fortunately, both the Bush administration and leading Democrats favor enhancing the earned income tax credit, which subsidizes the working poor. Families with incomes of up to $6,500 a year now can qualify for the maximum benefit of about $910.

But during the administration's first year, most Americans evidently were in no mood to wage class warfare.

There was hardly any outrage when Democratic pols on Capitol Hill joined Republicans in a so far unsuccessful effort to slash capital gains taxes. The administration still is determined to gain approval for the measure, branded by opponents as a giveaway to the rich.

Both Democratic and Republican lawmakers caved in to demands of affluent oldsters and gutted Medicare's catastrophic health insurance, desperately needed by the poorer seniors.

Now some Democrats are contending privately that the way to win back the White House - after losing four of the last five presidential elections - is to act like Republicans.

Meantime, America's homeless constitute a growing but virtually powerless constituency.

The American Afforable Housing Institute contends that even a mild recession could render up to 14 million Americans homeless. These are people who live one paycheck from the streets.

The 1,400 beds in the homeless shelter closest to the Capitol are always filled. Many of those who live there are so addicted to drugs and alcohol they cannot work, but others have jobs that don't pay them enough to move out the shelter and pay rent on a place of their own.

Even before the federal minimum-wage raise goes into effect, it will be out of date in some states. California, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Washington and Oregon already have state minimum wages of $4.25 an hour.

As for the workers in poorer states, they won't be able to buy their way out of poverty with the extra 45 cents an hour they start earning on April Fools' Day.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., strumming the heartstrings and playing hardball politics, put his prestige and power on the line Thursday for the coal miners in his beloved West Virginia.

On this day, it was not quite enough. The Senate turned its back on its old leader and defeated 50-49 his amendment to provide special benefits for coal miners who lose their jobs through enactment of clean air legislation.

But Byrd showed, once again, that he remains a major figure in the Senate. He showed he is a dangerous senator to cross and does not hesistate to take on President Bush, congressional leaders or anyone else if the issue affects his state.

At times passionate, angry, genial and quietly threatening, Byrd pushed for adoption of the special benefits, spurning alternatives and shrugging off the forces arrayed against him.

In a virtuoso performance, played out in the Senate chamber, in the private offices of senators and in an emotional rally of coal miners on the steps of the Capitol, the 72-year-old Byrd was the star of his own play.

For weeks, Byrd had pressed for a vote on his amendment, hopeful that his diligent behind-the-scenes work and the power inherent in his chairmanship of the Senate Appropriations Committee had almost rounded up the votes.

Hoping to pick up support, Byrd modified his proposal to reduce the benefits and to provide a lesser form of help for others who may lose their jobs because of the clean air bill.

The wily West Virginian left nothing to chance - even cancer-stricken Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, was wheeled into the chair to cast one of his rare votes. Two others, however, escaped Byrd at the last moment.

An ''incredibly timely'' telephone call from White House chief of staff John Sununu convinced Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., that adoption of the amendment would kill the bill. Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., was absent because he had to attend a funeral.

On Thursday, Byrd came to the Senate chamber, black suit and vest setting off his long white hair, ready to press his case for one final time and to orchestrate the 10-minute speeches of his supporters.

He told tales from Roman mythology, recited poetry and when his time ran out, pleaded for ''mercy'' from his opponents, saying that ''I am without shield; I have thrown my spear away.''

Byrd ridiculed reports that he was challenging Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, who succeeded him in the chamber's most powerful position.

''The amendment is not a test of anyone's leadership,'' Byrd said. ''That charge is simply facetious. It is a spurious charge. It has not basis.

''The only thing this amendment tests (is) the economic survivability of 5,000 coal miners, their families and their communities. That is the only test.

''The question is: Do we do something to cushion the blow ... or turn a blind eye?''

Byrd talked of ''suffering, pain, hardship and loss.'' He said of the coal miner, ''When he sits down at night, his body knows the pain of the day's work, the sweat, the trial ... the back-breaking work that went into the earning of that dollar.

''Money is a different kind of blood. Who knows what he had to give ... in the black dust and dark subterranean tunnels to produce that dollar?''

Byrd told his colleagues, ''We can't get rid of those people, so we've got to do something.''

He spoke of the ''demoralizing, degrading feeling of poverty,'' the desire to ''work, to earn a crust of bread'' and the time when a man goes into debt and ''and to that extent becomes a slave.''

''Does kinder and gentler stop at the edge of the coal fields?'' Byrd asked.

As passionate as Byrd's presentation was in the Senate chamber, more important was his lobbying of senators off the floor, a ceaseless effort since the moment Byrd developed the amendment in his office and lined up coal-state senators as his front line.

Assistant Senate Republican leader Alan Simpson of Wyoming, whose unvarnished speech usually goes directly to the target, spoke earlier in the debate on the risk of crossing Byrd, the chairman of the money committee.

''I do not want to take on Robert Byrd of West Virginia,'' Simpson said. ''I write him letters all the time, saying, 'How about a little fence around the elk refuge? How about a little tidbit here?'

''And his letters come back with a beautiful handwritten note: 'Alan, I think we can take care of that.'

''So this is the ultimate hazard, the ultimate hazard is upon us.''

Byrd, on that day, was magnamanious, but he too alluded to his ability to give or not give.

''Let me say once more that there are those who are going to come in the days ahead wanting help for their states, for their regions,'' Byrd said. ''And never will I draw the line and say that this is not West Virginia. Why should we in West Virginia, we taxpayers, pay to help you? Wherever there is misery, unemployment, deprivation, in this country, whererever it is, it hurts the whole country.''

At the rally of coal miners a day earlier, Byrd said, ''My heart has always been with you. You are my roots and you will always be my roots. I will never, never, never forget you.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - House Speaker Thomas Foley said Thurdsay that if the Supreme Court strikes down a law banning flag burning he will allow a vote on a constitutional amendment within 30 days.

In a brief statement, Foley reaffirmed his belief that the court ultimately will uphold the constitutionality of the statute, adopted last year. But if not, he said, a vote on an amendment to the Constitution would be quickly scheduled.

Two lower courts have ruled the law unconstitutional and the issue has been appealed to the high court.

Last week, the House counsel sent the Supreme Court a brief suggesting that the court consider the issue when it sits for the fall term in October, a move that almost certainly would have pushed the issue over past November congressional elections. The brief was withdrawn after Republicans raised a ruckus on the House floor, claiming the brief sought a delay for political reasons.

The statute was passed in anger over a June 1989 Supreme Court ruling in a Texas case that burning the flag as a political protest is a constitutionally protected form of free speech.

The 5-4 ruling sparked a controversy that saw President Bush seek an amendment to the Constitution. Instead, Congress passed the flag protection act, although Republican backers of the amendment approach warned that a law would not protect the flag. That law was quickly challenged in cases in Washington state, the District of Columbia and elsewhere.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - Joseph Hazelwood, captain of the Exxon Valdez when it spilled 11 million gallons of oil into Alaska's Prince William

Sound, said Thursday he was sorry but insisted he was not at fault and is innocent of criminal wrongdoing.

Hazelwood, taping an interview to air this week on CBS's ''Saturday Night with Connie Chung,'' was asked by Chung if an environmental disaster like the Exxon Valdez grounding could happen again.

He pointed to five tanker accidents leading to oil spills since the Exxon Valdez incident on Mar. 24, 1989, and said: ''There are less spectacular disasters going on every day around the country.''

A CBS spokeswoman who was present at the three-hours-plus taping, which took place at the Head of The Bay Club in Hazelwood's hometown of Huntington, N.Y., said Hazelwood apologized for the spill, saying, ''I'm sorry for what happened. I'm sorry that it happened at all.''

Chung asked if Hazelwood accepted any blame for the tanker's grounding, which occurred after he left a lower-ranking officer in charge as the ship maneuvered around ice in Prince William Sound.

''No,'' Hazelwood said.

He said no one from Exxon Corp. has contacted him in the more than a year since accident, not even to fire him.

''To tell you the truth, at the time they did that, I heard I was fired through a third party,'' he said.

Hazelwood, acquitted earlier this month on three Alaska state criminal charges stemming from the accident and convicted on a fourth, was ordered by the judge to spend 1,000 hours of community service, as well as paying $50,000 in restitution.

He said he would appeal because, ''I don't believe I was guilty.''

Chung asked him if he would consider doing volunteer work to help clean up the spill.

''I don't see myself hand-wiping rocks as being particularly constructive '' Hazelwood said. ''I could drive one of the support boats, something more in line with what I have the ability to do.''

Chung asked Hazelwood if he would try to rehabilitate his image.

''I would like to try,'' Hazelwood said, and he added, ''I'm not looking for sympathy. I'm looking for a little understanding.''

BY DANIEL ALDER - UPI

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (MARCH 30) UPI - After the ballot box defeat of the Sandinistas in Nicaragua and the inconclusive Salvadoran rebel offensive last year, pressures for resuming stalled peace talks between the leftist guerrillas and the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government is mounting.

But obstacles remain.

''The truth is that peace is needed now,'' said a rebel commander who identified himself only as Gustavo. He acknowldeged that nearly all sectors of the country have joined in the cry for an immediate peace.

''We are feeling the pressure from the (domestic) consensus as well as from the international situation,'' said Gustavo, a local commander of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, in the northeastern province of Morazan.

During the candle-lit interview, in which female guerrillas with rifles slung over their shoulders served coffee and cake, Gustavo said President Alfredo Cristiani's recent move to drop conditions for holding talks was a propaganda measure.

Both sides look at the failed talks held late last year and wonder if the other side is serious about taking the steps necessary to end the decade-old war that has cost more than 72,000 lives, mostly civilians.

Cristiani's chief spokesman, Mauricio Sandoval, cited the rebel withdrawl from the talks as an example of ''bad faith'' in the negotiating process.

''Past experience has not been good,'' Sandoval said.

He stopped short of saying the government was optimistic about a negotiated settlement of the civil war but acknowledged that current conditions favor the peace process.

''All Salvadorans are tired of the war,'' Sandoval said. ''Extremism (from the left and the right) in El Salvador is on the decline.''

San Salvador's Roman Catholic primate, Archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas, said in a recent sermon that ''the roads to peace appear more imminent than ever, God willing that we are smart enough to take advantage of this special blessing.''

''We have seen the climate (for negotiations) improve,'' Rivera Damas told reporters after mass. ''That is what makes us believe that, when they return to the (negotiating) table, they will not leave it without taking some concrete steps.''

A debate in the United States over nearly $1.5 million a day in economic and military aid to El Salvador has caught the attention of Cristiani. The surprising election defeat of the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua has forced the rebels to do some soul searching.

Peace talks in September and October were more effective at showing up the huge differences between the positions of the government and the rebels than bringing the two sides closer together.

The FMLN suspended a third meeting scheduled for November and launched the biggest offensive of the war.

But a U.N. special envoy, Alvaro de Soto, has been working for about two months to arrange a new round of talks. Government sources predict they will be resumed about mid-April.

Gustavo said the rebels are ready to launch another offensive if negotiations fail. ''If they need another demonstration of force, we are willing to oblige them,'' Gustavo said.

He said the FMLN would insist that the government work to punish members of right-wing death squads that killed thousands of Salvadorans suspected of being leftist in the early 1980s. Death squad activity has in the past been linked to Cristiani's right-wing Nationalist Republican Alliance party.

''They have to begin to impose justice,'' Gustavo said. ''We are not asking the impossible. We are just asking that they create the conditions necessary for any democratic country.''

Gustavo also cast doubt on the government's willingness to accept some of the FMLN's principal demands, such as a purge of the army and replacement of Supreme Court justices and the attorney general.

LIVONIA, MI (MARCH 29) UPI - Ford Motor Co. said Thursday it does not intend to offer buyer incentives on 1991-model Escort subcompact cars going on sale Apr. 26, although the company must achieve yearly sales of 400,000 units to meet government pressures on fuel economy.

Philip Novell, general sales manager of Ford's vehicle division, said during dealer meetings and a media test drive in Livonia, Mich., that price will not be the focus of its advertising for the new Escort, now being delivered to rental fleets for early consumer evaluations.

Ford must sell about 400,000 new Escorts annually to meet present CAFE - short for corporate average fuel economy - levels of 27.5 mpg. Otherwise, the company could be subject to millions of dollars in government fines - something Novell said is simply not part of the carmaker's strategy.

''We are not in business to break the law,'' he said, adding Ford would then either raise prices or cut production of its larger, less-efficient cars.

''We are a victim of our own success,'' Novell said, noting that Ford's relatively strong sales in the large-car market in recent years has increased CAFE pressures.

Ford also amended a buyer incentive program due to expire Monday by offering 2.9 percent annual financing to clear stocks of 1990-model Escorts that will be phased out this spring.

Ford also is offering buyers of 1990-model Escorts and Probe sports coupes either a $1,000 rebate or a combination $750 rebate plus financing as low as 6.9 percent on loans up to 48 months.

The company amended offers on several other models as well, including raising the rebate on mid-sized Taurus and Sable cars from $750 to $1,000 and increasing the cash allowance on Thunderbird and Cougar coupes from $1,000 to $1,500.

The rebate on the rear-drive Aerostar van was raised from $500 to $750. The allowance on the Ranger II compact truck was increased by $500 to $1,500.

Those offers, valid until Apr. 30, came in response to industry leader General Motors Corp., which last week doubled the rebates on some mid-sized cars to as much as $2,000 and introduced $1,000 rebates on its trio of new front-drive minivans.

''The thing driving the current Escort is, deal,'' Novell said, noting Ford has a stockpile of about 70,000 on hand.

''We plan to offer the new Escort without any artificial support.''

Earlier this month, Ford announced that prices for the new Escort would be between 0.6 percent and 7.6 percent higher than the current version, depending on the model.

The new version ranges from $7,565 for the Pony to $11,063 for the GT version. A typically equipped LX model - expected to account for the bulk of Escort sales - should sell for under $10,000 with tax and license included, Novell said.

The 1990-model will remain in production at Ford's Edison, N.J., plant until early June, after which the Edison plant will shift to compact truck production.

Ford's Wayne, Mich., plant began building the 1991-model Escort last month. It is the first all-new Escort in a decade - the result of a $2 billion joint project with Japanese carmaker Mazda Motor Co.

While Ford hopes to lure import-oriented buyers with the new Escort, Novell said no mention will be made of the fact that Mazda played a large role in engineering the car, which is heavily based on Mazda's 323 and Protege subcompacts already on sale.

''I don't think the buyer is that concerned,'' said dealer Jack Demmer, president of Jack Demmer Ford in Wayne, Mich., adding that buyers seem either unconcerned or unaware that Ford's Probe sports coupe is also based on a Mazda design and is built at Mazda's U.S. plant.

ANCHORAGE, AK (MARCH 29) UPI - Redoubt Volcano erupted Thursday and sent a plume of steam and ash shooting 9 miles into the sky above the mountain, the Alaska Volcano Observartory reported.

The plume rose higher than any of Redoubt's recent explosions, but geologist John Paskievitch said it appeared to be ''mostly a steam plume with very little ash.''

No ashfall was reported or predicted.

The 10,197-foot mountain 110 miles southwest of Anchorage erupted at 10:34 a.m. and seismic devices indicated the eruption lasted about 10 minutes, Paskievitch said.

Ninety minutes before the eruption, geologist Michael Doukas reported that earthquake activity beneath the mountain had increased, a precursor to most eruptions.

Following the eruption, seismic activity returned to low levels, but the mountain continued to rumble, Paskievitch said.

The explosion produced a white plume rising 45,000 to 50,000 feet above the Earth, Paskievitch said.

In recent weeks, Redoubt has erupted almost like clockwork every five or six days. Redoubt's previous burst came six days earlier on March 23.

''Some people think it's on a schedule, but I don't necessarily agree,'' Paskievitch said.

''Since activity began at Redoubt last December, periods of dome growth have generally culminated in explosive events,'' Doukas said.

In each eruption, the volcano blows its top off, then starts rebuilding a dome over its crater vent by moving molten material from inside the mountain to cover the often-steaming hole, at least partially. Once a new, usually incomplete dome is in place, pressure builds up inside again, and the volcano blows off the dome and starts the process all over again. With few variations, this has been going on for 3 1/2 months, often raining down gritty ash.

Redoubt, in Lake Clark National Park, is one of dozens of volcanoes in Alaska along the northern curve of the so-called Ring of Fire, as the volcanoes ringing the Pacific have been called.

Redoubt has had four periods of eruptive activity this century, most recently exploding to life Dec. 14.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Despite a penchant for long-distance diplomacy, President Bush believes ''this is not the time'' to consult Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev about the crisis in Lithuania, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday.

Though Bush has touted his ability to pick up the phone and discuss even the most contentious matters with Gorbachev, Fitzwater insisted the situation remains too ''complex and delicate'' for such direct presidential involvement.

''Suffice to say we don't think it's appropriate at this point,'' he told reporters.

As the conflict over Lithuanian independence has unfolded over the last two weeks, U.S. officials have been at a loss to explain Gorbachev's intentions or forecast his next moves in dealing with the breakaway Baltic republic.

Even in the face of that uncertainty, however, and with the political stakes high, Bush has declined to use his much-heralded personal rapport with Gorbachev to obtain a first-hand reading of Soviet intentions.

Instead, he has relied on public statements from Moscow, assurances from Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and, most recently, soundings by other foreign leaders to remain hopeful of a peaceful end to the conflict.

With major strides in U.S.-Soviet relations, including arms control and plans for a June superpower summit, possibly hanging in the balance, Fitzwater said the U.S. position was to do nothing to disrupt the potential for dialogue and diplomacy by ''being portrayed as approving or disapproving specific actions that either side takes.''

''The president simply feels this is not the time to make a direct contact to Chairman Gorbachev,'' he said.

The White House has acknowledged two telephone conversations so far this year between Bush and Gorbachev. The last, a wide-ranging call Feb. 28, preceded the declaration of independence by Lithuania's secession-minded leaders.

Bush, who will meet with Shevardnadze late next week at the White House, sought input Wednesday night from British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher who spoke to Gorbachev by telephone earlier in the day.

Fitzwater said Bush called Thatcher after she reported to him by cable on her 55-minute conversation with Gorbachev. A spokeswoman said Thatcher used the occasion to reaffirm earlier calls for ''restraint on all sides'' in Lithuania.

As a result of the call, Fitzwater said Bush's views on Gorbachev had been ''strengthened to the degree that he and Prime Minister Thatcher have a similar view of the situation and of the best course for achieving peaceful dialogue.''

''We're pretty much in alignment,'' he added.

Later, a senior administration official said the phone calls and other quiet outreaches are part of a behind-the-scenes U.S. effort to influence the situation.

''We're trying to move people a little bit,'' said the official, who asked not to be identified. He added that the White House may never know whether the moves were effective.

The official also indicated that a specific date could be set as early as this weekend for the summit meeting between Bush and Gorbachev, and said Thatcher had fully briefed Bush on her own conversation with the Russian leader. ''She talked about the situation with Gorbachev, his concerns, how the situation looked to him and her analysis,'' he said.

Shevardnadze travels to Washington next week for previously scheduled talks with Secretary of State James Baker. The two have been meeting to nail down arms control agreements and agenda items for a Bush-Gorbachev summit in late June.

Fitzwater said there is ''a good possibility'' the talks next week will produce agreement on a summit date, even in the midst of U.S. warnings that any use of Soviet force in Lithuania could cast a chill on superpower relations.

(MARCH 29) UPI - President Bush delivered a highly emotional speech on AIDS in Arlington, Virginia, today, saying victims of the deadly disease deserve our compassion, our care and more than a chance- ''they deserve a cure.'' Vowing to ''fight like hell'' against AIDS, Bush recalled friends who have died of the disease. He told the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS that education is the most effective weapon in the battle against the disease. Bush says his administration is slashing red tape and boosting research to fight AIDS.

West Germany's defense minister favors reducing the size of his nation's army but warns against removing nuclear weapons from Europe. Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg announced plans to slash the West German army by almost 100-thousand troops because of what he calls ''the new atmosphere of peace in Eastern Europe.'' But Stoltenberg says nuclear weapons are still needed because the situation remains unstable.

West German Chancellor Kohl and British Prime Minister Thatcher have a chance to patch up their differences at a dinner in Cambridge tonight before they open formal summit talks in London tomorrow. Yesterday, Kohl took a dig at Thatcher in a speech about European dignity. On Monday, Thatcher told a West German magazine that she questioned Kohl's commitment to preserving the existing German-Polish border. Thatcher says a unified Germany should sign a treaty guaranteeing post-World War Two borders.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - A 4-year-old immigration reform law curbed the flow of illegal aliens but sparked widespread job discrimination against Hispanics, Asians and other minorities, a report to Congress said Thursday.

Nearly 20 percent of 4.6 million employers surveyed nationwide reported either turning away job applicants or subjecting them to tougher scrutiny because of a foreign appearance, accent, last name or birthplace, the General Accounting Office study said.

The GAO, an investigative agency for Congress, determined that the discrimination resulted from provisions in the 1986 law reforming immigration policies, which requires businesses to verify the work eligibility of employees and imposes fines on employers who knowingly hire illegal immigrants. The sanctions took effect June 1, 1987.

The findings prompted several lawmakers, the American Civil Liberties Union and groups representing Hispanics to call for repeal of the employer sanctions, which can range from $250 up to $10,000 for each illegal employee.

The report ''confirms what many of us have feared from the start - that the employer sanctions provision of the 1986 immigration law have caused widespread discrimination,'' said Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif.

''Workers are being denied jobs ... simply because they look foreign, or they speak with an accent, or their last name is Garcia or Tanaka,'' Matsui said.

But Assistant Senate Republican leader Alan Simpson of Wyoming, a chief author of the law, disputed the GAO's findings. He said Congress should work to improve the employee verification system rather than repeal sanctions.

However, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said, ''The employers sanctions must be repealed and the discrimination must be put to a stop.''

In all, 891,000 employers, or 19 percent of those surveyed, acknowledged they discriminated against job applicants on the basis of a person's accent or appearance or on the basis of their citizenship status - forms of bias that are illegal.

The discrimination rates for individual cities varied, with the highest rates in urban areas with large Hispanic and Asian populations. The rate was 29 percent in Los Angeles, 21 percent in New York City, 19 percent in Chicago and 18 percent in Miami.

The 13 Western states, including Alaska and Hawaii, all had discrimination rates of 19 percent or higher, the GAO said.

On the basis of those findings, the GAO concluded employer sanctions resulted in a ''widespread pattern of discrimination.'' The actual number of job seekers who were turned away because of discrimination was not determined.

Aside from its discriminatory effects, the new immigration law has worked well without posing an unnecessary burden on employers, the GAO said.

The GAO cited a study by the Urban Institute that concluded the law had slowed illegal immigration and two surveys in Mexico that found people believe it is harder now to find work in the United States.

Reps. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., and Bill Richardson, D-N.M., introduced legislation Thursday to repeal the employer sanctions under a provision of the law that allows termination of the penalties if both houses of Congress vote to approve the GAO's findings within 30 days.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) UPI - The value of building permits issued in the nation's 202 largest cities in 1989 remained essentially unchanged at $53.4 billion compared with $53.5 billion in 1988, Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said Friday.

''Despite recent headlines of a dramatic downturn in construction activity the overall dollar value of building permits issued in 1989 kept pace with 1988,'' said Joseph W. Duncan, corporate economist and chief statistician for Dun & Bradstreet.

A number of large cities in the New England region reported sharply lower levels of permit values issued in 1989. At the same time, key cities in the Mid-Atlantic, West North Central and East North Central regions continued to report increases in permit values.

Building permit values, which are issued prior to the start of construction, generally forecast construction activity over the next six to 18 months.

The largest percentage increase in 1989 was reported in Flint, Mich., where an upswing in commercial construction helped drive permit values up 149 percent to $63.2 million from $25.4 million in 1988.

Miami Beach, Fla., had the second largest percentage increase in building permit values, up 141 percent to $139.3 million from $57.7 million. The increase in Miami Beach was largely due to expansion of its convention center and several residential projects.

In Cincinnati, permit values rose 127 percent to $440.2 million from $194.2 million, due to the construction of several commercial buildings and a carbon filtration plant.

Building permit values also increased significantly in Spokane, Wash. and Newark, N.J.

The largest total dollar amount of permit values issued in 1989, $4.5 billion, occurred in Los Angeles and represented a 2 percent increase from $4.4 billion in 1988. New York was second at $3.5 billion, a 13 percent increase from $3.1 billion.

Chicago was third at $2 billion, a 33 percent jump from $1.5 billion.

The cities showing the largest percentage decreases in permit values last year were Hammond, Ind., down 67.9 percent to $10.5 million from $32.7 million; Louisville, Ky., off 60.4 percent to $58.9 million from $148.7 million, Elizabeth, N.J. down 49.5 percent to $31.6 million from $62.6 million, and New Bedford, Mass., off 49.5 percent to $25.7 million from $51 million.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The farm price index, fueled by higher prices for hogs, cattle and eggs, rose 1.3 percent in March despite a sharp drop in milk and tomato prices, the government reported Thursday.

The farm price index measures the prices paid to farmers for their crops and livestock. The March index was 154, up two points from February and four points higher than one year ago.

Milk prices reached record levels last fall due to high demand for cheese and dry milk and a slump in production. Farmers are putting more cows into production, which should mean lower prices this year.

''Hog and cattle prices moved up sharply from February while the 'all milk' price declined for the second month in a row,'' the Agriculture Department said. ''Tomatoes declined sharply from February but continuing short supplies kept prices well above normal for this time of the year.''

Tomato production was slashed by a December freeze in the South, which also damaged other vegetable crops. The department's index of vegetable prices dipped 4.9 percent from last month but still was 39 percent above March 1989, due somewhat to higher prices for sweet corn and onions.

The government said the ''all milk'' price averaged $13.80 per 100 pounds this month, down 60 cents from February but still $1.10 above March 1989.

Tomato prices, which averaged $97.60 per 100 pounds last month, ran at an average of $82 this month.

Beef cattle prices averaged $75.40 per 100 pounds this month, an increase of 80 cents since February. Market hog prices were up $3.90 per 100 pounds for an average of $52.50.

Eggs sold for an average of 73.1 cents a dozen this month, a 10-cent increase from February.

Prices for turkeys and broiler chickens were up slightly.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The Justice Department sued the Northrop Corp. Thursday, alleging fraud and seeking at least $5.4 million because of false test results on a critical component in the Navy's Harrier jets.

The suit, filed in federal court in Los Angeles, accuses Northrop of submitting false test results for parts it made for the AV-8B Harrier jet.

The suit seeks $4.8 million in damages and additional civil penalties that could exceed $600,000. The government seeks at least $5.4 million in total damages and penalties.

At least 59 times, the Justice Department said, Northrop ''falsely certified that a component of the system designed to keep the plane stabilized during its vertical takeoff, hovering and vertical landing had met the Navy's specifications.''

The government's civil suit was filed a month after after Northrop pleaded guilty to 34 counts of criminal fraud and agreed to pay $17 million in fines in connection with the Harrier and the air-launched cruise missile.

BURBANK, CA (MARCH 29) UPI - Lockheed Corp. Chairman Daniel Tellep, facing a takeover attempt by Texas investor Harold Simmons, declared Thursday that the company appeared to have won a proxy fight for control of the board of the aerospace giant.

''I think we have won a clear majority,'' Tellep said at a news conference following Lockheed's three-hour annual meeting in Burbank, Calif.

Simmons, who controls nearly 19 percent of Lockheed stock, said after the meeting that he could not predict how the vote on his proposed 14-member slate had gone.

Tellep said the results of the voting would be announced Apr. 16 at an annual meeting in Los Angeles where the company is based.

The five-week proxy fight, which Tellep described as ''an enormous drain of energy, time and resources,'' has cost Lockheed an estimated $8 million and Simmons about $6 million.

Simmons said that Lockheed's tactic of moving the date of the annual meeting forward by more than a month had been effective. Lockheed usually holds its meeting in mid-May.

''If we had have a full five weeks after this, it would have given us a big opportunity to educate shareholders,'' he said.

During the meeting, attended by about 2,000 shareholders, Tellep promised that up to three more board seats would be given to representatives of institutional investors, increasing the number of seats to 17 from 14.

The Lockheed chairman said earlier this week that he would ask those investors to submit a list of possible candidates for at least one seat on the board of directors.

But after the meeting, Tellep stressed that none of the three seats would go to representatives of Simmons.

''I do not feel that holding 20 percent of the stock qualifies someone for board membership,'' he said.

Tellep admitted after the meeting that he had been approached earlier this week, and through a third party, with a new compromise proposal that would have given Simmons three seats. The investor sought six seats before starting his proxy fight.

''But we heard nothing from Harold Simmons,'' Tellep said in response to questions about why he did not accept the compromise. ''It was too late to do anything.''

Simmons said that the three-seat compromise would have been acceptable.

The Texas investor also objected during and after the meeting to the trustee of the Lockheed employee stock ownership plan that the representative had voted shares that had not been voted by the holders. The ESOP shareholders hold nearly 19 percent of Lockheed stock. Tellep said the shareholders held 30 percent of the shares that did not enter proxies.

But a Lockheed spokesman said the trustee had voted only 3 percent of the ESOP shares.

Tellep also refused to commit to placing an ESOP representative on the board, a move that Simmons had endorsed.

In a bid possibly designed to appeal to the ESOP stockholders, Tellep said that he would recommend that Lockheed allow confidential shareholder voting, a measure that the company had so far opposed. Tellep said that he was confident that this proposal had been defeated by the shareholders, although by a narrower margin than last year's 2-to-1 ratio.

During the meeting, several shareholders accused Simmons of planning to dismantle Lockheed, a charge dismissed by the Texas investor.

''I do not intent to dismantle the company,'' Simmons said in response to the accusation.

Simmons had earlier indicated that, if successful in his bid, he would consider selling Lockheed's Technology Services and Electronics Systems units because of their poor performance.

Simmons also repeated contentions that Lockheed should focus on its core business of Aeronautical Systems and Missile and Space Systems.

Tellep said Lockheed was already doing so by adjusting to declining military orders and increasing space work.

Tellep also said Lockheed will cut its capital spendings by 47 percent over the next five years, and reduce its new technology and business spendings by 20 percent during that period.

Simmons said that, even if he loses the proxy fight, he is conviced that his efforts were worthwhile.

''I think we have focused management more on profitability,'' he said.

Simmons also refused to indicate whether or not he would launch another proxy fight next year, adding that it ''would depend on the response of Lockheed's management.''

Lockheed, the nation's sixth largest defense constractor, reported profits of $2 million on sales of $9.9 billion last year, mostly reflecting write-offs amounting to nearly $500 million.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - A massive round of profit taking launched in Tokyo continued in New York trading Thursday, driving the dollar down sharply against the Japanese yen and all other major world currencies.

Currency market participants cited nervousness about the imminent end of the Japanese fiscal year and an upcoming meeting of the Group of Seven industrial nations in Paris as reasons for the dollar's selloff.

The dollar had slipped somewhat the previous day to just below the 160-yen level and analysts said the market was ripe for a selloff.

Triggering it were rumors Japan's Ministry of Finance pressured institutional investors in Tokyo to stay away from dollar-priced investments and buy up yen. Most of the dollar's drop took place in early Far East trading. "Basically, there was a huge move overnight," said Denise Wolffs, an assistant treasurer with Societe Generale in New York.

The plunge caught some participants off guard. "For anybody that was carrying a position, they got whipsawed pretty badly by the move which took place in Japan," said Andrew Hodge, a vice president for corporate trading with Bank Brussels Lambert.

Wolffs said dollar-yen trading was "very thin" in New York. Many regular Japanese participants were absent, she said, probably because they had closed books on the fiscal year ending Friday.

In late New York trading the the dollar was changing hands at 1.6925 West German marks, off from 1.7110 late Wednesday. Against the Japanese currency it was fetching 156.27 yen, well down from 158.70.

Hodge said the deutsche mark rose in sympathy with the yen and on a subsiding of nervousness about German monetary unification.

Other dollar rates: 1.4935 Swiss francs, off from 1.5168; 5.6980 French francs, off from 5.7450; and 1,247.50 Italian lire, off from 1,257. The British pound rose to $1.6420 from $1.6265.

In Europe the dollar finished lower. It closed in Frankfurt at 1.7005 marks, off from 1.7059 Wednesday, and also declined in Zurich, to 1.5050 Swiss francs compared with 1.5170.

The dollar eased in Paris to 5.7205 French francs against 5.7600 and also was lower in Brussels and Milan at 35.1150 Belgian francs against 35.3550 and 1,252.75 Italian lire against 1,258.70. In London, the pound moved up to $1.6335 against $1.6305.

In Tokyo the dollar dropped sharply against the yen, ending at 156.65 against Wednesday's finish of 158.67. The Bank of Japan intervened to encourage the yen's rebound, selling an estimated $700 million.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $371.25 an ounce, up from $369.25. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $370.80 an ounce, up from $369. In Zurich, gold rose to $372 an ounce from $368.50. The metal also moved up in London to $371.75 from $369.75.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.97 an ounce, up from $4.94. Comex spot silver moved up to $4.946 an ounce from $4.917. Zurich silver gained to close at $5.00 an ounce against $4.95. London silver rose to $4.98 an ounce from $4.96.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - Stocks closed lower in another sluggish session Thursday after being dragged down early by computerized program selling as well as by both a weak bond market and dollar.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 6.75 Wednesday, fell 15.99 to close at 2727.70.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.60 to 187.17 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 1.21 to close at 340.79. The price of an average share was down 11 cents.

Declines led advances 858-578 among the 1,946 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 132,190,000 shares, compared with 142,300,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Analysts said a midday bout of computerized program selling, used to capitalize on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, exacerbated early declines tied to losses in the bond market, which was pressured by the dollar's retreat, especially against the yen.

As Jerry Hinkle, a trader with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., put it, "The weaker dollar put pressure on bonds, and that in turn put pressure on equities."

The dollar was quoted at 156.30 yen in late trading, down from 158.60 late Wednesday. This, analysts said, unnerved investors since the dollar has been able of late to shake off attempts by central banks to halt its rise.

Analysts said the drop was due to rumors, which were denied, that the Japanese Finance Ministry asked Japanese investors to curb buying of dollar-denominated securities. Treasury issues were down about 7/8 point in afternoon trading.

But overall trading was sluggish with many investors sitting it out before first-quarter earnings reports start coming in. Many in the market are concerned that the reports, which will be issued in the next few weeks, could be as gloomy as they were for the fourth quarter. The Dow industrials fell more than nine percent in January during the last round of earnings data.

"Earnings should have quite an influence on the marketplace once they start coming out," Hinkle said. Things could be different, however, Friday which is the last business day of the first quarter. "I'd expect to see some end-of-quarter window dressing, where people mark up stocks to enhance the value of their portfolios," he said.

On the trading floor, Amax, object of takeover speculation, was the most active issue, up 1/4 to 28 7/8.

American General followed, down 1 1/8 to 39. The company, target of a takeover attempt by Torchmark Corp., said it asked a federal judge to prohibit Torchmark from soliciting proxies to elect its own slate of directors. Torchmark lost one to 45 1/2. SCECorp was third, unchanged at 38 3/8.

Among the blue chips, AT&T fell 1/4 to 42 5/8, IBM gained 1/8 to 106, Merck lost 7/8 to 71, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing tumbled 1 1/4 to 82 3/8, and General Motors fell one to 46 5/8.

Elsewhere, General Development extended its rally, up 1/2 to 4 3/4. The company has pleaded guilty in a $100 million fraud scheme and said Wednesday it was considering a sale of assets or of the entire company.

Newmont Mining jumped 2 1/2 to 47 7/8. Hanson Industries North America said it was acquiring Peabody Holding Co., the largest U.S. coal producer, from Newmont in a $1.2 billion deal.

Bairnco plunged 3 1/2 to ten. Auditors are set to modify their report on the company's 1989 results because of uncertainty about the financial effects of asbestos claims, reports said.

And Intertan sank 4 1/2 to 36 5/8. The company is said to expect a 50-percent drop in earnings for its March quarter because of markdowns designed to cut inventories.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 159,526,660 shares, compared with 171,379,220 shares traded Wednesday.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index fell 1.00 to close at 360.23. The price of an average share lost four cents. Declines led advances 320-223 among the 800 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 14,854,500 shares, compared with 15,220,300 traded Wednesday. Hillhaven led the Amex issues, up 1/8 to 1 1/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 1.26 to 435.43.

NASHVILLE, TN. (MARCH 29) UPI - Country music singer Eddie Arnold, who has sold more than 75 million records in a career spanning 45 years, was listed in critical but stable condition Thursday after undergoing what doctors called successful double bypass surgery.

The 3 1/2 hour surgery was undertaken Wednesday morning at Nashville's St. Thomas Hospital, said hospital spokesperson Elise Shelton. She said the 71-year old singer was conscious Thursday and was recovering as expected, despite being kept in a critical care ward.

''Anytime a person comes out of surgery like this, they are listed in critical condition,'' Shelton said. ''But he is doing well.''

Dr. William Coltharp, the cardiovascular surgeon who performed the operation, said Arnold would be released from the hospital next week and is expected to fully recover.

''Barring unforeseen complications, Mr. Arnold should be able to resume his normal activities after his recuperation,'' Coltharp said.

Cardiologist Mark Glazer, who diagnosed Arnold's heart blockage, said the operation was necessary to correct ''a lack of bloodflow'' to the heart.

''Mr. Arnold has a history of pain in his left arm. Over the last several months the pain was associated with an abnormal electrocardiogram.''

Glazer said tests showed that the blockage meant Arnold was in danger of having a heart attack.

Arnold, nicknamed ''The Tennessee Plowboy,'' is the biggest selling performer in country music history. His songs include the longest-running country music hit of all time, ''Bouquet of Roses,'' which spent 54 weeks on the Billboard magazine country charts. His other hits include ''Cattle Call,'' and ''Make the World Go Away.''

Arnold was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1966.

(MARCH 29) UPI - President Bush says education is a major weapon in the battle against AIDS. Bush gave an emotional speech to the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS today in Arlington, Virginia, recalling friends who had died of the disease. The president says the government is slashing red tape, accelerating schedules and boosting research in its fight against AIDS.

West Germany plans to slash its army by 20 percent, about 100-thousand troops, because of what Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg calls ''the new atmosphere of peace in Eastern Europe.'' Stoltenberg gave NO date for the cuts, but warned at a Bonn news conference that pulling nuclear weapons out of Europe would be destabilizing. He also says a unified Germany will remain a member of NATO. Stoltenberg says service time for West German draftees may be cut to 12 months from the current 18-month tour of duty.

East Germany's two leading political parties report agreement on a number of points in today's talks aimed at forging a coalition government. The Christian Democratic Union and the Social Democratic Party plan to hold further talks to discuss the outstanding issues. The C-D-U won a majority of parliamentary seats in the March 18th elections, but must have S-D-P support to form the two-thirds majority needed to O-K unification with West Germany.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Greyhound and its striking unions will meet Monday in Tucson, Ariz., to once again try to end the often violent month-long strike against the bus line, Bernard DeLury, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said Thursday.

Jim Power, a spokesman for the mediation service, said federal mediators have kept contact with the two sides since an earlier round of talks was aborted March 18.

At that time, company officials left the bargaining table, saying they would not continue to negotiate while violence against the company continued. The company claims there has been nearly two dozen shooting incidents directed at Greyhound buses being driven by replacement drivers or against Greyhound terminals.

The one-sentence announcement from the mediation service said only that the parties would meet on April 2 but gave no indication of what the nature of the talks would be.

On Tuesday, Greyhound executive vice president and chief labor negotiator P. Anthony Lannie said the comnpany would refuse to meet with the union until the violence against the company stopped.

At that time, Greyhound offered rewards of $100,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone involved in the two dozen incidents charged by the company.

The Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions has steadfastly denied any involvement in the violence and said it does not condone the violence and released its own list of more than 50 incidents in which union picketers and their supporters have been injured - including one death - while picketing.

Union officials have argued that the company is using the violence as a ploy not to bargain.

''There can be no meaningful negotiations while a gun is pointed at us,'' Lannie said on Tuesday in announcing the $100,000 awards. ''The terrorism must stop.''

Power said the two sides would meet together. Federal mediators Ron Collotta and Paul Stuckenschneider, DeLury's special assistant for the Greyhound dispute, would participate in the Tucson meeting.

The strike began March 2 after negotiations broke off on a proposed three-year contract for about 9,000 Greyhound employees, including some 6,000 drivers.

Company officials have said Greyhound plans to have 3,200 full-time drivers and operate its full regularly scheduled service by Easter. Greyound said it has hired 1,700 replacement drivers and that 400 union drivers are crossing their picket lines. It is currently providing about 50 percent of its service, according to Lannie.

The National Labor Relations Board is reviewing a complaint by the union that Greyhound was bargaining in bad faith before the strike and was trying to break the union.

The company has accused drivers, who now average $24,700 a year, of asking for wage increases that could only be financed through fare increases. Each side has accused the other of distorting its positions.

(MARCH 29) UPI - Oil prices ended mixed Thursday with U.S. crude falling in seesaw trading and products rising as the market reflected national inventory changes reported by the government.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for May delivery dropped 5 cents to $20.03 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, 5 cents higher than its low on the day. Trading volume was a moderate 77,259 contracts.

Early in the day, WTI traded as high as $20.34 a barrel, largely on unfounded rumors of problems with a big refinery in Curacao, Venezuela, where it later turned out normal maintenance was being performed, said Bill Hinton of Stotler & Co. in New York.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, WTI was quoted at $20 a barrel, a loss of 10 cents.

Statistics released by the Department of Energy in Washington also played a role, the analyst said. They showed crude stocks last week rose 9.3 million barrels, while those of gasoline fell 8.4 million barrels

Although larger, the agency's figures reflected an American Petroleum Institute report released late Tuesday that said crude stocks backed up last week by 7.5 million barrels, while gasoline supplies declined 5.8 million barrels.

Hinton said the WTI price was driven down late in the day on the Merc as a result of some selling by one of the large traders.

Unleaded gasoline also received a boost when ''buyers came out in force on the U.S. Gulf Coast cash market,'' where prices rose 1.3 cents to 64.30 cents a gallon, the analyst said.

Unleaded gasoline for May delivery, the contract receiving the most attention on the Merc recently, rose 0.55 cent to 65.11 cents a gallon.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent crude rose 20 cents to $18.15 a barrel.

London's Royal Bank of Scotland, in its monthly oil index report issued Wednesday, said output from Britain's North Sea oilfields dropped 4 percent in February from January levels as a result of storms and bad weather.

The bank said it was unlikely North Sea production would rise in 1990 as expected.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - declined 10 cents to $15.35 a barrel.

Home heating oil for April delivery rose 0.44 cent to 56.17 cents a gallon on the Merc, while the May contract gained 0.28 cent to 53.78 cents a gallon.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - The narrow definition of the nation's basic money supply known as M1 was unchanged in the latest reporting week, while the broader M2 and M3 aggregates both grew, the Federal Reserve Board said Thursday.

M2 gained $1.5 billion and M3 rose $0.6 billion.

M1, which is made up of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money that is available for immediate spending - was unchanged at a seasonally adjusted average of $802.5 billion in the week ended March 19.

For the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $799.2 billion, a 5.3 percent rate of increase from the previous 13 weeks, the Fed reported.

The broader measure of money, M2, averaged an estimated $3,271.0 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $3,269.5 billion. M2 includes M1, plus passbook savings, small time deposits including money market deposit accounts, consumer money market mutual funds and certain other short-term assets.

M3, which includes M2 plus large time deposits, repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,070.4 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $4,069.8 billion, the Fed said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The Justice Department, found guilty by two courts of trying to drive a computer software firm out of business by ''trickery, fraud and deceit,'' asked an appeals court Thursday to appoint a neutral mediator to examine the bitter case.

The controversy involving Inslaw Inc. has been in the courts since 1985, when the company filed for bankruptcy protection after the Justice Department began withholding contract payments on a computer system for federal prosecutors.

On Sept. 28, 1987, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge George Bason Jr. issued a stunning decision - that the Justice Department, America's premier law enforcement agency, ''took, converted, stole'' Inslaw's enhanced software program ''by trickery fraud and deceit.''

Bason found that a vengeful former Inslaw employee, C. Hamilton Brewer, who subsequently managed the Inslaw project for the Justice Department, worked with other government officials for the ''ruination'' of Inslaw.

The Justice Department held up Inslaw's contract payments in bad faith and in ''wanton disregard of the law,'' Bason ruled.

After Inslaw was forced to seek Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization protection, Bason ruled, the Justice Department compounded its guilt by trying to illegally force the company into a Chapter 7 liquidation.

Bason ordered the government to pay some $6.8 million in damages and $1.2 million in legal fees, for a total of about $8 million. Three months later Bason was denied reappointment to the bench.

The government subsequently appealed and lost again.

On Nov. 22, 1989, Senior U.S. District Judge William Bryant upheld all of Bason's legal findings. He slightly reduced the damages on a technical issue, ordering the government to pay Inslaw a total of $7.4 million.

The government has now appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Meanwhile, Inslaw's president, William Hamilton, saying he is convinced of a high-level Justice Department cover-up, has filed a lawsuit asking that Attorney General Dick Thornburgh be forced to conduct a criminal investigation of officials in his own department. That suit is pending.

The Inslaw bankruptcy case began under the controversial administration of Attorney General Edwin Meese.

In a statement, the Justice Department said it ''believes that a neutral, court-appointed mediator may facilitate an expeditious and fair resolution of what has been a longstanding and contentious dispute without the need for further litigation.''

Spokesmen for both Inslaw and the Justice Department said a mediator, if appointed by the appeals court, would not sidetrack the huge body of litigation. The appeal would continue to proceed through the legal system while there was an attempt to solve the dispute.

''The number one problem I have is this continues the pretense that the heart of this problem are questions of civil law - rather than a failure to enforce the criminal laws of the United States,'' Hamilton said.

Hamilton is seeking an additional $75 million in punitive and other damages and said the Justice Department has opposed the discovery process to establish an exact figure.

''I don't see how a mediator can understand this case when we have not been allowed to discover the evidence on most of our damages,'' Hamilton said.

The Inslaw case also was investigated by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., in the summer of 1988. Nunn said the Justice Department actively frustrated the congressional inquiry.

Inslaw successfully emerged from bankruptcy protection in 1988.

(MARCH 29) UPI - President Bush spoke out about the AIDS epidemic today, saying Americans are going to ''fight like hell'' against the disease. He told the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS that- quoting now- ''we must beat this virus.'' Two protesters were escorted from the hall where Bush spoke in Arlington, Virginia.

Technicians at Cape Canaveral are loading the giant Hubble Space Telescope aboard the shuttle Discovery today, in preparation for putting it into orbit in two weeks. NASA says the shuttle is on track for blastoff about April 12th. The one-point-five-BILLION-dollar telescope is the most expensive civilian satellite ever built.

Military officials say at least six moderate earthquakes struck western El Salvador today. There are NO reports of injuries or damage. The Geotechnic Research Center reports that the strongest tremors registered about four on the Richter scale. Residents said the quakes shook items from shelves.

West Germany's defense minister is talking about a ''peace dividend'' of sorts in his country. He told reporters in Bonn today that the West German army will be cut by nearly 100-thousand trooops because of ''the new atmosphere of peace in Eastern Europe.'' He also says compulsory military service might be shortened from 18 months to 12.

The Commerce Department says personal income increased by nine-tenths of one percent last month, and the rate of personal savings rose substantially. WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Satirical author Garrison Keillor told a Senate panel Thursday that he would welcome the emergence of more controversial art than the few pieces that have upset some critics in Congress.

''I wish there were more controversial projects,'' said Keillor, whose bestseller ''Lake Wobegon Days'' chronicled the lives of characters in a fictional Minnesota town.

In the 25-year history of the National Endowment for the Arts, only 20 out of 85,000 grants have been considered controversial, NEA officials said.

''I wish there were 30, 50,'' Keillor said. ''I think that small number is a remarkable testament to how timid, how self-repressed we all (are).''

Keillor evoked laughter during the hearing at the Senate Labor Subcommittee on Education. The panel is reviewing an administration proposal to lift federal content restrictions on grant awards made by the NEA.

President Bush's proposal differs from a law that expires in September. The law requires the NEA to reject art works defined by federal statute as obscene.

The law was born from the ire of conservatives who decried the grants given to an exhibit by the late photographer Robert Mapplethorpe depicting homosexual eroticism and to one by photographer Andres Serrano showing a crucifix immersed in urine.

Keillor, who was the host of the popular ''Prairie Home Companion'' program on public radio, and other artists, welcomed Bush's decision and said the government should not meddle with the First Amendment right to free speech and expression.

Theater director Harold Prince said, ''Instead of hobbling the process with dangerous censorship, it would be more useful to address the pitifully small budget allotted to the quality of life in our great country.''

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who wrote legislation restricting the NEA, did not attend the hearing.

On March 6, Helms asked the General Accounting Office to investigate 11 awards made by the NEA last year that he said violated the law.

But congressional support for Helms' restrictions appears to be waning.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said at the hearing that the endowment, not Congress, should be charged with imposing restrictions on possibly obscene art.

NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer agreed and said the endowment has established a thorough screening process to reject for grants ''offensive'' and obscene art proposals.

In a National Press Club speech after his testimony, Frohnmayer said, ''Over the last 24 years we have funded about 1 million images ... of that about 20 have been questioned.''

Frohnmayer said, ''I believe we are responsible to the American people. We are responsible to Congress, and most importantly we are responsible to ourselves to provide the very best art that this country has to offer.''

Keillor captured the attention of senators and spectators as he credited the endowment with nurturing his career.

''I was writing for the New Yorker (in 1969) but they weren't aware of it '' Keillor said. ''I often had fantasies of finding a patron - a beggar would appear at my door one day. I'd give him an egg salad sandwich and suddenly he'd turn into a man in a pin stripe suit, Prince Bob from the Guggenheim Foundation.''

Prince Bob never showed up, Keillor said, but the NEA did. The endowment offered him a one-month job at a writers' school program in his hometown of Minneapolis in which writers taught young children to read.

An endowment grant in 1974 enabled Keillor and his colleagues at Minnesota Public Radio, to start ''A Prairie Home Companion.'' The award-winning live show featured folk music and homespun comedy and led to Keillor's publication of ''Lake Wobegon Days'' and his subsequent books ''Leaving Home'' and ''We Are Still Married.''

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (MARCH 29) UPI - Lee Remick is returning to her acting career after a year's battle with cancer, which is now in remission.

Remick, her blonde curls cut short, looked healthy and eager the other day at lunch as she prepared to depart for the Soviet Union, where she will be one of the stars of ''The Young Catherine,'' playing the mother of Catherine the Great of Russia.

This month she will join Vanessa Redgrave, Maximilian Schell, Christopher Plummer and Michael Anderson in the four-hour Turner Network mini-series on location in Leningrad.

She is excited at the prospect of returning to work.

''I play the role of Johanna, an ambitious German woman who plots to have her daughter become empress of all the Russias,'' she said. ''Most of the rest of the cast is English, which is fine with me because I lived in England for so many years.

''I've never been to Russia and with glasnost in full swing, it's a great time to go,'' she said.

It is almost exactly a year ago, on the completion of her role in ''Dark Holiday,'' a TV movie, that Remick discovered she had kidney cancer. It had metastasized to her lungs.

''(The discovery) came as a thunderbolt,'' she said. ''My husband was in Hollywood and I was at our home in Cape Cod organizing my daughter's wedding. I'd been feeling ill and tired for six weeks. I just thought it was the remnants of the flu.

''I finished work in the TV movie and then got some rest, but I had a fever every day, so I went to my doctor and had a chest X-ray. Then I had a CAT-scan. He told me I had cancer.''

Remick said she has a strong survival instinct so she ''didn't panic.''

''I came back to our home here in L.A. to see an oncologist whom I knew to be one of the very best. He sent me to the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

''My way of coping with the terrible news was to start receiving treatment immediately. There was so much cancer in my lungs it was inoperable. At the NIH they began treating me with immunotherapy. It galvanizes your white blood cells.

''There were two separate week-long therapies with a 10-day rest between the two. It's quite painful and with some side effects, but they soon go away. Then I had an operation last July for the removal of my kidney.''

Remick said it wasn't courage that got her through the treatment and operation. She had no choice. She wanted to survive.

''You fight,'' she said.

Confident she will escape any recurrance, Remick said she is in a position to help other people who have been stricken.

''It's given me a new perspective,'' she said. ''Doctors treat the physical problem, but the emotional and psychological aspects require communication with people who share the fear.

''There is a bond among people with cancer and a need for reassurance and establishing confidence.

''I've had several strangers offer to give me one of their healthy kidneys. It's amazing how much good there is in people, how far they will go to try to help in moments of tragedy. I get letters making suggestings and letters from people asking where they can go to be treated.

''It is important for me to keep a high public profile so other people can see how well I'm doing. Cancer no longer is a death knell. The survival rate is increasing all the time.

''I realize the value of my experience to other people, but I don't want to be identified for the rest of my life as a cancer victim. I'm willing to talk about it now, but the time isn't far off when I won't. It's gone. It's past. It is time to forget it. It's not something I want to be known for.

''I've read all the books on how individuals should deal with cancer, and a lot of them are wonderful because they encourage you to participate actively in the fight against the disease.''

Remick said the best medicine for her right now is returning to work.

''I was very careful about the property I chose,'' she said. ''I decided on 'The Young Catherine' because of the setting, the script and the members of the cast.

''I haven't worked with any of them before and I do want to visit Russia.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - Two members of the Senate Banking Committee said Thursday they would oppose the nomination of Timothy Ryan to become the nation's top savings and loan regulator despite support from the White House.

Ryan, 44, a former Labor Department lawyer, was nominated to head the Office of Thrift Supervision.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., announcing he would vote against the nomination, said, ''Frankly, the American people can't be asked to pay and pay and pay while the president's nominee gets the on-the-job-training he clearly needs to carry out this complex and important job.''

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., noting Ryan's insufficient financial background, said he would oppose the nomination and also urged Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady to withdraw Ryan from contention for the job.

''There's no time for spring training on this job,'' Graham said. ''It's opening day already and everyone is watching.''

The Senate Banking Committee challenged President Bush's nominee Wednesday on grounds Ryan has little experience related to the savings and loan industry.

But the White House defended the nomination, saying the troubled thrift industry needs a tough enforcer.

''Frankly, we've had a little trouble finding people in the banking industry who want to take this job,'' White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said. ''And also, frankly, I think it's not at all certain from the track record of the S&L industry that that's the best place to draw on expertise.''

''I think the feeling here is we need somebody who is a tough enforcer, who knows how to get in there and get things done and clean up this mess '' Fitzwater said, ''and knows how to use the law and use the resources at his command to crack some heads and get things moving.''

Ryan's lack of experience rankled several members of the Banking Committee which could vote on his nomination as early as next week.

In his appearance before the panel, Ryan said he was surprised when Treasury Department officials called him three to four weeks ago to ask if he were interested in the position.

''I did not seek the job,'' he said. ''To be quite frank, I was surprised when I received the call.''

In addition to inquiries about his experience, Ryan faced tough questioning from Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, about the propriety of several actions during his past government service, as solicitor for the Labor Department, and in the private sector.

''I can't say to you that I know you've done anything illegal or unethical but it is a rather thin line,'' said Metzenbaum, who is not a member of the Banking Committee but was allowed to question Ryan.

Specifically, Ryan was questioned about his handling of the Central States Pension fund of the Teamsters. After leading a successful effort to clean up corruption in the $10 billion fund, Ryan left government and became involved in the regulatory process he established.

While serving as solicitor, Ryan also was involved in the investigation of the National Maritime Union and its election process. When he left the department in 1983, Ryan was hired by the union's leadership to defend it against charges the election was unfair, Metzenbaum said.

Ryan said he had no dealings with the Labor Department for more than one year after he left the agency.

Ryan was nominated by Bush last week, just days after a U.S. district judge found that former OTS director M. Danny Wall and his temporary replacement, Salvatore Martoche, were appointed illegally.

A federal appeals court last Friday granted the government a 30-day emergency stay of the lower court's ruling. Government lawyers argued that Lamberth's decision threatened to throw the government's thrift rescue effort into chaos until a permanent director was confirmed by the Senate.

(MARCH 29) UPI - A University of Chicago researcher says a decline in manufacturing and blue-collar jobs is a major cause of rising poverty among blacks in U-S cities. The study by sociology professor Douglas Massey contradicts earlier views that it was the exodus of wealthier blacks that played a major role in creating poverty in urban ghettos.

A report released today says 400-thousand American Indian children living on reservations suffer emotional problems at a higher rate than white children. HARTFORD, CT. (MARCH 29) UPI - A legislative committee Thursday approved a bill that would repeal existing, but unenforced criminal laws on abortion and require counseling for girls under 16 before they could undergo the procedure.

The Judiciary Committee voted 29-4 to approve the legislation, and abortion supporters immediately hailed it as a major victory. The bill now goes to the State House where a lengthy debate is expected.

''This bill as it is currently written will clearly preserve the status quo,'' said Rep. George Jepsen, D-Stamford, an abortion supporter who has been working on legislation since the Supreme Court last year gave states the authority to write their own abortion laws.

''When you consider the array of legislation that's being considered around the country this is probably the most liberal pro-choice bill since (the court's decision),'' he said.

The bill would repeal laws that make it a crime to have or perform an abortion or to counsel someone to have an abortion. Court orders have prohibited enforcement of those laws for nearly 20 years, but they have remained on the books.

The bill also would require a licensed counselor or clergy member to counsel a girl under 16 before she could have an abortion.

The counseling would include discussion of the possibility of involving the girl's parents or adult guardian in making the decision and about alternatives to abortion.

The bill was the only measure dealing with abortion that the Judiciary Committee plans to act on in this year's legislative session.

The committee had taken testimony on other bills that would have required a minor to notify her parents before receiving an abortion and to require notification of the father before a woman could receive an abortion.

IRVINE, CA. (MARCH 29) UPI - A man suspected of raping an 11-year-old girl is a former Beverly Hills police officer who failed to pass his first-year probation and was terminated, a department official said Thursday.

Steven Rush McCoy, 36, of Irvine was a reserve officer with the department from December 1976 until January 1978 when he was hired as a full-time patrol officer, Beverly Hills Lt. Robert Curtis said.

McCoy failed to pass his first-year probation and was terminated after eight months, Curtis said.

He declined to say why McCoy failed his probation period, saying all police personnel records are confidential.

McCoy was arrested Monday in the rape of an 11-year-old girl who lives near him. He was being held at Orange County Jail in $250,000 bail and was to be arraigned April 6.

McCoy is suspected of posing as a deliveryman, who allegedly persuaded the girl to open the door to her family's apartment by telling her he had a package for her, then threatened her with a knife and raped her, Irvine Sgt. Phil Povey said.

McCoy was arrested at his residence three hours later after serving a search warrant. Investigators took several items from the apartment that could be used as possible evidence, Povey said.

Police apparently were familiar with the suspect, who fit the girl's description of her attacker.

The items seized from his apartment included a notebook with notes about making a defense case based on insanity, children's clothing and toys.

Prosecutors say the crime was premeditated and the assailant carefully stalked his victim.

McCoy recently worked out of his apartment as an investment counselor.

NEW YORK (MARCH 29) UPI - A bankruptcy judge Thursday approved the sale of Eastern Airlines' Latin American routes and other assets to American Airlines for $349 million.

Eastern, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection a year ago, said it needed to sell the routes in order to raise cash to fuel the carrier's emergence from bankruptcy.

The sale still must be approved by the U.S. Department of Transportation and by the governments of foreign countries served by the routes, an Eastern spokesman said.

The sale already has been approved by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Key to the transaction was an agreement settling litigation between American and Continental Airlines, Eastern's sister carrier. Both Eastern and Continental are owned by Texas Air Corp.

In the litigation, Continental claimed American's reservation system violated antitrust regulations.

The settlement calls for American, owned by AMR Corp., to pay Continental $102.5 million. In return, American receives two Continental gates at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, six Continental slots at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York and route authority to fly from Miami to London.

The two airlines also agreed to exchange four gates at Dallas-Fort Worth.

In addition, American will pay $19.2 million to SystemOne, Texas Air's computer reservations system.

The litigation caused talks between Eastern and American regarding the sale to break down last summer.

Eastern filed for protection from creditors in March 1989, five days after its unions launched crippling strikes in a contract dispute. The pilots' and flight attendants' unions have since abandoned their walkouts, but the International Association of Machinists remains on strike.

Earlier this week, Eastern issud a revised earnings projection, saying it expected to lose $330 million in 1990. In January, the carrier had predicted losing about $155 million for the year.

Eastern also said it would not be able to meet the terms of a tentative agreement with its unsecured creditors that called for Eastern to pay 50 cents on the dollar.

Eastern based its revised projections on lower-than-anticipated revenues in January and February.

Included in the sale to American are Eastern's South and Central American routes as well as routes between Miami and Madrid and between Miami, Tampa and Toronto, Eastern slots in Washington, New York and Chicago, and facilities in Miami and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The sale was approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Burton Lifland.

PHILADELPHIA (MARCH 29) UPI - Major League baseball umpires ended their four-day spring training boycott Thursday after team owners agreed to give them three extra vacation days this summer.

Under terms of a settlement approved by a federal judge, the umpires agreed to return to work on Sunday. In return, the owners will give them three more vacation days sometime between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

The owners also agreed to pay the umpires a total of $48,500 to make up for canceled preseason games, reimburse them for deposits made on hotel rooms and pay them extra expense money during the remaining week of spring training.

The cash settlement will be divided equally among about 60 major league umpires.

The extra vacation time during the season was the key to the settlement, said American League President Bobby Brown.

It was the big problem from day one, Brown said. ''We had to find a way to make up three games for everyone.''

Richie Phillips, general counsel to the Major League Umpires Association, said he was satisfied with the agreement. He said the umpires union never intended to boycott the regular season.

The settlement ended the federal court action taken this week by the owners in an effort to force the umpires back to work.

Both sides had agreed on Tuesday to let an arbitrator settle their differences but that deal fell through when the owners objected to the court-appointed arbitrator, retired Philadelphia Common Pleas Judge Stanley Greenberg.

Thursday's agreement followed a morning court hearing during which the owners tried to convince U.S. District Judge Norma Shapiro that the lack of umpires during preseason games could cause irreparable harm to the game.

Attorneys for the owners argued that umpires needed spring training games to sharpen their skills for the regular season. Six umpires, however, testified that while spring training is helpful, it isn't necessary, especially for more experienced umpires.

''I don't think I need spring training,'' said veteran National League umpire Eric Gregg. ''I like to call a couple of games before the season but it's not necessary.''

Minor league umpires have been working spring training games since the abbreviated exhibition season began Monday. The regular season begins April 9.

Phillips said the boycott was called because umpires were not consulted about schedule changes made by the owners after spring training was delayed for 32 days. Owners had refused to let players into training camps until a new contract was negotiated.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 29) UPI - The federal government, state of Alaska and oil industry have known since the trans-Alaska pipeline was built 13 years ago that measures taken to prevent corrosion were flawed, congressional auditors said Thursday.

Additionally, the pipeline, which carries one-fourth of the oil produced in the United States, has received insufficient attention from state and federal regulators who are supposed to oversee its operation, officials from the General Accounting Office said.

As a result, regulators were ''caught off guard'' by recent inspections showing premature corrosion of the 800-mile pipeline, James Duffus, director of GAO's natural resources management issues, told a House subcommittee.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, is conducting an extensive review of the pipeline and its regulation at the request of Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the panel.

''At some point, the competence level of this facility has got to be improved, and the users of the pipeline are going to have to pay for it,'' Miller said.

The pipeline delivers nearly 2 million barrels of crude oil a day from Alaska's North Slope to the port of Valdez on Prince William Sound, crossing three major mountain passes and 800 streams in the state's frozen interior.

The pipeline is operated by an oil industry consortium known as the Alyeska Service Co.

Much of the corrosion is concentrated in a 9-mile section that Alyeska plans to replace next year, an operation that will require a two-day shutdown of the entire pipeline, Alyeska President James Hermiller said.

In all, Hermiller said, Alyeska expects to spend up to $800 million over the next three or four years ridding the pipeline of corrosion. Ultra-sound tests have found evidence of corrosion at more than 800 points along the pipeline.

Hermiller said none of the corrosion is severe enough to pose a ''significant risk of rupture of the pipeline,'' which was designed to operate for 30 years.

However, Jerry Brossia, pipeline coordinator for the Alaska Natural Resources Department, said the full extent of the corrosion remains unknown, and ''we cannot say whether the integrity of the pipeline is threatened'' without further checking.

Most of the corrosion was caused by the failure of epoxy coatings and special tapes covering the 48-inch-thick pipeline. State and federal investigators say the coatings were damaged or improperly applied in the rush to finish the $7.7 billion pipeline.

Government regulators and Alyeska ''have been aware of deficiencies in the systems that were designed to prevent corrosion, including coating and taping, since the pipeline was constructed,'' Duffus said.

''They also have known that Alyeska was experiencing difficulty with its corrosion detection devices, and thus did not have a clear picture if or where corrosion was occurring,'' he said.

Following the spill March 24, 1989, of 11 million gallons of oil from the supertanker Exxon Valdez, state and federal agencies have stepped up their oversight of the pipeline, the GAO officials told a House subcommittee.

But until then, state and federal regulators relied heavily on data provided by Alyeska and seldom conducted their own inspections, the GAO said.

State officials were not informed of Alyeska's concern about corrosion until last year, after the Exxon Valdez spill, Brossia told the subcommittee on water, power and offshore energy resources.

But Hermiller said Alyeska limitation of detection devices obscured the extent of the corrosion until 1989.

''It has not been a laxity on anyone's part,'' he said. ''It's just that the technology has not been there.''

Hermiller said it took about six hours for Alyeska to pinpoint a simulated spill from the pipeline in a drill last December, but the company's cleanup capability has not been tested since a real spill from the pipeline nine years ago.

The 13-year-old pipeline has sustained six oil spills of 50 barrels or more - all in the first four years of operation - but none of them was caused by corrosion, Hermiller said.

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 29) UPI - Lawyers for Robert Alton Harris Thursday raced to prepare an appeal to a lower court judge's refusal to block the condemned killer's April 3 execution, the first in California in 23 years.

They said they expected to file it early Friday with the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

On Wednesday, U.S. District Judge William Enright in San Diego rejected the plea of Harris' attorneys for a stay of execution to give the court time to consider whether the condemned man should be spared because he suffers organic brain damage and other mental disorders.

Enright's written order was issued Thursday, and lawyers said they would work through the night to finish the appeal. ''We're working on it right now,'' said a harried Michael McCabe, one of two lawyers working for Harris.

Enright's written decision was blunt.

''The jury knew that directly after killing the two boys, Harris paused to eat the boys' partially eaten food,'' Enright wrote. ''The jury knew that while incarcerated and awaiting trial for the murder of the two boys, Harris was twice discovered to be in possession of a deadly weapon ... (and) was a principal actor in the forcible rape of another prisoner.''

Such behavior, said Enright, ''are sufficient to illustrate that the weight of the evidence before the jury clearly supported the jury's findings that Harris was capable of deliberating and that the murders were premeditated.''

Enright ended his memorandum by offering what he called ''a final impression. It may well appear to a casual observer that the whole appellate processs in death penalty cases has been turned on its head ... it would seem that the process is made to feed on itself.''

A three-judge panel of the appeals court is automatically assigned to review the emergency appeal when it arrives. Appeals Court Clerk Cathy Catterson said the case will go to the three judges who previously ruled in an earlier Harris appeal, Judges Arthur Alarcon, Melvin Brunetti and John Noonan.

The 9th Circuit is one step away from final appeal by Harris to Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

If Harris fails to win a stay from either the 9th Circuit, or O'Connor, his execution in San Quentin's gas chamber will go ahead April 3.

Harris, 37, would become the first person executed in California since the April 12, 1967, execution of Aaron Mitchell. Harris was convicted of the murdering two 16-year-old boys in San Diego on July 5, 1978.

Harris received the death sentence for the killing of Michael Baker and John Mayeski in the parking lot of a San Diego fast-food restaurant so he could use their car for a bank robbery.

Harris, an abused child who started getting in trouble at an early age, was on parole from a manslaughter conviction when the teenagers were killed.

Although Harris has pursued many appeals in 11 years, his lawyers argued for the first time in federal court Wednesday that he should be spared the death penalty because he suffers from organic brain damage and other medical disorders that impaired his judgment.

He was injured as a result of severe beatings by his alcoholic parents from the time he was born.

McCabe and lawyer Charles Sevilla are seeking a new penalty hearing for Harris in hopes of getting a sentence less than death.

The three-judge panel of the federal appeals court will review the Harris stay request. It takes only one of the three to issue a stay order temporarily blocking the execution.

If the request is rejected there is one other way Harris also could have his execution stayed by having the request considered by the full 11-member court.

But a majority of the judges must agree. If just one of the 27 judges asks for a vote on the 11-judge hearing, Harris would automatically get a seven-day stay of execution to give all 27 judges time to vote on the hearing.

Deputy Attorney General Dane Gillette, the state's death penalty coordinator, said, ''We are prepared to deal with any stays.''

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 29) UPI - The U.S. economy wll continue modest but steady growth through the 1992 presidential election, the UCLA Business Forecasting Project said Thursday.

''Although there are a number of indicators that seem to point to slower growth and potential troubles ahead, there are good reasons for expecting that the economy could easily expand,'' said Larry Kimbell, director of the project, which releases results on a quarterly basis.

The latest forecast calls for real gross national product growth to stay at less than 2 percent this year and in 1991, then rise above 2 percent in 1992.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday the nation's 1989 gross national product was up by 3 percent, compared to an increase of 4.4 percent in 1988 and an increase of 3.7 percent in 1987.

''The U.S. stock market has brushed aside very negative developments in corporate profits, junk bonds, Japanese financial markets and regional real estate markets,'' Kimbell said.

The forceast also said there will be cuts in defense spending, a drop in the federal budget deficit, a 4 percent decline in 1991 and 1992 in the value of the dollar against other currencies and an increase in real consumption expenditures of about 2.5 percent annually through 1992.

The forecast also predicted the gross state product in California would increase by 1.7 percent this year, followed by gains of 2.9 percent in 1991 and 2.2 percent in 1992.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 30) UPI - Fox Broadcasting Co. turning the tables in an antitrust lawsuit, accused Disney Co. of ''predatory'' and ''coercive'' business practices, court papers disclosed Thursday.

In its first response to a lawsuit filed Feb. 21 by Buena Vista Television Disney's television syndication subsidiary, Fox denied charges that it has violated antitrust laws by attempting to monopolize the programing of its affiliates.

Instead, Fox accused the entertainment giant of trying to thwart the so-called fourth network ''from becoming an effective competitor.''

In the lawsuit, Disney protested Fox's attempts to waive certain Federal Communications Commission regulations in order to offer more of its own programming to Fox affiliates and acquire syndication rights for the programs.

Disney accused Fox of monopolizing programming by threatening to drop stationsas affiliates if they aired a two-hour Disney children's program.

However, in documents filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court, Fox said Disney has ''engaged in anti-competitive, predatory and coercive practices designed to frustrate and prevent competition by any other animated programming supplier and particularly to prevent (Fox) from becoming an effective competitor.''

In the suit, Disney predicted that if FCC regulations were lifted for the Fox network, its ''super market power would be compounded materially because it would be able to virtually appropriate the Fox affiliates for itself.''

Fox, a News Corp. subsidiary, denied that it has ''enormous market power'' in court papers filed Wednesday by attorney Bertram Fields.

''At this point Fox is nowhere near the economic status or power of the major networks,'' the papers said.

Fox said FCC regulations ''apply to big networks and (exist) to encourage the emergence of small additional networks such as (Fox) in order to foster competition, increase programming choices and thereby improve television viewing.''

Fox said that it has ''lawfully and properly'' attempted to persuade affiliates to accept ''as much of its programming as possible'' but that this action is ''healthy, pro-competitive conduct by a new entity in the field.''

Fox affiliates are free to choose programs from competitors, the documents said.

Fox turned around Disney's own allegations, accusing the giant of making ''anti-competitive demands'' on television stations, particularly in the area of children's animated programming, where Disney had accused Fox of trying to prevent affiliates from running a two-hour children's program entitled ''The Disney Afternoon.''

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (MARCH 30) UPI - Honduras will receive $147 million in U.S. economic aid to address problems in its balance of payments and to buy corn and wheat, a presidential spokesman said Thursday.

''The most important of the agreements signed is for a donation of economic aid worth $120 million, to support Honduras' balance of payments

'' spokesman Nahun Valladares said.

A third of that amount will become available immediately.

The economic assistance package also includes a food aid agreement with a $12 million soft loan to import wheat and a 38,000-metric-ton corn donation worth $4 million.

The United States is to donate another $6 million to Honduras to finance agricultural development projects, primary education and the strengthening of democratic institutions, Valladares said. He did not specify what the other $5 million was for.

In the past eight years, the U.S. government has provided Honduras with about $1.6 billion in aid, the majority of which has been military.

Honduras' current fiscal deficit is $450 million and its trade deficit $390 million, according to U.S. Embassy figures.

(MARCH 29) UPI - President Bush came into office extending an olive branch to Democrats, but the time of the ''kinder and gentler'' approach may be ending.

The White House says Bush is ready to ''draw the line'' and use his veto power liberally in battles with the Democrat-controlled Congress.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says Bush is determined to push his policy views by killing legislation he doesn't agree with.

One possibility is the clean-air bill. Fitzwater says Bush is concerned about efforts in the Senate to change the bill, which was drawn up after long negotiations.

Another bill that's likely to draw a veto is a child-care bill put forth by the House Democratic leadership.

Speaker Tom Foley voiced confidence today that the House will pass the 27-BILLION-dollar bill. Foley says he won't ''fall over dead'' because of Republican warnings of a presidential veto.

One problem with the bill is a controversy over whether federal child-care funds should be used for religious instruction.

West Germany's defense minister says his country will cut troop strength by 20 percent. But he warns that removing nuclear weapons from Europe might only encourage conflict.

In Bonn today, Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg also said compulsory military service in West Germany might be shortened from 18 months to 12.

The changes would lower the number of active soldiers by almost 100-thousand, to 400-thousand. Stoltenberg said- ''the new atmosphere of peace in Eastern Europe'' allows the reduction.

Stoltenberg gave NO date for the planned cuts.

(MARCH 29) UPI - Three people were charged in London today with trying to smuggle to Iraq 40 components needed to trigger nuclear weapons.

They were among five people arrested yesterday at London's Heathrow Airport... at an Iraqi Airways office... and at the suburban headquarters of an export firm. One of the three people charged was released on bail, and the other two have been detained.

Britain ordered a fourth person deported. He's an employee of Iraqi Airways. The fifth person was released after questioning.

The arrests resulted from an 18-month investigation by U-S and British customs agents. The London sting operation also netted the 40 capacitors, which can be used to trigger nuclear weapons.

Two of the three people charged in Britain were indicted on similar charges in the United States. It's NOT clear whether they will be extradited. Three Iraqi citizens living in Iraq and two British companies also are named in the U-S indictments, which were returned in San Diego.

Baghdad denies seeking the restricted materials, and accuses Britain of mounting a slander campaign against Iraq.

The Bush administration says now ''is NOT the time'' for President Bush to talk personally with Soviet President Gorbachev about Lithuania's independence movement.

Bush has said he can call Gorbachev to discuss any matter. But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater insists that the situation is too ''complex and delicate'' for such direct involvement.

Plans for an arms control agreement and a June summit may hang in the balance of how the Soviet Union reacts to Lithuania's March 11th declaration of independence.

Gorbachev has called the declaration illegal and invalid.

Fitzwater said the U-S position is to do NOTHING to disrupt the potential for dialogue by taking sides in the matter.

In Vilnius today, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis implored the U-S Congress to recognize the republic's independence.

Landsbergis warned that ''the freedom of Lithuania is in great danger.''

The move was two days late because dozens of tiny flies called ''midges'' got into the telescope's ultra-clean storage room this week.

The White House today defended the nomination of Timothy Ryan to be the nation's top savings and loan regulator... saying he would- quote- ''crack some heads.''

The Senate Banking Committee challenged Ryan yesterday on grounds he has little or NO experience related to the savings and loan industry. Ryan is a former Labor Department lawyer.

Ryan said he did NOT seek the job... but said he is a quick learner who can- quote- ''make things happen.''

(MARCH 29) UPI - The death toll is now at least 26 in two days of bloody clashes between rival black movements in South Africa's Natal province.

The latest victims are three women and five men killed during an attack on homes in a valley near the provincial capital.

That's where battles erupted on Tuesday between members of the Zulu Inkhata movement and members of the United Democratic Front, which backs the African National Congress.

Community sources say efforts are under way to bring A-N-C leader Nelson Mandela together with the chief of the Zulu movement next Monday. The two apparently are planning a joint peace rally in a bid to halt the fighting.

(MARCH 29) UPI - The House passes a child care bill... nuclear trigger smugglers are indicted... a new development in the Greyhound strike... details of those stories and more next, from the wires of United Press International.

The House today approved a bill to provide some 27-BILLION dollars for child care.

The bill would let parents use federal money at church-run day care centers, including those that teach religion.

The bill was backed by the Democratic leadership. It was hailed by supporters as the most important youth legislation in a quarter century, and passed by a vote of 265-145.

But opponents say the bill unfairly limits parents' choices by requiring states to set safety and training standards for day-care workers. They warn President Bush will veto the measure.

On an earlier 225BILLION-dollar bill supported by the White House. That plan did NOT require child-care standards.

House-Senate negotiators will work out the differences between the bill passed today and a similar measure passed last June by the Senate.

The House earlier rejected an amendment to ban the use of federal vouchers at religious day-care centers, and it voted down an amendment to leave such a ban up to each state.

West Virginia Democrat Robert Byrd fought hard for his coal-mining constituency, arguing forcibly for passage of the amendment. He pointed out that stricter clean-air standards would throw thousands of miners out of work in Appalachia and the Midwest.

A new study has put a bit of a crimp in the arguments of the global-warming doomsayers.

Researchers from NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center and the University of Alabama report that temperature measurements taken by satellite over a 10-year period did NOT show any increase in the Earth's average temperature.

But the study did NOT directly blame Agent Orange. That's the wartime plant-killer many veterans claim causes cancer and other ailments.

(MARCH 29) UPI - The Census Bureau says the federal government paid five percent more to state and local governments in fiscal 1989 than it did the previous year. The pay-out climbed to 932-BILLION dollars. The study shows federal spending in 1989 went up almost 11 percent for individual benefits such as Social Security, Medicare, and food stamps. But procurement contracts from the Defense Department and other agencies dropped almost six percent.

An Israeli colonel went on trial today, charged with ordering soldiers to break the arms and legs of 20 Palestinian prisoners in 1988. Colonel Yehuda Meir denied the charges, and said ''the whole army functioned by the same norms.'' Two years ago, the military issued a policy to use ''force, might, and beatings'' to quell the Palestinian uprising. After widespread condemnation, the military backed down on officially sanctioning such measures.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Liquidity Fund has filed suit against Equitec Financial Group (NYSE:EFG) and Hallwood Group Inc. (NYSE:HWG) to prevent the companies from rolling up the assets of Equitec 83 Real Estate Investors, a publicly offered real estate partnership sponsored by Oakland-based Equitec in 1983, into a Master Limited Partnership which would include 11 other previously sponsored Equitec partnerships as well.

Specifically, the major causes for action in the suit against Equitec/Hallwood are breach of fiduciary duty and intentional interference with and conspiracy to interfere with business relationship. The suit seeks both a preliminary and permanent injunction to stop the roll up.

Richard Wollack, chairman of Liquidity Fund, an Emeryville, Calif.-based investment company, said the suit was filed on behalf of investors in two Liquidity Fund-sponsored partnerships that own a total of more than 1.7 percent of the original $90 million public real estate partnership.

The Equitec-sponsored investment program, funded by more than 13,000 investors nationwide, owns 2 North LaSalle, a 691,000 square-foot office tower in Chicago's financial center.

The suit contends that Equitec is breaching its fiduciary responsibility by giving Hallwood the power to include Equitec 83 Real Estate Investors in a planned ''roll-up'' of 12 Equitec partnerships into a massive, publicly traded master limited partnership.

PHOENIX (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - The Movie Superstore Inc., a publicly traded, Phoenix-based chain of six Valley video rental stores, has entered into an agreement to purchase nine Colorado stores from Fort Collins-based Giant Video Inc.

The purchase price will be determined within 60 days, upon the completion of an audit of Giant Video.

The nine stores had revenues of about $4.5 million and profits of about $1.35 million in 1989, according to The Movie Superstore.

Under terms of the agreement, The Movie Superstore will pursue four additional stores in Colorado through acquisition and development. In addition, the two companies have agreed to jointly pursue the development of four more stores, which will bring the total number of Colorado stores to 17.

Earlier this month, The Movie Superstore announced its intent to purchase three Valley video rental outlets, currently operated as National Video Superstore franchises which reported total 1989 revenues of about $2.1 million with net profits of about $420,000. If both transactions are consummated, the chain could have a total of 26 stores.

''This 26-store plan will give us a strong foothold in both Arizona and Colorado and chart the beginning of the course for The Movie Superstore becoming a nationwide chain,'' said Patrick Clifton, the chief executive officer.

The two-year-old firm made its initial public stock offering last month with the sale of 1.5 million units at $2 each, raising net proceeds of about $2.6 million, that Clifton said would be used to expand operations and reduce debt.

The Movie Superstore's units are currently traded on the over-the-counter market under the National Association of Securities Dealers Quotation System symbol TMSIU.

IRVINE, CA (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - AST Research Inc. Friday unveiled its fastest system to date, the Premium 486/33 desktop.

An Industry Standard Architecture (ISA) design, the Premium 486/33 operates 30 percent faster than a comparably priced Compaq DESKPRO 486/25 and nearly three times faster than Compaq's 386/33 based system.

In addition to its speed, the system supports advanced memory and may be upgraded to future microprocessors due to its unique Cupid-32 (Completely Universal Processor, I/O Design) architecture. ''Our Premium 486 family clearly establishes AST as the price/performance leader in the i486 market and allows the customer to move from 386 to i486 computing power,'' said Jim Ashbrook, senior vice president of product marketing. ''These high-end systems are also positioned as powerful alternatives to expensive proprietary workstations and UNIX file servers.''

The Premium 486/33 offers instantaneous response time for CPU-intensive graphics, business, accounting and numeric analysis applications. AST's Premium 486/33 utilizes the 33-MHz Intel i486 microprocessor with an integrated 8K of cache memory and an 80387 compatible math coprocessor for increased performance of numeric intensive applications such as Lotus 1-2-3 and AutoCAD. The system also supports a Weitek 4167 processor for specific floating-point applications, such as ANVIL-5000pc and VersaCAD. The system is designed to accommodate advanced DRAMs (4MB SIMMs) to provide the memory capacity to support sophisticated operating systems, such as SCO UNIX V.3.2 AND IGC's VM/386. The i486/33 processor is rated by Intel at 20 VAX MIPS, which matches or exceeds the processing power of many proprietary engineering and technical workstations at a fraction of the cost. Such high-performance applications include CAD/CAM, medical imaging, aerodynamic stress testing and as multi-user file servers.

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - TeleQuest Inc. (NASDAQ: TELQ) reported sales of $2,018,000 for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, down 28 percent from $2,809,000 for the fourth quarter of the prior year.

Sales for the year of $5,017,000 were 42 percent lower than sales of $8,581,000 for 1988. The company also reported a net loss of $281,000, or six cents per share, for the fourth quarter, and a loss of $1,656,000, or 38 cents per share, for the 1989 year. These results compared with losses of $1,282,000, or 34 cents per share, for the fourth quarter and $6,104,000, or $1.60 per share for the full year of 1988.

According to Robert C. Fick, vice president and chief financial officer, the decrease in sales resulted primarily from the discontinuance of a product line, the sale of Asian distribution rights as part of an earlier equity investment in the company by its principle shareholder and a significant decrease in liquidation sales of slow-moving product.

Although competitive pressure continued to depress sales prices, the company's gross margin improved from six percent in 1988 to 19 percent in 1989. Discounting the effect of accounting adjustments and certain other non-recurring items, gross margin was 23 percent and 17 percent, respectively, for 1989 and 1988. Operating expenses decreased 60 percent from 1988 to 1989.

The company Friday also announced the sale of four million additional shares of its common stock for ten cents per share to Teletech International Holdings Limited, the company's principle shareholder. In exchange for such shares, Teletech cancelled $400,000 of debt owed by the company to Teletech, which arose in connection with the company's purchase from Teletech of certain inventory. The effective date of the sale was March 26, 1990. With this additional purchase, Teletech owns approximately 84 percent of the company.

The company also announced Friday that the United States District Court had disapproved the settlement stipulation that had been previously announced between the company and the plaintiffs of a securities lawsuit. While the company has denied and continues to deny the claims alleged in the lawsuit, it had decided to attempt to settle the lawsuit because of the expense and time involved in trying to defend itself.

The company is exploring various alternatives for funding its legal defense and will continue to attempt to settle this lawsuit because of the costs involved, although there is no assurance that it can affect a settlement acceptable to all parties or to the court. TeleQuest designs, develops and markets a diversified line of telephone products for the residential and small business markets.

DENVER (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Communications World International Inc. (NASDAQ:CWIIA) Friday announced results for its second quarter and six month periods ended Jan. 31, 1990.

For the six-month period the company reported a net loss of $67,766, or $.008 per share, on revenue of $1,125,640 compared to net income of $49,728, or $.006 per share, on revenue of $2,026,398 for the same period a year ago.

For the second quarter Communications World reported a net loss of $153,726, or $.018 per share, on revenue of $491,514 compared to net income of $3,803, or $.0004 per share, on revenue of $1,025,757 for the same period last year.

Systemwide sales, which are total product and service sales by all 61 Communications World outlets nationwide, reached $2.9 million for the quarter, raising the year-to-date figure to $6.2 million.

The company attributed the decrease in revenue to a nubmer of factors: One is the continued limited product supply from Toshiba America Information Systems, which is the company's primary supplier of telephone systems.

This supply decrease resulted from trade duties imposed on TAIS by the U.S. Department of Commerce. TAIS has now begun manufacturing products in the United States however and management believes that product availability will improve gradually as the year progresses.

Another reason for the revenue decline is the conversion of three company owned locations to franchise status during fiscal 1989. As a result gross product sales from these locations are no longer booked as revenue by the company.

Instead, as with all other franchise locations, CWI receives franchise fees based on a percent of overall franchise sales. A third reason for the decrease in revenue is the company's decision to exit the sales portion of the cellular telephone market to concentrate on the rental side of the business.

The decline in revenue coupled with the company's evaluation of inventory and accounts receivable and subsequent write down of some assets to their net realizable value resulted in the company's first quarterly net loss in several years.

However management is committed to returning the company to profitability and views an improvement in the availability of TAIS products as a key in realizing that goal.

Communications World outlets market state-of-the-art telephone systems and other communications products to small- and medium-size businesses and provide their customers with ongoing service and support. The company is the largest publicly held franchisor of interconnect companies in the United States with 61 locations serving more than 20,000 customers in 26 cities across the country.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Grubb & Ellis Realty Income Trust (NASDAQ:GRIT) Friday reported 1989 audited net income of $1,758,000, or 64 cents per share, from revenue of $2,748,000.

This compares to 1988 net income of $1,706,000, or 62 cents per share, from revenue of $2,254,000.

Net income for the 1989 fourth quarter was $698,000, or 25 cents per share from revenue of $733,000, compared to net income of $256,000, or 9 cents per share, from revenue of $475,000 for the fourth quarter of 1988.

Financial results for 1989 include a fee of $729,000 from the prepayment of the REIT's Moss Creek Apartments loan, and a loss of $453,000 resulting from the decline in value of the Valley Commerce Center and adjacent land parcel in Phoenix.

The company reduced the net carrying values of the Phoenix investments based on independent appraisals of current market value. These appraised values were included in the company's recently announced estimated net proceeds of $8.48 per share from the proposed liquidation of the company.

Emmet R. DeMoss Jr., president of Grubb & Ellis Realty Advisers Inc., said that although the continuing decline in property values in the Phoenix market has affected the company's Phoenix investments, the Valley Commerce Center was 94 percent leased at Dec. 31, 1989, compared to a 55 percent occupancy when the company acquired the property through foreclosure in August 1989.

During the fourth quarter, Nostalgia reported revenue growth of 56 percent to $1,158,474, up from $742,812 in 1988. The net loss for the quarter was $931,329, down from $1,425,394 in the prior year.

During the second half of 1989, new contracts with several MSOs helped boost The Nostalgia Channel's availability to more than eight million cable households. Agreements were reached with Chambers Communications, Columbia International, Harron Communications, Heritage Communications, Multimedia Cablevision and Tele-Media, in addition to the previously announced multi-year deals with Time-Warner's American Television & Communications (ATC), United Artists Entertainment and Continental

SAN JOSE, CA (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - VMX Friday announced that it expects its revenues for the third fiscal quarter ending March 31, 1990, to be below the record level of the immediately preceding quarter.

The company also anticipates a loss for the quarter.

VMX President Pat Howard attributed this expectation to several factors. He noted a slowing in the growth of its value-added reseller (VAR) channels for mid-size call and message processing systems, and new pricing actions by major competitors that have prevented the closing of some expected sales. According to Howard, ''The markets for our products are intensely competitive.

''VMX's financial condition remains strong as does our position in our targeted market segments,'' Howard said. ''We continue to pursue a strategy of long-term leadership in the development and support of innovative information technology products and applications for our customers.

''During the past several quarters, we have increased the level of investment in product development, as well as in sales, marketing and customer support. Inherent in this strategy is the risk that revenue growth will lag in relationship to investment levels,'' Howard said.

''We are disappointed in the apparent deviation from our consistent quarter-to-quarter performance improvements over the past year and a half, and we are taking appropriate steps to address the near-term performance issues.''

Focused on providing call and message processing solutions, VMX has sold and installed nearly 4,000 systems worldwide. VMX products are distributed throughout North America and in more than 25 foreign countries through value-added systems integrators, OEMs and directly by VMX sales offices.

Headquartered in San Jose, the company has a major manufacturing, engineering and support facility in Dallas. Sales offices are located in Los Angeles, New York City, Chicago, Atlanta, Washington D.C. and London.

RENO, NEV (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Syntech International Inc. (NASDAQ:SYNE/SYNEP)(''Syntech'') Friday announced that it had entered into an agreement with International Game Technology (''IGT''), the holder of Syntech's notes in the outstanding recorded principal amount of approximately $8.1 million (the ''Notes'') and the beneficial owner of 9.8 percent of Syntech's common stock, 10 cents par value (''Common Stock''), pursuant to which IGT has agreed to cancel and discharge the Notes and all obligations of Syntech under the Notes (including accrued interest in the amount of approximately $380,000).

IGT reported in November 1989 that it had fully reserved the receivables under the Notes. The Notes were secured by 3.5 million shares of Common Stock held by Syntech as treasury shares since their repurchase by Syntech from IGT in April 1988.

Under the agreement, Syntech has paid to IGT the amount of $25,000 and has released IGT from a right-of-first offer covering 400,000 shares of Common Stock beneficially owned by IGT. By discharging all obligations under the Notes, IGT has released all interest in the 3.5 million treasury shares held as collateral for the Notes.

Syntech has, in accordance with generally accepted accounting priciples, accounted for the entire outstanding recorded principal amount of the Notes as current liabilities, as a consequence of the limitied duration of successive postponements by IGT of the operation of the financial covenants and default provisions of the Notes.

Accordingly, as a result of the cancellation of the Notes, Syntech's working capital will be increased by the entire outstanding recorded principal amount of the Notes, and all accrued interest.

Syntech International Inc., is actively engaged in the design, sale and operation of transaction processing systems, including player-activated terminals, used by government sponsored lotteries.

LAS VEGAS (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - MarCor Resorts Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:MAAR) Friday announced the appointment of a new member to its board of directors, operating results for the 10 months ended Dec. 31, 1989, and the date of its annual meeting of stockholders.

Due primarily to MarCor's decision to write off opening expenses of $2,034,986 in connection with the construction of the Rio Suite Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas, MarCor reported a loss before extraordinary credits and cumulative effect of accounting change in the amount of $93,859, compared to income for the year ended Feb. 28, 1989 of $2,409,330.

MarCor reported earnings based on a 10 month period due to MarCor's change from a February year-end to a December year-end. Accordingly, figures released today reflect only a 10 month period as compared to a full year for the previous year. After giving effect to the accounting change, net of income tax benefits, MarCor reported a net loss of $261,230, or 5 cents per share (5 cents fully diluted) for the 10 months ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared to net income of $2,557,684, or 46 cents per share (38 cents fully diluted) for the year ended Feb. 28, 1989.

MarCor management believes the decision to charge opening expenses for the Rio instead of capitalizing them will permit future financial statements to more accurately reflect the impact of Rio's operations. First quarter calender year 1990 financial statements will also include charging certain Rio opening expenses.

The Rio opened on Jan. 15, 1990, and the first quarter of 1990 will include operating results of the 34.9 percent-owned Rio for the first time. The Rio's estimated cost is approximately $90 million (consisting of land, construction and other costs).

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (MARCH 31) BUSINESS WIRE - Drill holes HA0-55, HA0-57 and HA0-61 have now been completed on the Hanson Lake project in northeastern Saskatchewan.

Hole HA0-55 drilled on section with hole HA0-57 intersected two zones of copper stringer mineralization at a vertical depth of 1,450 feet. Drill hole HA0-57 intersected 106 feet of stringer mineralization which includes a significant intersection of 20 feet grading 3.89 percent copper at the 1,970 foot level, approximately 500 feet west of previously completed drill holes.

Additionally, drill hole HA0-61 drilled 500 feet west of drill hole HA0-57 has encountered mineralization at the 2,900-foot level. As a result of hole HA0-57 and HA0-61, Trimin estimates that the Hanson Lake deposit tonnage could possibly increase by 30-45 percent if the mineralization proves continuous with Lens 2 as it has in the past.

Drilling to date has increased the downplunge length of Lens 2 from a previously reported 3,900 feet to a length of 5,200 feet, and has intersected mineralization to the 2,950-foot level. Further drill results will be released when made available from Cameco, the operator.

WALNUT CREEK, CA (MARCH 31) BUSINESS WIRE - Central Banking System Inc. announced Friday its 1989, full-year results.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, CBSI sustained a net loss of $29.7

million, or $6.95 per share, as compared with a net loss for 1988 (as restated) of $42.2 million, or $9.87 per share. For the fourth quarter of 1989, the company lost $1.8 million, or 42 cents per share, as contrasted to a loss of $24.9 million, or $5.83 per share, for the like period in 1988.

Commenting on future operations, Young stated: ''The prospects for improved future earnings are bright. DENVER (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Due principally to write downs U.S. Gold

Corp. (NASDAQ:USGL) announced Friday a net loss of $11.577 million for 1989, or 24 cents per share, on revenues of $15.953 million.

This compares with a net income of $1.628 million, or 4 cents per share, on revenues of $9.771 million for 1988.

The fourth quarter net loss for 1989 was $12.956 million, or 27 cents per share, on revenues of $3.63 million. This compares with 1988 fourth quarter earnings of $.566 million, or 1 cent per share, on revenues of $4.09 million.

During 1989 U.S. Gold's production increased to 33,528 ounces of gold of which 31,775 ounces contributed to revenues at an average sales price of $456 per ounce and 1,753 ounces were treated as project cost recovery at the Tonkin Springs project. This compares to 20,008 ounces at $457 per ounce in 1988.

Contributing significantly to the loss was a write-off of $7.7 million primarily associated with start-up delays at the Tonkin Springs mill and write-downs on other mining properties, exploration costs and other investments totaling $5.3 million.

There were also higher operating costs during 1989 at both the White Pine and Dee mines compared with 1988. These write-downs were partially offset by $2 million in tax benefits associated with 1989 results.

The final construction cost of the Tonkin Springs mill, which uses state-of-the-art bio-oxidation technology pioneered by U.S. Gold, will be $31 million.

''Initial gold produced from this important new technology is expected soon with full-scale production anticipated by the end of the second quarter 1990,'' said William Reid, president of U.S. Gold. ''The bio-oxidation process is expected to make recovery of refractory sulfide gold deposits more economically and environmentally feasible.''

The company is continuing to explore ways to strengthen its financial position. This could include the sale of additional assets, joint venturing of properties, equity financing and restructuring of existing debt. Any new financing transactions will not likely be completed until the Tonkin Springs mill is continuously producing gold at an economic cost.

U.S. Gold Corp. is a Denver-based gold mining company wih producing mines in Nevada and gold properties in Nevada and Colorado. The company is listed on the NASDAQ National Market.

BERKELEY, CA (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Thoratec Laboratories Friday announced financial results for 1989.

The company reported a net income of $5,034,000 (31 cents per share, fully diluted), due to $4,992,000 of extraordinary gains from previously announced debt restructurings. In 1988 Thoratec's net loss was $658,000 (20 cents per share) after a $680,000 extraordinary gain from debt restructuring.

The income (loss) before extraordinary gains for these years were $42,000 (4 cents per share) in 1989 and $(1,338,000) (31 cents per share) in 1988. All per share amounts reflect the deduction of accrued but unpaid preferred dividends.

In addition to the effect of the debt restructurings, 1989's results were affected by the sale, for $1.2 million, of most of Thoratec's proprietary polymer technology to a large German chemical company. Thoratec has retained an exclusive, royalty-free license for certain medical applications of this technology.

This sale also resulted in lower product sales, lower contract revenue, and lower total costs and expenses in 1989 compared to 1988. Interest expense in 1989 was 41 percent lower than 1988 due to the debt restructurings.

COLORADO SPRINGS, CO (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Brown Disc Products Co. Inc., a publicly held company, has signed a $1 million credit agreement with Central Banks of Colorado.

The agreement will provide working capital for equipment acquisition, and letters of credit for the computer diskette manufacturer, which has an average annual growth rate of 22 percent to 26 percent.

BDP's Chief Executive Officer Gene Rider explains: "We have charted and achieved a very disciplined growth path for Brown Disc. Our increasing customer base and sales volume demands additional cash, which will enable us to continue this progressive growth pattern."

Central Bank Denver's assistant vice president of corporate banking, Ton Lindholm, agrees. "Although it may be unusual in today's banking environment for a major financial institution to back a relatively new company in the high-tech industry, Brown Disc is an exceptionally well-managed firm, which we believe will continue to grow quickly, but soundly, through prudent and thorough planning."

Central Banks' confidence in Brown Disc is based on Rider's expertise in "turning companies around" through aggressive resolution of general management problems in manufacturing productivity, quality assurance, product development, marketing and distribution. Since Rider assumed leadership of BDP in 1987, the company's customer base has grown from 200 to more than 2,500.

Prior to joining Brown Disc, Rider guided successful turnarounds for divisions of major computer companies, A.B. Dick, Control Data, and International Computers Ltd. "Today, Rider has created in Brown Disc a company that has proven it can compete with firms like 3M and Verbatim," said Lindholm. The quality of Brown Disc's product is backed by the only "2-for-1" lifetime warranty in the computer diskette industry.

Central Banks also points to the solid distribution network established for Brown Disc products as a reason for its confidence in the company. Most recently, Brown Disc signed an agreement with Management International Corp. to expand international marketing efforts for Brown Disc products, particularly in Europe and the Far East.

Lindholm said: "Central Banks is looking for opportunities to invest in companies that have not only proven they can make it, but will contribute to Colorado's continuing economic recovery. Brown Disc is just such a company."

Founded in 1981, BDP is traded over the counter on the pink sheets. Brown Disc-packaged products include the full line of 3.5 inch, 5.25 inch and 8.0 inch floppy disks. BDP also manufactures the Scholar Brand, developed exclusively for the institutional market, and a broad spectrum of specialized packaging and private label product mixes.

MENLO PARK, CA (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Liposome Technology Inc. (NASDAQ:LTIZ)(LTI) Friday announced financial results for its fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

In 1989, LTI changed its fiscal year end to Dec. 31 from Sept. 30, effective Dec. 31, 1988. Year-end comparisons are provided for the years ended Dec. 31, 1989 and Sept. 30, 1988. Quarterly comparisons are provided for the three-month periods ended Dec. 31, 1989 and 1988, respectively.

The company reported a net loss for the fourth quarter of $1,745,000 (25 cents per share) compared to a loss of $1,166,000 (17 cents per share) in the fourth quarter of the prior year. Research and development expenditures were $1,581,000, a decrease of approximately 8 percent from the like period in 1988. This decrease is due to reductions in the company's workforce during 1989.

Overall R&D expenditures for LTI's preclinical and clinical activities increased approximately 180 percent for the quarter, as compared to the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988.

For 1989, LTI reported a net loss of $7,287,000 ($1.04 per share). This compares to a net loss of $3,297,000 (48 cents per share) for 1988. Total revenues for 1989 were $2,107,000 as compared to $4,914,000 for 1988. The increase in losses for the year is attributable to the decrease in research revenues from corporate partners, facilities expansion and capital expenditures.

The company ended the year with $8,457,000 in cash, cash equivalents and short term investments.

LTI achieved a strategic objective in January, 1990 when it raised $3,000,000 in a private placement of 2,240,000 shares of common stock at $1.25 per share to David Blech, an investor in biotechnology companies. Mr. Blech also paid $200,000 for a two-year warrant to purchase an additional 800,000 shares at $3.50 per share. At Feb. 28, LTI had $10,269,000 in cash, cash equivalents and short term investments.

Since the private placement transaction, Mr. Blech has purchased 177,230 additional shares of LTI common stock in open market transactions at prices per share ranging from $1.583 to $2.344.

The company currently is exploring other financing options, including the sale of equity, new corporate arrangements and other funding sources, as required to commercialize its priority products, develop a line of Stealth liposome oncology products and adapt Stealth technology to the delivery of therapeutic proteins and peptides.

Located in Menlo Park, LTI is developing liposome-based drug delivery technology designed to improve the safety, efficacy, and convenience of pharmaceutical products.

ROCHESTER, NY (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Hampshire Instruments Inc., and AT&T Bell Laboratories, Murray Hill, N.J., announced Friday the delivery of a Hampshire Instruments' Series 10P x-ray system to Bell Laboratories.

The delivery is part of AT&T's ongoing collaborative work with Hampshire Instruments.

The Series 10P X-ray system is based on the company's Series 5000P X-Ray Stepper systems and includes Hampshire Instruments' patented laser-based ''soft'' x-ray source.

Compact in size, the Series 10P x-ray system contains a powerful glass slab laser that is used to create x-rays in the spectrum from 8-22 angstroms. It has a high average power and a high repetition rate, making it ideal for lithography applications in the submicron range. Other components of the Series 10P include the Series 5000P exposure column, electronics and vibration isolation systems.

According to Dr. Larry Thompson, department head of Lithographic Materials and Chemical Engineering Research at AT&T Bell Laboratories' Murray Hill, N.J. facility, AT&T's plans for the Series 10P include the development of proprietary x-ray optics and x-ray resists. Dr. Thompson stated, ''AT&T's interest in x-ray lithography technology is well documented. We are taking an active roel in shaping the course and speed of x-ray lithography development to meet our own requirements.''

X-ray lithography has the advantage of high resolution, wide processing latitude, and a large depth of field. A growing number of semiconductor manufacturers in the United States and abroad are voicing support of x-ray lithography for the manufacture of high-speed, high-precision integrated circuits (ICs) in the 0.5 to 0.25 micron range and below.

In discussing the program, Dr. Moshe Lubin, Hampshire Instruments' president and chief executive officer, noted that ''a unique aspect of Hampshire's soft x-ray are their ability to expose standard single-layer photoresists with simple processing and high throughput.''

Hampshire Instruments is a privately held developer and manufacturer of x-ray lithography systems and headquarters in Rochester, N.Y. and a customer support center in Marlborough, Mass. The company is actively involved in industry and government programs to help recapture U.S. global leadership in the semiconductor industry. Hampshire is a member of SEMI/Sematech and is a prime contractor to the U.S. Government's Microelectronics and National X-Ray Lithography Programs.

WINSTON-SALEM, NC (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Integon Corp. (NASDAQ: ITGN) reported Friday that premium and related revenues, which include premiums from its property and casualty and life insurance operations, grew to $371.3 million, an increase of 5.7 percent over 1988.

''Integon's property and casualty operations had an exceptional year,'' said James R. Ridley, chairman of Integon Corp.'s board of directors and the corporation's president and chief executive officer.

''Despite a series of unusually severe natural disasters, Integon P&C continued to set performance records in 1989, with $31.2 million in operating income before realized gains and losses and federal income taxes on revenues of $253.8 million.

''Integon's life insurance operations, which include Integon Life and Georgia International, produced an operating income of $15.2 million, before realized gains and losses and federal income taxes, on revenues of $191.7 million,'' Ridley said.

''Premiums and other considerations of $100.2 million from life insurance operations, were about even with 1988, reflecting an industry-wide pattern of slower growth.''

For the year, Integon's investment income grew by 5.4 percent to $100.8 million on invested assets of $1.1 billion. However, the company recorded $22.8 million of realized losses, reflecting the permanent decline in value of certain of its investments.

During 1989, the company continued reducing the level of less than investment grade corporate debt securities. At Dec. 31, 1989, this portion of the investment portfolio represented just 7.6 percent of total assets, compared to 10.2 percent at the end of 1988. Since April 1988, the company has made no new investments in less than investment grade corporate debt securities.

Integons's 1989 before-tax income from operations reached $3.3 million on total revenues of $451 million. In 1988, the company reported a $33.4 million before-tax operating loss on total revenues of $445.9 million.

Following the provision for federal income taxes, which amounted to $11.7 million, Integon saw a net operating loss of $8.4 million 1989. As reported in August 1989, Integon has been unable to recognize certain tax benefits in 1989 because of limitations resulting from the consolidation, for tax purposes, of certain of its subsidiaries with those of its majority stockholder, Southmark Corp.

The company's financial results reflect accounting changes required by the Financial Accounting Standards Board in its Statement 97. Financial information for 1988 has been restated to provide a consistent basis for comparison.

In December 1989, Integon announced that a definitive agreement had been signed for the sale of substantially all of the company's assets to a group of investors headed by Jupiter Industries and Head Insurance Investors, L.P. The agreement is contingent upon approvals by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court overseeing the reorganization of Southmark Corp., appropriate regulatory agencies and Integon's shareholders.

Subject to Bankruptcy Court approval, Southmark has agreed to vote its shares in favor of the transaction.

Ridley said that work continues with respect to the sale and he does not foresee any problems completing the sale as comtemplated.

Integon Corp. markets a diversified line of life insurance and annuity products, specialty property and casualty insurance and private mortgage insurance in 47 states. The company has approximately $1.5 billion in assets.

MARKHAM, ONTARIO (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - SSMC Inc. (NYSE:SSM) Friday announced its financial results for Dec. 31, 1989.

Net profit from continuing operations was up to US $23.1 million compared to a loss of US$100,000 in 1988. Income, before tax and non-recurring items, was up to US $32.4 million in 1989 compared to US $6.7 million for 1988, a more than fourfold increase. Operating income for 1989 was US $55.9 million compared to US $29.3 million in 1988, almost double that of the prior year.

The above figures are exclusive of merger related and restructuring expenses of US $45.4 million and a net gain on sales of assets of US $20.6 million. Revenues for the company in 1989 were US $569.4 compared to US $535.6 in 1988, an increase of 6.3 percent.

''These strong results are reflective of growth, but more importantly, the impact of re-organization which led to increased efficiencies and resulting cost savings,'' said James H. Ting, chairman, president and chief executive officer of SSMC Inc.

Commenting on the business, Ting said that he was pleased with the progress that the operating management had made during the year especially in eliminating or disposing of non-profit making facilities. Most notable was the Monza facility in Italy. These results for the continuing operations represent the strongest ever operating performance shown by SSMC.

Ting also commented on the non-recurring items for the year. He stated that the sale of the Furniture Division and Regnis (Malaysia) would yield a total cash flow of US $75 million, of which US $30 million had already been received. The proceeds from the Furniture Division are expected to be received shortly.

The gain from the sale of assets and the resultant cash flow was used to defray merger and restructuring expenses totaling US $45.4 million.

''It is indeed heartening to note that the strong cash flow of the company provided funds for the restructuring expenses,'' said Ting. He added, ''The increased working capital also gave us the opportunity to further strengthen our balance sheet for provision against future restructuring related contingencies such as rents, termination of leases, etc.'' Ting also announced that during the year all corporate debts of SSMC were paid, when due.

After the inclusion of non-recurring items, including losses from discontinued operations of US $31.6 million, the company reported a net loss of US $33.3 million for 1989 compared to a net loss of US $15.5 million in 1988.

Commenting on 1990, Ting said, ''I look forward to another strong performance this year and the first quarter is expected to be in accordance with our expectations. With Semi-Tech's acquisition of the European Distribution network for Singer products and the major impact Semi-Tech and SINGER management has had in the turnaround of SSMC's business, I look to 1990 with assurance and confidence.''

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Armonite Medical Inc. has announced the United States introduction of the PRIMUS prostate treatment machine for the non-surgical, outpatient treatment of urinary blockage and discomfort caused by Benign Prostatic Hyperplasia, recognized as the most common male surgical procedure.

PRIMUS is cost-effective for the patient and particularly cost-effective for insurance carriers who currently reimburse over four billion dollars annually in benefits. The use of PRIMUS may cut such expenditure by 50 percent.

Clinical trials are now being performed at Massachusetts General Hospital (Boston) to assess the safety and effectiveness of the PRIMUS in the treatment of BPH. The J. Bentley Squire Urological Clinic of Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, N.Y., is looking forward to getting the FDA's IDE approval to conduct clinical trials on the PRIMUS this summer.

The PRIMUS was developed and is manufactured in Belgium by Tecnomatix. During the past twelve months, 40 PRIMUS units have been introduced and sold to urologists and hospitals in Europe and Japan with favorable results, confirming and expanding on similar results obtained by studies done over the last seven years that showed no complications and no adverse effects from the PRIMUS treatments. In fact, 75 percent of the patients treated overseas with PRIMUS improved to where they were able to avoid surgery. These findings are based on based on results from the treatment of over 1,000 patients overseas.

PRIMUS treatment is performed on an outpatient basis through the microwave heating (41-43 degrees celsius) of the affected prostate. The PRIMUS heating probe is inserted in the rectum, the natural cavity adjacent to the prostate, thereby heating the prostatic tissue from close proximity. The heating probe is water cooled to protect the rectum, and temperature readings are taken through the heating probe, indicating the temperature of the prostate itself.

Transrectal Thermal Therapy performed by the PRIMUS feels like a conventional enema, and the patient suffers none of the physical or mental inconveniences associated with surgery. Patients spend approximately seventy five minutes ''out of action'' per PRIMUS treatment, compared to a week of hospitalization when electing surgery (plus the possibility of surgical complications as well). Relief and existing catheter removal can be achieved in many cases before the full treatment schedule is completed. In those cases where the PRIMUS does not relieve the patient, surgery is still an option.

DAYTON, OH (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Philips Industries Inc. announced Friday that it will recognize pre-tax charges of from $45 to $50 million against earnings for its fiscal year ending March 31, 1990.

If the company's merger agreement with a corporation formed at the direction of Merrill Lynch Capital Partners (MLCP) is terminated, the company may recognize additional pre-tax charges of up to approximately $12 million. Management estimates that $25 million of such pre-tax charges will be tax deductible; the balance may be available to reduce income taxes to the extent of capital gains in future years.

The company announced its intention to divest Shelby Advanced Automotive Technology Inc., its subsidiary which manufactures aluminum wheels for autombiles; and Mid-West Conveyor Company Inc., and Dearborn Fabricating & Engineering Co., its subsidiaries which make and install heavy conveyors, principally for the automotive industry. About $37 million of the pre-tax charges relates to estimated losses on disposition and on operations during phase-out of these product lines.

Management of the company believes that these strategic and organizational changes will result in a stronger and more profitable company. Management expressed confidence in the company's ongoing operating units, which have performed well in the current quarter and fiscal year in relation to generally weak markets.

Philips noted that it had announced on Jan. 11, 1990, that MLCP's proposed financing sources had indicated that they would be unable to participate in the financing of the merger transaction as structured on Nov. 28, 1989. MLCP has said that it remains interested in completing the acquisition of Philips and is evaluating whether an alternative structure of the transaction could be arranged which would be acceptable to all parties.

Philips also stated that it is providing certain information to another party which has indicated possible interest in a trasaction with Philips. Philips stated that neither MLCP nor any other party has made any proposals to Philips and Philips is unable to predict whether any alternative or other transaction will be proposed.

ADA, OK (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Pre-Paid Legal Services Inc. (ASE:PPD) the oldest legal-expense plan company in North America, Friday reported financial results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

The company reported a net loss of $2.3 million in 1989, compared to a net income of $2.6 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988. The 1988 net income includes the cumulative effect, for years prior to 1988, of implementing the new accounting standard for income taxes, which resulted in an increase in net income of $1.1 million, or 10 cents per share.

According to Chief Executive Officer, Harland C. Stonecipher, the loss was largely attributable to $1.7 million in restructuring costs associated with the financing transactions.

The company will reacquire contracts associated with certain outstanding financing transactions originated in 1984, 1985 and 1986. The $2.7 million in restructured debt will be repaid over five years. Additionally, the company incurred a loss of approximately $850,000 as a provision for loss on receivables.

Total revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 were $33.8 million, down 15 percent from $39.7 million in 1988. Net loss per common share was 22 cents for 1989, compared to a net income per common share of 24 cents for 1988.

Stonecipher states: ''The year 1989 was extremely challenging. The company was able to meet those challenges and is now ready for growth and profit.''

Stonecipher said the company is experiencing an upswing in marketing through group accounts, and growth will be fueled by the introduction of a new legal-expense service via a 1-900 telephone network.

Through the recently formed subsidiary of the company, Justice 900 Inc., the service will be marketed to individuals, large groups and trade associations. Justice 900 benefits include a free ''legal check-up'' and over 100 specific legal services provided by our network of attorneys at greatly reduced rates.

ST. PETERSBURG, FL (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - The directors of Florida Federal Savings Bank have concluded that a combination of investor capital and governmental financial assistance--as well as a prompt and reasonable resolution of the student loan problem--will probably be needed for Florida Federal to comply with FIRREA capital standards in the near term.

Chief Executive Officer John W. Sapanski (who is also a director of Florida Federal) said, ''The Company will continue to pursue non-governmental alternatives for recapitalization.

''But given the large amount of capital mandated for a $4.6 billion institution, the requirement that it be raised quickly, and the lack of a student loan settlement to date, the board thinks that Florida Federal may be unable to accomplish recapitalization without some form of governmental assistance.''

In early March, the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) rejected Florida Federal's recapitalization plan because of concern over the company's inability to attract capital from investors while the student loan issue remains unresolved.

Sapanski said that the board, during its regular monthly meeting on March 27th, reviewed and discussed at length the findings and recommendations presented by the board's capital restoration committee nad consultants retained to assist with recapitalization efforts.

William Seidman, chairman of the FDIC and head of the Resolution Trust Corp., has recently announced that proposals for ''open assistance'' and ''accelerated resolution'' are under active consideration for qualifying thrifts.

Florida Federal Savings Bank is a 56-year-old institution with 88 branch and loan production offices located in Florida. Depositor accounts are insured, up to $100,000 per account, by the FDIC.

Seabock, president of First Savings Bank, FSB of Hickory (First Savings), jointly announced Friday plans by the two institutions to form a multi-thrift holding company which will own Davidson Federal and First Savings.

As part of the combination, Davidson Federal, a federal mutual savings bank, will convert to a federal stock savings bank under the name Davidson Federal Savings Bank. Shares of stock offered as a part of the conversion will be shares in the newly formed holding company.

Depositors and other members of Davidson Federal will be given first priority to buy shares in the holding company. Existing stockholders of First Savings will exchange their First Savings shares for shares in the holding company.

The board of directors of the holding company will be made up equally of representatives of Davidson Federal and First Savings. Seabock will be president and chief executive officer of the holding company, and Lopp will be the chairman of its board of directors. The holding company's name will be announced at a later date.

First Savings converted from a mutual to a stock company in January 1988. First Savings' stock is traded on the Over-The-Counter market.

The completion of the proposed transaction is subject to approval by the Office of Thrift Supervision, the membership of Davidson Federal and First Savings' stockholders.

Additionally, the completion of the transaction will be subject to the successful sale of stock associated with Davidson Federal's mutual to stock conversion. The proposed transaction is expected to take place during the fall of this year.

Trident Securities Inc., Raleigh, N.C., and J.C. Bradford & Co., Nashville have been retained to manage the stock offering portion of the transaction. According to William M. Moore Jr., president of Trident: ''The proposed transaction offers advantages to each institution. The shareholders of the holding company will benefit from the greater number of shares outstanding.

HOUSTON (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Oshman's Sporting Goods Inc. (NASDAQ:OSHM) reported sales and operating results for the fourth quarter and for the 1989 fiscal year ended Feb. 3.

Alvin N. Lubetkin, chief executive officer, reported that fourth quarter sales decreased 2 percent on a same store 13 week basis and increased 4.2 percent overall. The company's current year fourth quarter consists of 14 weeks as opposed to 13 weeks in the prior year. On a comparable 13 week basis sales decreased .7 percent.

Fourth quarter pre-tax earnings before unusual item were $4,341,000 this year compared to $10,853,000 last year, while net earnings were $3,312,000 this year (56 cents per share) versus $5,509,000 last year (93 cents per share).

Lubetkin commented that the fourth quarter was adversely affected by poor snow conditions in the western United States which contributed to lost sales, excess inventory and increased markdowns. Lubetkin further commented that margins were generally lower in the quarter due to aggressive price promotions needed to combat a much more competitive retail environment in most major market areas.

Sales for the year (53 weeks) increased 4.2 percent to $317,197,000 (2.5 percent on a 52 week basis) compared to $304,551,000 in 1988 (52 weeks). Same store sales on a comparable 52 week basis decreased 1 percent.

Earnings (loss) before change in accounting principle were a $580,000 loss this year (10 cents per share) vs. earnings last year of $18,508,000 ($3.14 per share) including the pre-tax gain on the sale of the Abercrombie & Fitch division of $20,951,000. Earnings were further impacted by large capital expenditures made during the past three years (approximately $9 million) for the new merchandising information systems and current year store remodels.

The benefits of these expenditures have been realized to some extent in our California division where the system was installed in 1988, however the substantial impact of the system will not be realized until 1990 and future years.

During the year, the company opened nine stores and closed nine stores and operated 193 stores at year end.

PORTLAND, ME (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - North East Insurance Co. (NASDAQ:NEIC) Friday announced results for the three and 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Commenting on the results, Robert G. Schatz, president, stated, ''While revenues continued to increase, the proportional increases in insurance deductions, particularly charges for loss and loss adjustment expenses, exceeded our expectations.

''Although North East produced a profit for the full year, the loss for the fourth quarter can only be viewed as a disappointment. However, since management's adjustment to ultimate loss reserves are for the most part a result of adverse trends in American Colonial's public livery (Black Car) book of business, we can take comfort that the cessation of this line of insurance previously announced in November, 1989 was prudent,'' Schatz added.

''Further,'' Schatz concluded, ''the merger with the Mega Group (NASDAQ:MGIN) is proceeding and the replacement business generated by Mega for American Colonial, anticipated to begin next quarter, is expected to produce an underwriting profit.

''Looking to the future, the new product mix of business written in conjunction with Mega will allow us to be far more accurate in our estimates of loss reserves.''

COLUMBUS, OH (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Attorney General Anthony J. Celebrezze Jr. Friday filed precedent-setting contempt of court charges with U.S. District Court Judge Arthur Spiegel against the U.S. Department of Energy and Westinghouse Materials Company of Ohio Inc., operators of the Feed Materials Production Center in Fernald, Ohio, for violations of a consent decree filed on Dec. 2, 1988.

''When we signed the consent judgement in 1988, it was the first time any state was able to obtain a major court-enforceable judgment allowing state oversight at a federal facility,'' Celebrezze said. ''The fact that we are back in court today to correct further and continuing violations is proof that an enforceable federal court order is vital to ensure compliance by the facility with the law.''

The specific violations alleged in the contempt charges include, but are not limited to:

- Opening, handling and/or storing hazardous waste containers in a manner such as to cause them to rupture or leak; - Failing to transfer hazardous waste from containers which were leaking to containers in good condition; - Failing to obtain the appropriate waste samples and analysis of approximately 16,000 drums of residual radioactive materials, 15,000 drums of thorium and 9,000 drums of uranium residues; - Failing to develop a written inspection schedule; and - Failing to maintain an appropriate containment system free of gaps and cracks.

The court documents describe violations of the decree which have occurred at the drum storage areas, underground storage tank No. 5, waste pit No. 5 and other areas used for the treatment, storage and/or disposal of hazardous waste.

Under the terms of the consent decree, the facility is required to comply with all state and federal hazardous waste laws and meet proper water and air pollution standards. The consent decree gave the state clear authority to regulate the disposal and treatment of hazardous waste mixed with radioactive particles. It also gave the state clear authority to inspect the Fernald facility site and oversee cleanup.

''Our goal in this litigation is to help ensure that the Fernald facility is a responsible, environmentally safe member of the community. Obviously that battle is not yet over,'' Celebrezze added.

VALLEY STREAM, NY (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Nationwide Cellular Service Inc. (NASDAQ:NCEL) Friday announced financial results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

For the current year, revenues increased to $72.6 million, as compared to $48.7 million in 1988. For the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, revenues increased to $22.7 million, up from $14.3 million in the fourth quarter of 1988.

The increase in revenues is attributable to the company's expansion of its subscriber base of approximately 50,100 at Dec. 31, 1989, as compared to 29,900 at Dec. 31, 1988.

The company's net loss for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 increased to $7.8 million, or $1.53 per common share, from a loss in the preceding year of $4.7 million, or $1.44 per common share.

For the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, the company's net loss was $2 million, or 32 cents per common share, as compared to a loss of $1.6 million, or 48 cents per common share in the corresponding period of 1988. The 1988 earnings per share computations have been adjusted to reflect the company's two-for-one split of its common stock effective in May 1989.

The company's net loss for the year ended 1989 also included debt conversion expense of $1.6 million incurred in connection with the exchange of its 9 percent convertible subordinated debentures into coommon stock and warrants.

Nationwide currently has over 55,000 subscribers in its various markets and plans to aggressively expand its subscriber base during 1990. Accordingly, the company expects to continue to record losses as a result of the selling and administrative costs associated with acquiring new subscribers. Once subscribers have been activated and begin using the company's services, they generate ongoing revenues in subsequent periods.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - American General Finance Inc.'s (AGFI) $58 million 'A' rated investment notes are affirmed by Fitch.

The $1.9 billion 'A+' senior debt, $312 million 'A' subordinated debt and $1.8 billion 'F-1' commercial paper of AGFI's subsidiary, American General Finance Corp. (AGFC) are also affirmed.

These ratings were reviewed in light of Torchmark Corp.'s recent unsolicited offer to acquire American General Corp. (NYSE:AGC), the large insurance and financial services holding company which is parent of American General Finance.

The principal reasons for the affirmation are restrictions on upstreaming capital from the finance subsidiary to its parent. These restrictions are designed to maintain prudent leverage at the finance company and provide protection for the creditors of AGFI and AGFC.

At the same time, Fitch recognizes that the rated entities are part of a larger and already highly leveraged corporation. This fact prompted an ongoing review of the parent's capital position prior to the Torchmark offer (in a Fitch report dated Feb. 1).

Fitch will continue to review AGFI's and AGFC's ratings as more information becomes available on Torchmark's offer, its financing and structure, and American General's response. Almost no details are currently known about the offer. In the past, hostile acquisitions in the insurance industry typically involved extended periods and a variety of tactics due to considerable regulatory hurdles.

DALLAS/FORT WORTH AIRPORT, TX (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - American Airlines announced Friday that it will begin service from Chicago to Milan and Rome on Apr. 1, 1991.

American was chosen to provide the Chicago/Milan-Rome service as part of an expanded bilateral air transport agreement between the United States and Italian governments. The airline will serve the route with 215-seat Boeing 767-300 aircraft.

Donald J. Carty, American's executive vice president-finance and planning, said the new service will expand travel and tourism between Chicago and Italy and enhance Chicago's stature as a trans-Atlantic gateway.

American expects to introduce five new European nonstop routes this summer four of them from Chicago -- to London, Munich, Duesseldorf and Glasgow -- and the fifth a Miami-London service. Both London routes are subject to U.S. government approval.

At the Chicago hub, American and its regional airline partner, American Eagle, operate about 440 flights a day to more than 100 destinations.

With the new routes, American will operate 145 weekly trans-Atlantic flights systemwide this summer, 22 percent more than last year. The carrier will serve 11 European destinations in seven countries -- the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Belgium.

American flew more than 1.5 million passengers and about 283 million ton miles of cargo in European service in 1989.

American is the largest and most financially successful airline in the Western world, operating about 2,300 daily flights with a fleet of 510 jet aircraft. In 1989, the airline carried more than 72 million passengers, flew more than 900 million ton miles of cargo, and reported net earnings of $454.8 million.

Passengers on American's Chicago-Italy flights will be treated to in-flight service that has been honored in both passenger surveys and international competitions. American has been chosen by readers of ''Executive Travel'' magazine as the outstanding trans-Atlantic airline, and its food and wine service was recently named the best in a competition among the world's finest international airlines.

SAN MATEO, CA (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - FNN Data Broadcasting Corp. Friday announced the release of FNN NewsReal, a personal computer-based news management system that delivers customized business and financial news from Dow Jones News/Retrieval.

NewsReal software opens an exciting new era in electronic news delivery because it acts as a personal news manager. Working automatically and unattended, NewsReal sorts through the day's news, and delivers only news items for companies, industries or categories the user is interested in.

Edward M. Anderson, vice president of sales and marketing at FNN Data Broadcasting, said, ''For years now, computer experts have been predicting the development of software that acts as an 'information gate-keeper,' sorting through hundreds of news stories every day and only delivering news of interest to the individual. We believe NewsReal is the first cost-effective software available in this category, anywhere in the world.''

With NewsReal, a PC, and a modem, anyone can automatically access Dow Jones news stories anytime, 24 hours a day. And NewsReal is compatible with DESQview multi- tasking software, so it will work off-screen in background. A computer user can write memos or calculate spreadsheets while off-screen NewsReal quietly collects news stories in user-selected categories.

NewsReal's mode of operation is simple and easy to understand. Suppose that you're an investor interested in the computer industry. You ask NewsReal to retrieve stories relating to the computer companies you specify, working on a set schedule, say at 7:30 am, 12:15 pm and 4:30 pm.

At these times NewsReal will automatically retrieve any breaking Dow Jones news stories on the companies you've identified, and write them on your PC's hard disk. So you will be able to read the latest news in the morning when you come to work, after lunch, and before you go home at night.

News is available from Dow Jones News/Retrieval seconds after it moves on the Dow Jones News Service (or ''Broadtape''). Stock quotes are available after a 15-minute delay during market hours.

For a fixed fee, NewsReal will automatically check Dow Jones News Service up to four times a day looking for new stories of interest. Actual connect time is charged only when a story is identified and retrieved. NewsReal will also retrieve stories from more than 55 Dow Jones News/Retrieval databases on demand.

With NewsReal it's possible to reduce your on-line access time. NewsReal only collects stories of interest, and then writes those stories with computer-speed onto your hard disk. Stories can also be retrieved after hours when on-line and phone charges are lowest.

NewsReal is also compatible with FNN Signal, a PC-based real-time quote service from FNN Data Broadcasting. The latest version of Signal, Release 2.2, instantly alerts users to late-breaking news stories of interest while market data is on-screen.

Imagine, for example, that you have Signal 2.2 running on your computer, showing current market data for several stocks and indexes. Suddenly a news alert pops up at the bottom of your screen. With a few keystrokes, you call up the news story and put it in a window on-screen. One of your favorite companies, XYZ Corp., has just been acquired. You can read the entire article -- and react, if necessary -- seconds after the story's release.

The NewsReal software is available for a suggested retail price of $179.00. Purchasers also receive five free hours of connect time to Dow Jones News/Retrieval; a waiver of the $29.95 start-up fee; a waiver of the $18.00 annual service fee for the first year; and a free subscription to Dowline, the News/Retrieval customer magazine. Interested parties may call toll free (1-800/933-9488) for more information about NewsReal.

FNN Data Broadcasting Corporation is the Number One supplier of real-time market data to the individual investor. In addition to Signal, the company offers FNN MarketWatch, the major cable-delivered PC quotation service, and FNN QuoTrek, the widely used hand-held quote monitor. FNN Data Broadcasting Corporation is a subsidiary of Financial News Network, the leader in television news for the investment community.

Dow Jones News/Retrieval was launched in 1974 to provide financial professionals with business and financial news. With the addition of more company and industry data, more than 400 business publications and other business information, Dow Jones News/Retrieval has since become the leading on-line service for corporate managers as well as financial professionals and personal investors. NewsReal and MarketWatch are service marks and Signal is a registered trademark of Financial News Network, Inc. DESQview is a registered trademark of Quarterdeck Office Systems. CINCINNATI (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Allen I. Questrom, chairman and chief executive officer, and James M. Zimmerman, president and chief operating officer of Federated Department Stores, Inc. and Allied Stores Corporation, today issued the following statement regarding the Chapter 11 filing by Federated Stores Inc., their U.S. parent holding company:

''"Because today's action by FSI has absolutely no effect whatsoever on the ongoing businesses of Federated or Allied, we want to avoid any risk of confusion or misunderstanding by assuring that the record is set straight from the outset.

''As emphasized by FSI in its own announcement: 'today's action will have absolutely no effect on Federated or Allied, or on the ability of those companies to continue meeting all of their operating, vendor and supplier, cash disbursement, payroll and other ongoing obligations in the normal course of business.'

''The department store operations of Federated and Allied remain sound and profitable. Sales are steadily improving and are now running ahead of plan. The companies' cash position is excellent.

''We are receiving merchandise shipments from 98 percent of our key vendors and our department store inventories are on par with last year at this same time.

''We have stabilized our workforce and our organizations. Our employees are receiving all of the pay and benefits to which they are entitled, and we have returned to normal operations in virtually all areas of our business and at all levels of our companies across the country.

''In short, we have made phenomenal progress in these past two months, achieving a level of success that has by far exceeded our expectations for running our businesses under the protection of Chapter 11.

''Today's Chapter 11 filing by FSI changes or affects none of this, nor does it have any potential for doing so in the future. It is a procedural move by the holding company, initiated at this time as a preliminary step in the Chapter 11 reorganization of Federated and Allied. Beyond that single effect, the FSI action is meaningless to Federated and Allied.''

WORCESTER, MA (MARCH 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Norton Co. (NYSE:NRT) Friday filed suit in Federal Court in Boston seeking to enjoin BTR's tender offer for Norton and BTR's proxy solicitation.

Norton charged that BTR has violated the federal securities laws by failing to disclose, among other things, its practice and pattern of closing or moving plants and laying off workers after various acquisitions it has made in the United States, Australia, South Africa, Great Britain, and elsewhere.

Norton also alleged that BTR is violating Massachusetts law by seeking to elect directors to Norton's board who are committed to a takeover of Norton by BTR, since such a takeover would be detrimental to Norton's employees, customers, suppliers, and local communities, as well as to its shareholders.

Norton also said the new lawsuit filed today by BTR against Norton is totally without merit. As announced yesterday, Norton's board has cancelled the previously scheduled annual shareholders meeting and called a special shareholders meeting for June 26, 1990. Norton said that it would vigorously oppose the BTR lawsuit, which claims that a meeting must be held as previously scheduled.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows on March 22, 1990, president and chairman Ann T. Mittasch reported that Care Group Inc. had ceased planning to establish a pharmaceutical/infusion division. Care Group had previously intended to expend approximately 24% of the proceeds from its initial public offering, amounting to a sum of $386,000, on such a division. The unspent monies are expected to be applied to expences related to other expansion plans of Care Group, including the establishment of additional home care operations and the establishment of a new specialized pharmaceuticals operation for its care client and others.

Care Group noted two reasons for this change in its plans for operations: observed failures in the pharmaceutical/infusion field and increased competition in that field.

Care Group's principal business is to provide home health care services to patients diagnosed with AIDS and other illnesses and conditions.

NAIROBI (MARCH 30) - Japan is to extend to Kenya a loan of 4.34 billion Kenyan shillings (189 million U.S. dollars) to help finance four development projects under an agreement signed here Friday, a Japanese embassy spokesman said.

Under the agreement, signed Friday by Kenyan Vice President and Finance Minister George Saitoti and Japanese ambassador to Kenya Naohiro Kumagai, Nairobi is to receive a 58.21 million dollar loan for the improvement of the Moi International Airport in the port city of Mombasa.

Of the remainder, 42 million dollars will be for road development in the Tana River Basin, 39 million dollars for the Tana delta irrigation scheme and 49 million dollars for the East African Portland Cement plant rehabilitation.

The loans carry an interest rate of 2.5 percent and are repayable in 30 years with a 10-year grace period.

The latest loans bring Japanese assistance to Kenya since the two countries started an economic cooperation programme in 1966 to an accumulated total of 17.93 billion shillings (1.09 billion dollars).

MOSCOW (MARCH 30) - Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov has met representatives of oil and gas workers and other officials from the Tyumen region in Siberia to defuse a strike threat, the government newspaper Izvestia reported here Friday.

Tyumen accounts for up to 60 percent of oil and gas extracted in the Soviet Union - the main source of Soviet foreign earnings.

The meeting between Mr. Ryzhkov and representatives of the 700,000 workers from the Tyumen oil and gas fields took place on Wednesday to discuss working and living conditions, the paper said.

The workers had threatened to call a strike from April 1 if their appeals went unanswered, the Moscow News newspaper has reported.

Strikes in the energy sector have been outlawed by parliament in the wake of last summer's nationwide stoppage by coal miners.

The workers are particularly demanding better housing and improved supplies of foodstuffs and manufactured goods.

CANBERRA (MARCH 30) - Two major Australian financial organisations have launched a bid to merge and create a massive financial group worth 170 billion dollars (128 billion U.S.), Treasurer Paul Keating said Friday.

The ANZ Banking Group Ltd. has sought permission to merge with National Mutual Life Association of Australasia Ltd., Mr. Keating said.

Press reports indicate that the proposed deal involves the Royal Bank of Canada Ltd. pulling out of a joint banking venture with National Mutual Life, after only five years in Australia.

Mr. Keating said the proposed marriage between ANZ and National Mutual Life had not yet been approved because it raised prudential issues that had to be considered.

Media reports said the merger would involve the ANZ buying the National Mutual Royal Bank Ltd., jointly owned by National Mutual Life and Royal Bank of Canada.

According to press reports, ANZ would pay about 325 million dollars (242 million U.S.) for the Canadian bank's 50 percent stake.

Both ANZ and National Mutual Life released statements Friday that said they had held talks on "a closer association", and the future of the joint venture bank.

The Royal Bank of Canada was one of 15 foreign banks given licences to operate in Australia in 1985 following financial deregulation by the Hawke government. Bankers have predicted that some will withdraw from Australia because of sharp losses incurred last year.

Royal Bank of Canada was reported to be reluctant to expand its investment in the Asia-Pacific region and to be keen to refocus on the Canadian market.

Analysts said that if the ANZNational Mutual Life merger is approved, ANZ's rivals, Westpac Banking Corporation and National Australia Bank Ltd., will probably also seek partners.

Mr. Keating ruled out any mergers between the four major Australian banks - Westpac, National Australia Bank, the ANZ, and government-owned Commonwealth Bank.

LONDON (MARCH 30) - Britain will lift on Saturday the military exclusion zone it enforced around the Falkland Islands after the 1982 war against Argentina, the foreign office announced Friday.

The zone will cease to exist at 1600 GMT Saturday, the foreign office said.

A decision to lift the restriction around the islands in the south Atlantic was taken when officials from Britain and Argentina met in Madrid two months ago, but no date had been set.

The security of the island group will be maintained by measures drawn up by the two governments.

The exclusion zone extended for 150 nautical miles.

MONROVIA (MARCH 30) - Liberian authorities Friday imposed restrictions on reporting on the situation in Nimba county, saying ''effective immediately'' all news about a rebel incursion there must come via the Ministry of Information, state radio said.

The government warned reporters strictly to adhere to the new regulations. All news relating on the fighting had to be confirmed by the defense or information ministries.

The radio said the move followed ''inaccurate and incorrect'' reports on the situation in Nimba - in Liberia's North-East - which had created ''fear and anxiety''.

The influential independent Daily Observer Thursday and Friday carried editorials calling on the government to ''speak about what is going on in Nimba''.

LUSAKA (MARCH 30) - The African National Congress (ANC) Friday condemned the ''killings of peaceful protestors'' in the South African township of Sebokeng and called for the withdrawal of security forces from black townships.

At least 11 people were killed Monday when police opened fire on demonstrators marching on the nearby white town of Vereeniging to demand better housing and education.

ANC deputy president Nelson Mandela visited the stricken township of Sebokeng Wednesday and told one wounded victim of the shootings in hospital: "We will take this matter up in a vigorous way".

In a statement from its policy-making national executive committee here, the ANC said ''the continued occupation of black townships by the police and army is not merely an obstacle to peace (...) It is the cause of ever-escalating violence and conflict.''

It demanded the removal of troops from black townships, saying their presence was a hindrance to the peace process.

The ANC is scheduled to have a first official meeting with the South African government on April 11 to discuss ways of ''creating a climate for negotiations''. Among the ANC's demands are the release of all political prisoners and removal of all troops from black townships.

CAIRO (MARCH 30) - The latest arrests of civilians and military personnel in Sudan followed this week's link-up between opposition groups and the rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army, which both had delegations in the Egyptian capital at the same time.

The SPLA team, invited by the government to discuss how to resume peace talks with the military junta in Khartoum, told a local paper it had subscribed to the charter of a national democratic alliance drawn up last October by 11 political parties and 51 trade unions and professional associations.

The charter was specifically mentioned when the junta announced the arrests, saying its signatories were aiming to create chaos. They had failed to exploit a doctors' strike in November to achieve their ends and were now trying to win over some military men, the authorities charged.

The only detainee officially named so far is Abdel Rahman Farrah, security adviser to former prime minister Sadek el Mahdi who was ousted last June. Reports reaching here have also named former Mahdi ministers Omar Nur el Daiem and Fadlallah Burma Nasser, and onetime chief of staff Mahdi Babu Nimr.

The charter in question clearly states its intention of toppling the regime of General Omar el Beshir by mobilising resistance in the form of "a general strike, civil disobedience and a popular uprising".

The next stage would be the formation of a five-year transitional government which would restore basic freedoms and repeal the strict Islamic laws (sharia) imposed in 1983.

The charter is based largely on the Koka Dam agreement worked out in 1986 by the SPLA and various political groups after the fall of the regime of Marshal Gaafar Nimeiry.

It was confirmed and enlarged at talks in the Ethiopian capital Addis Ababa in November 1988 held between the rebels and the Democratic Unionist Party a member of the the then civilian coalition government in Khartoum, which as a whole eventually endorsed the pact after months of hesitation.

SPLA team chief Lam Akol, the personal representative of rebel commander John Garang, commented that the agreements expressed a consensus which only the fundamentalist National Islamic Front opposed. It was also the sole backer of the junta, which in turn could claim no popular legitimacy to impose its views once negotiations got under way, Mr. Akol said.

He said there was no doubt the coup was mounted last year to block peace moves to end the war being waged in the south by the SPLA to make Sudan a secular state.

Support for that view has come from Front leader Hassan el Turabi himself, in a report in the Kuwaiti paper El Qabas of claims he made at meetings in London with the Sudanese expatriate community.

He boasted that his movement "has succeeded in taking control of the army the way it did of the schools and universities". He estimated that 75 per cent of officers and soldiers belonged to the Front, "and the rest represent only a marginal force without influence".

He added that "the setback to democratic pluralism" meant that "the future of Sudan is closely joined today with the future of the Front".

Like all other leaders of political parties, which the junta banned, Mr. Turabi was jailed when the coup took place. He was freed on December 1 and placed under house arrest, but has recently been visiting Britain, Switzerland and Libya.

El Qabas said that according to Sudanese sources, the fundamentalist leader had apparently been given the task of winning support for the junta from Sudanese abroad, with the emphasis on those in Britain, the former colonial power.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) - Panamanian President Guillermo Endara will pay an official visit to the United States from April 29 to May 1 for talks with President George Bush, the White House announced Friday.

It will be Mr. Endara's first visit to Washington since he took office in the wake of the December 20 U.S. military invasion of Panama in which strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega was ousted.

Mr. Endara has complained about the slow delivery of promised U.S. aid and even went on a hunger strike to dramatize his country's needs.

Mr. Bush has requested 500 million dollars in aid to Panama but the request is still under consideration in Congress, where some lawmakers view the proposed sum as too high. A House of Representatives committee this week approved an allocation of 420 million dollars.

Guillermo Ford, one of Panama's two vice presidents, last week came to Washington to urge Congress to speed up the aid authorization process.

Documents needed for the Soviet Union's entry, prepared by the Soviet Interior Ministry, are now being analysed by the Council of Minister, said Demidov.

Interpol is an association of some 120 national police forces first set up in 1923. Its constitution strictly rules out activities of a political, military, religious or racial nature.

SEOUL (MARCH 30) - South Korea registered a 646.3 million dollar balance of payments deficit during the first two months of the year due largely to sluggish commodity exports against a sharp rise in imports, the central Bank of Korea (BOK) reported Friday.

It was the first balance of payments deficit for South Korea since March 1986, and was in sharp contrast to the surplus of 888.3 million dollars registered during the January-February period of last year.

The BOK report said the trade balance during the January-February period posted 721.8 million dollars in deficit, as exports amounted to 8,486.1 million dollars, down by three percent over the same period of last year, as against imports of 9,207.9 million dollars, a 14.3 percent rise, the BOK report added.

PARIS (MARCH 30) - French bank Banque de l'Union Europeenne has signed a 55 million franc (9.6 million dollars) export credit agreement with the Bank of China, the first such French export credit since the suppression of pro-democracy protests in Beijing in June.

The French bank said the export credit would pay for French equipment and technology in two contracts in China being carried out by the French chemical engineering firm Litwin.

The export credit "marks the resumption of French financing of business deals with China," the bank said in a statement.

BEIJING (MARCH 30) - Chinese banks are to issue five billion yuan (1.059 billion dollars) in bonds from Sunday to ease the country's domestic debt, the official China Daily said Friday.

The bonds - with terms of one to three years, and paying interest one to two percentage points above bank term deposits - will be offered to both rural and urban individuals, it said.

Proceeds will be used to service existing domestic bonds now reaching maturity, it said.

An additional two billion yuan (423 million dollars) in bonds will be issued at the same time to raise funds for domestic lending, it said.

On March 21 Finance Minister Wang Bingqian put China's state deficit for 1989 at 9.53 billion yuan (2.01 billion dollars) as he tabled a fifth red-ink budget for the current fiscal year.

It was not clear whether purchases of the upcoming bond issue will be voluntary, as Chinese workers are occasionally forced to accept bonds instead of cash in their pay packets.

Jakarta (MARCH 30) - Siemens of West Germany said here Friday it planned to set up a joint venture with the Indonesian state telecommunication equipment company Pt Inti for telephone switching production in the near future.

Bernd Reuscher, Siemens' general manager for Indonesia, said that Jakarta's new policies on foreign investment ''enables us to set up such a joint venture with Pt Inti. We are now looking toward realization of the project.''

Pt Inti and Siemens have worked together since the early 1980s when the two companies won the first digital telephone project (Std-1) to produce 1.04 million new telephone lines in Indonesia up to the end of the current five-year plan in 1994.

''By the end of this year, we will have completed about 390,000 lines. I am optimistic we will meet the 1.04 million target by the end of 1993-94,'' Setyanto said.

Pt Inti was now discussing with Siemens ways to reduce production costs so their products would be competitive, although there would be added competition from the winner of Std-2 project, Setyanto said.

Jakarta announced early in March it was seeking new bids on the 2.3 billion dollar Std-2 project from five multinational companies -Fujitsu and Nec corp. of Japan, Ericsson of Australia, At+T of the United States, and Alcatel of France.

Siemens was not included in the tender for Std-2 project because the company had won Std-1, officials said.

Pt Inti and Siemens signed a contract Thursday for the West German firm to supply telephone components worth 52 million marks.

The contract was for components for 100,000 phone lines being developed by five private firms in Jakarta, Setyanto said.

TOKYO (MARCH 30) - Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party froze debate on the controversial breakup of telecommunications giant Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corp. (NTT) Friday, delaying the decision for five years.

Friday's move, which followed protracted negotiations between the party, the Finance Ministry and the Posts and Telecommuncations Ministry, was greeted with relief in financial markets. NTT shares rose 30,000 yen (191 dollars) to 1.16 million yen (7,389 dollars), against a widespread slump in share prices.

NTT is Japan's biggest company and the world's second-biggest telecommunications concern, with consolidated sales of almost six trillion yen (38 billion dollars) and total assets of 11 trillion yen (70 billion dollars).

The latest development in the NTT saga is a defeat for the Posts and Telecommunications Ministry which has argued strongly in favour of dismantling the former government monopoly to encourage more competition with new entrants.

A government advisory panel called earlier this month for the breakup of the partly-privatised company into three separate entities responsible for local services, long-distance services and mobile-telephone activities.

The recommendation was opposed by the Finance Ministry, which still holds more than two-thirds of the company's shares, and NTT management. They argued that the plan failed to clearly address the merits of the proposed breakup and could lead to a loss on NTT's local services.

The decision to reject the recommendation was made by the ruling party's telecommunications subcomittee which instead agreed to streamline NTT's operations and review its management in 1995.

Posts and Telecommunications Minister Takashi Fukaya told reporters that NTT should nevertheless take steps to improve its services.

"NTT should create new operational divisions and take other steps to rationalize its operations while the government eases restrictions," Mr. Fukaya said. "These measures would uphold the ideal of the recommendation."

Tokyo (MARCH 30) - Trade relations between Japan and the European Community (E.C.) remain ''fundamentally unsatisfactory'' because of the continued limited access by the Community to the Japanese market, a top E.C. official said here Friday.

E.C. Foreign Relations Commissioner Frans Andriessen, in comments after talks with Premier Toshiki Kaifu and other top politicians, said that the economic advantages are unequally distributed between the two partners.

At the same time, Andriessen conceded that the E.C. would still be restricting Japanese carmakers' free access to the Community during the initial phase in setting up the Single Market by 1993.

The Single Market's final aim is a complete liberalisation of trade, Andriessen said. But during the transitional period toward achieving this a further surveillance of Japanese car deliveries would be necessary.

But Japanese cars produced in Europe would not be affected by this policy, he pledged. dpa ds 301254 mrz 90

SARATOGA SPRINGS, NY (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - A Saratoga Springs couple is betting a home equity loan that enough parents and educators are interested in old fashioned values to support a wholesome new magazine for girls.

Don and Jane Evans, a veteran editor and an elementary school librarian, have invested their savings and borrowed on their home to launch "Hopscotch," a bi-monthly magazine for girls between the ages of 6 and 12.

Hopscotch avoids subjects featured by publications geared for older girls -- dating, cosmetics, fashions and rock music -- and concentrates on traditional topics like pets, games, crafts, nature, science, books, careers and cooking.

And their efforts thus far have been successful. While paid circulation is still a shade less than 4,000, the magazine has subscribers in all 50 states, with more than 2,400 elementary schools among them.

The Evans's magazine got a giant boost when USA Today reviewed it in its "Books and Magazines" column on March 9. "In a society in which 50 percent of 12-year-old girls now sport makeup, a small magazine offers a dose of sanity," USA Today said of Hopscotch.

The nationally distributed newspaper called the magazine an "excellent publication" and recommended that it be considered by "parents disturbed by the media's tendency to turn girls barely off their tricycles into miniconsumers obsessed with cute guys and rad duds..."

Hopscotch, with six issues under its belt, was created when Jane Evans was unable to find a traditional young girls' periodical for her school library.

"We don't knock those magazines with more mature themes, but we do feel very strongly that young girls deserve a chance to be young girls for a while before they are treated as adults," she says. "Our favorite article is one that shows a girl or girls directly involved in an activity that is both unusual and worthwhile -- like 4-H'ers raising puppies that will become guide dogs for blind persons."

Hopscotch is only available through subscription. The bi-monthly is $13.50 a year and can be ordered by writing: Box 1292, Saratoga Springs, N.Y., 12866, or calling 518-587-2268.

ATHLONE, IRELAND (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Elan Corp. plc (AMEX: ELN) and the maker of Swatch (TM), Rado (TM), Omega (TM) and Longines (TM) watches have teamed together to produce the world's first computerized watch-sized transdermanl drug transport system.

Elan said the patented system, called Panoderm (TM), is capable of replacing injection and intravenous drug administration and will initially be used for transdermal delivery of peptides, narcotics and cardiovascular drugs.

The Swiss Corp. for Microelectronics and Watchmaking Industries Limited (SMH) will be the exclusive manufacturer of the watch-like Panoderm device which will utilize disposable cartridges filled with drug formulations developed by Elan, an early leader in novel drug delivery technology.

The Swiss will develop, refine and manufacture the microcircuitry and casing of the Panoderm device which will incorporate sensitive dosage controls and other electronic safety measures, Elan said today.

While the wristwatch-like device is designed for multiple long- term use, the individual drug cartridges are disposable after the programmed period of drug delivery.

Each drug cartridge will carry coded instructions specific for its active ingredient. These codes will program the Panoderm device to automatically deliver the proper dosage over pre-set times without any patient involvement. The Panoderm delivery device will accept a variety of Elan cartridges, each carrying different drugs, giving it all the hallmarks of an economical system.

The Panoderm system is expected to open up the possibility of substantially reducing or eliminating many drug administration procedures currently performed only in hospitals or doctor offices. This includes therapeutic regimens requiring multiple injections, intravenous delivery or other sophisticated and cumbersome drug administration apparatus.

Drugs that are difficult or impossible to take orally, but which lend themselves to electrically stimulated transdermal transport, are the focus of initial development, Elan said.

A future refinement of the device will address the concept of bio-feedback control of drug delivery, thereby achieving the ultimate in individualized patient therapy.

Elan Corp. plc specializes in the healthcare field of advanced reformulation and drug delivery, with emphasis on improved drug absorption and utilization. It operates research and manufacturing facilities in Athlone, Republic of Ireland; Enschede, Netherlands; Gainsville, Ga., Cambridge, Mass.; and Brea, Calif.

CONCORD, CA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Fibreboard Corp. (AMEX: FBD) announced that a jury in Beaumont, Texas in phase one of a consolidated proceeding generally referred to as the "Cimino" trial yesterday found that Fibreboard could be liable to as many as 2,500 plaintiffs for punitive damages in an amount equal to 1.5 times the compensatory damages, if any, for which Fibreboard may be found to be liable to such plaintiffs. Other co-defendants were similarly found liable for punitive damages to such plaintiffs in amounts ranging from 1.5 to 3 times such compensatory damages as may ultimately be found owing to plaintiffs by these co-defendants. It is uncertain whether awards of punitive damages against Fibreboard would be covered by insurance.

Phases two and three of this trial, which are expected to conclude before the end of 1990, will determine whether such plaintiffs have suffered an asbestos-related disease for which they should be awarded compensatory damages, and if so, whether such plaintiffs were exposed to the asbestos-containing products of Fibreboard and other co-defendants. Fibreboard sought immediate appellate review of the procedures to be utilized in trying phases two and three but the appellate court declined to review the matter at this time.

While Fibreboard believes it has meritorious defenses to many of the 2,500 individual plaintiff's claims to be tried in phases two and three, if these claims cannot be settled prior to trial, it is possible that many of these 2,500 plaintiffs will be awarded both compensatory and punitive damages against Fibreboard. Fibreboard is not presently able to determine what its exposure might be for these claims. It is possible that the combined damage awards could exceed many millions of dollars.

Fibreboard believes that numerous errors were committed in phase one of the trial and that the proposed procedures in phases two and three would be unconstitutional and violate state law. Accordingly, Fibreboard intends to seek appellate review upon the conclusion of all phases of the unconsolidated trial.

CHARLOTTE, MI (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Spartan Motors, Inc. (NASDAQ: SPAR) leading designer/builders of custom fire truck and motorhome chassis today reported record fourth-quarter and year-end revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

For the full year and the fourth quarter, 1989 revenues were $35,987,569 and $9,083,878, respectively, up from $33,513,781 and $6,292,011 for the 1988 year-end periods, according to George W. Sztykiel, president.

Net income declined for the full year, but rose significantly in the fourth quarter over the fourth quarter a year earlier. Net income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, was $1,179,697, or $.26 per share, as compared to $2,301,984 or $.50 per share in 1988. In the fourth quarter, ended Dec. 31, 1989, the company recorded net income of $269,964 or $.06 per share, up from $151,918 or $.03 per share for the year earlier fourth quarter.

According to Sztykiel, many necessary steps were taken in 1989 to improve organization and marketing strategies and expand manufacturing capabilities, which adversely impacted earnings, to ensure the company's leadership position in custom truck chassis markets as well as its continued growth.

The new plant is now running efficiently, the company's new products have been received enthusiastically, and the fourth-quarter results are proof positive that the company's strategy is working, Sztykiel said.

Furthermore, improvements have continued through the first quarter of 1990. Early indications are that revenues for the first quarter, ending March 31, 1990, will approximate $11 million, with each month having shown consecutive, significant gains, he concluded.

Spartan Motors, Inc. is the leading manufacturer of custom-designed fire truck chassis, motorhome chassis and other specialty and emergency vehicle chassis.

ROCHESTER, NY (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Curtice Burns Foods (AMEX: CBI) today announced that it expects to report a decline in earnings for its third fiscal quarter ended March 30, 1990.

Net earnings are expected to fall in the area of 50 percent below the level reached during last year's third quarter, while sales are expected to increase approximately 8 percent.

According to David J. McDonald, president and chief executive officer, "We are still subject to many of the factors which hurt our performance during the previous quarter; specifically, a poor crop year in the Northeast, high ingredient costs affecting our meat snack business, and competitive pressures which continue to dampen the profitability of our snack food business. In addition, sales of our oat bran products have declined since the controversy over the benefits of oat bran surfaced in January of this year, and selling prices of certain canned and frozen vegetables have dropped sharply.

"Fortunately, these problems are short-term in nature and are not indicative of the basic strength of the portfolio of our businesses.

"Curtice Burns will continue to capitalize on its strengths through its strategy of regional-brand market share dominance, synergistic acquisitions, and creative product line extensions."

TWINSBURG, OH (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - General Computer Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: GCCC) announced today that its claims processing business showed continued steady growth in the third quarter of fiscal 1990 as the company's pre-tax operating loss was reduced from year-earlier levels.

The company also reported a $775,000 interim financing arrangement with Sidney Dworkin, chairman of the board, to meet capital requirements to fund continuing operations.

For the three months ended Feb. 28, 1990, the pre-tax operating loss and net loss was $376,000, or 24 cents per share, on revenues of $3.0 million. In the third quarter of fiscal '89, which reflected a change in estimate of tax benefits, the company had a pre-tax operating loss of $469,000 and net loss of $875,000 or 55 cents per share. Revenues in the fiscal '89 period totaled $3.6 million.

For the first nine months of fiscal '90, the pre-tax operating loss and net loss was $1.8 million, or $1.13 per share, on revenues of $8.9 million versus a pre-tax operating loss of $2.3 million and net loss of $2.0 million, or $1.27 per share, after net tax loss benefits. Nine-month revenues in fiscal '89 totaled $8.6 million.

"Our year to date revenues are ahead of the prior year's even though during last year's third quarter we benefited from the continuing installation of a large systems order at a major drug store chain," Richard R. Pilarczyk, president and chief executive officer, said. "The current year's revenue increase reflects primarily a gain of nearly $900,000 in services revenue through the first nine months. The major contributors to the improvement in this business segment are insurance claim processing services. Total claim processing contributed $635,000 in revenues for this year's third quarter compared to $254,000 for the year-earlier quarter.

"Our on-line processing volume currently exceeds 700,000 claims per month, and the growth rate of this segment of our business is justifying the significant investment we have made in the past few years," Pilarczyk said. "As claim processing volume continues to escalate, our cost per claim is being reduced accordingly." As recently as January of 1989, General Computer processed only 30,000 claims per month.

The service volume increases reflect increased business with traditional customers as well as a significant number of new customers. The introduction of new business such as Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Ohio, which is scheduled to begin statewide implementation in April, is expected to more than offset any seasonal volume adjustments resulting from the end of the cold and flu season. To facilitate these increased volumes, General Computer has installed dedicated data communication connections to major providers and pharmacy chains and has installed new data communication equipment which enables GCC to process substantially higher claim volumes without increasing costs.

Early in the fourth quarter of fiscal '90, General Computer delivered the initial pilot systems to pharmacy chains participating in an extensive test of the innovative Med-Minder(TM) prescription refill reminder system. Drug store chains representing an aggregate 3,000 pharmacies have expressed a commitment to participate in the program.

Med-Minder is designed to help increase a patient's compliance with a prescribed health care regimen. Studies show that billions of dollars in hospital and other health expenditures result from improper patient compliance with instructions for prescribed medications. In addition to contributing to the reduction of overall health care costs, the use of Med-Minder can significantly increase a pharmacy's prescription revenues.

General Computer is a leading developer of computer systems and services for pharmacies and medical offices.

MIAMI (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Hotelecopy, Inc.'s (NASDAQ-NMS: FAXM) third quarter was marked by expansion of its U.S. Postal Service contract to introduce FaxMail service in key markets nationwide. Revenues continued to grow, but profitability was limited due to several factors the company believes are temporary.

The expanded agreement calls for an additional 209 units to be installed in post office lobbies throughout the nation, bringing the total of Hotelecopy FaxMail terminals to 263. Subsequently, the Postal Service has requested that Hotelecopy further expand the agreement by providing FaxMail service to an even greater number of post office locations.

Reversing the Trend "The business travel market, being at its lowest ebb during the Thanksgiving-New Year period, has impacted directly on the company's profitability during the quarter," said Edd Helms, chairman and president of Miami-based Hotelecopy, the world's largest public access facsimile network. "To avoid repetition of this trend," said Helms, "the company is presently expanding beyond the hotel market with outlays for installation of sophisticated credit card-operated self-service FaxMail terminals in post offices in the Northeast and at other appropriate sites throughout the nation. In concert, these factors were reflected in the company's flat third quarter margins."

Improved Profitability Foreseen The company reported net loss of $31,253, or $.02 per share for the third quarter of fiscal 1990 on revenues of $1,555,201, comparable with net loss of $67,481 or $.06 per share on revenues of $1,107,912 for the third quarter of fiscal 1989.

Net income for the nine months ended Feb. 28, 1990 totalled $364,933 or $.24 per share compared with $204,108 or $.20 per share over the same period last year. Average shares outstanding during the third quarter of fiscal 1990 were 87 percent greater than the comparable quarter one year ago. For the nine months of fiscal 1990, average shares outstanding exceed the prior comparable period by 49 percent.

"While some of the factors that influenced margins in the third quarter are expected to carry over into the fourth quarter," said Helms, "we fully expect to maintain our revenue growth for the remainder of the fiscal year and improve profitability. Expenditures for developing, marketing and servicing our products are seen as being offset by revenues generated from Hotelecopy FaxMail's Postal Service program, and, to some degree, by our company's co-marketing agreements with MCI Communications Corporation and the Postal Service."

Hotelecopy, Hoteleticket Contracts Increase Helms pointed out that the renewal rate for hotel contracts now averages 75 percent with Hotelecopy FaxMail placement in hotel sites now numbering more than 1,800 nationwide as against 1,496 for the comparable period last year. "Expansion of average revenues per machine continues to be the key to profitability," he added, "showing a respectable increase year-to-year of over 17 percent to $2,755 per machine, versus $2,358."

Hoteleticket, a Hotelecopy subsidiary, has signed more than 168 contracts with hotels to provide instantaneous airline ticketing and reservations to hotel guests. Hoteleticket also signed agreements with industry leaders including Hickory Travel Systems, Crown Plaza, Holiday Inns, and is presently negotiating to contract with a "recognized giant" in the travel arena.

Long-Term Emphasis "Hotelecopy's corporate strategy will continue to be driven by innovation and the ability to move quickly into areas of opportunity that will help us develop our business," Helms advised. "Enhancing long-term profitability as opposed to maximizing short-term results remains the cornerstone of our corporate philosophy."

The company is committed to improving production efficiency and decreasing its cost of sales in 1990 through the continuation of cost and expense reduction programs initiated in the fourth quarter of 1989."

Leeco also announced the FDA clearance and market release of a new product for the diagnosis of infectious mononucleosis. These test kits are supplied to hospital and clinical laboratories, physicians' offices and the over-the-counter market.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Hallmark Cards, Inc. announced today that it is amending the cash tender offers being made by a Hallmark subsidiary for two series of debt securities of Univision Holdings, Inc. to increase the price, but said that if the offers are not successful, Univision will file for bankruptcy.

Under the revised offers, the amount to be paid for all Univision senior subordinated discount notes due 1998 will be increased to $553 per $1,000 principal amount from $450 per $1,000 principal amount, and the amount to be paid for all Univision 13-3/8 percent subordinated debentures due 1999 will be increased to $312.25 per $1,000 principal amount plus interest accrued to Feb. 1, 1990 (for total consideration of $379 per $1,000 principal amount) from $300 per $1,000 principal amount without accrued interest. The aggregate consideration to be paid pursuant to the tender offers is approximately $131 million. The revised offers are scheduled to expire at 12:01 a.m. on Friday, April 13, 1990.

At a meeting held on March 27, 1990, the board of directors of Hallmark approved the filing by Univision of a petition under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code. This petition will be filed if the tender offers are not successful. Hallmark said Univision's attorneys have begun to prepare a plan of reorganization under Chapter 11.

Hallmark added that it has had discussions with certain bondholders and their advisors, but no agreements have been reached with any of them with respect to the terms of the offers.

Hallmark said that it and First Chicago Investment Corporation, another equity investor in Univision, have reached an agreement amending their investment agreements, thus satisfying one of the conditions of the tender offers. The effectiveness of this agreement is conditioned upon consummation of the tender offers.

Hallmark and Univision have also reached an agreement in principle with Univision's bank lending group under the bank credit agreement that, among other things, restructures the schedule of payments and increases the availability of funds to Univision. If this agreement is finalized, it will satisfy a condition of the tender offers. The effectiveness of this agreement is conditioned on consummation of the tender offers.

LONDON (MARCH 29) PR NEWSWIRE - John C. Cahill, chief executive officer of BTR plc, today stated, "The recommendation by the Norton board of directors that Norton shareholders reject ER Holdings' all cash tender offer of $75 per share is disappointing, particularly since the board reached its decision by, among other things, intentionally spurning all our repeated attempts to meet with it, management or their respective advisors to ensure that the best interests of all parties and their constituencies be served.

"Of course, we disagree with the board's posture. The board's and management's comfort in Norton's performance and future prospects would appear to be at severe odds with what has been written recently in professional investment research reports and in a stock price that in the entire history of the company has never gone above $64 per share. The Norton strategic plan, referred to by the board in the announcement of its recommendation, is ancient history and already fully known to the investment marketplace.

"Apparently the board's conduct with regard to the offer has been to spend time developing the poison pill defense against the non-existent threat of a coercive takeover, exploring ways to burden Norton with debt, alluding to possibly selling part of Norton to some as yet unidentified party and trying to ward off its accountability to shareholders by attempting to delay the company's regularly scheduled annual meeting on April 26, 1990, none of which appears to provide any benefits to employees, shareholders or any of the other constituencies the board claims to care about.

"It is clear to us that, based on the board's announcement today, its true purpose is to entrench itself and management, quite possibly at dire costs to shareholders, Norton, employees, and Worcester and in clear violation of the board's fiduciary duties. Moreover, the Norton board should provide us and the other Norton shareholders, at the very least, with whatever information it and Morgan Stanley, its advisor, used to formulate the opinion that the ER Holdings' offer is inadequate financially.

"For our part, we are proceeding forward with our efforts to ensure that Norton shareholders have the opportunity to act on ER Holdings' $75 per share all cash tender offer. We continue to urge the board and management to meet with us in a constructive manner to achieve a friendly transaction that serves the best interests of Norton, the shareholders, the employees, and the Worcester community," Cahill concluded.

HARRISBURG, PA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - A former Lackawanna County home-improvement contractor and Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr.'s Bureau of Consumer Protection have agreed on a plan for the contractor to refund more than $12,000 to consumers.

The plan is detailed in a consent petition filed today in Lackawanna County Common Pleas Court by the bureau's Scranton office.

The petition identifies the former contractor as Keith Leitner, who operated Suburban Window Co. in Clarks Summit before moving to Georgia in 1988.

Preate said a suit filed by the bureau against Leitner in November 1987 charged that the defendant accepted payments for home-repair projects that he either never finished or performed in a shoddy manner.

In a consent agreement filed in Lackawanna County Court in April 1988, Leitner promised to pay $9,020 in restitution and civil penalties. But Leitner only ever paid $1,000 of the obligation, according to a petition filed by the bureau Jan. 31.

Preate said Leitner was extradited to Pennsylvania from Georgia in January to face criminal theft charges filed by the office of Lackawanna County District Attorney Michael Barrasse. Those charges are pending.

Under the civil agreement filed today, Leitner is to pay a total of $12,389 in restitution to 10 consumers and $500 in costs to the state.

Deputy Attorney General J.P. McGowan said the amount of restitution due to consumers increased since the April 1988 agreement because the bureau became aware of additional complaints against Leitner.

Under the new agreement, payments will be made through a voluntary wage attachment arrangement with Leitner's current employer in Georgia.

"If Leitner changes jobs, he's required to establish a similar wage attachment arrangement with any new employer until the entire obligation is repaid," said McGowan, who is attorney-in-charge of the bureau's Scranton office.

CHARLOTTE, NC (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - "611" will be the new number Southern Bell customers can call for repair service beginning April 1.

The three-digit number will replace the seven-digit numbers starting with "780" the company currently uses for service repair.

"The telephone number 611 is much easier for customers to remember than a seven-digit number," said Joseph P. Lacher, North Carolina vice president. "In fact, many customers probably remember that 611 used to be the repair number."

About 10 years ago, Southern Bell began using seven-digit repair numbers in order to handle residential and business customers separately. Special account centers are now in place to coordinate repairs for large business customers' systems, so the 611 repair number is again being provided for residential and most business customers.

Until new directories are published, customers who dial the old numbers will continue to reach repair service.

Customers calling Southern Bell repair are connected to a computerized answering service that helps the company respond to requests quickly and efficiently. A computerized voice will ask a series of question that are answered by using the bottons on a touch-tone telephone. The information is sent immediately to a repair center, where it receives the same attention as if an attendant had taken the report.

"The automated repair system is easy to use," said Lacher. "It will also inform you of situations, such as a cut cable, that may be affecting your service."

Customers with rotary-dial telephones and push-button, dial-pulse phones, or those who do not wish to use the automated service, can stay on the line after dialing 611 and speak with a repair attendant.

Southern Bell's switch to 611 will take place in South Carolina and Georgia, in addition to North Carolina. Customers in Florida will get the new number later this year.

Revenues for the fourth quarter increased 34 percent to $583,774 versus $436,965 for the fourth quarter last year. Net loss for the quarter was $156,498 or $.03 per share, compared with a net loss of $269,507, or $.06 per share, for the same period of 1988.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, revenues increased 32 percent to $3,918,984 versus the $2,973,336 reported for 1988. Net income for the year was $466,605, or $.09 per share ($.08 per share fully diluted), compared with a net loss of $159,686, or $.04 per share, for the comparable 1988 period.

Gerard F. Murphy, president and chief executive officer of ATS Money Systems, Inc., stated, "ATS system sales to the banking industry were consistent throughout the year. NEW YORK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - The Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union scored a major legal victory for six former Cannon Mills employees in their lawsuit against David Murdock, the former owner of Cannon Mills, Kannapolis, N.C., it was announced today (March 30) by Jack Sheinkman, president of the union. The decision by the 9th Circuit Court made clear that the pension plan trustee is liable to the pension plan's beneficiaries. Although prohibited by the terms of the settlement from revealing its precise financial details, Jack Sheinkman said that "the Union's claims regarding the investment of pension fund assets have been sustained."

The lawsuit, begun in 1986 in U.S. District Court for the Central District of California in Los Angeles by ACTWU and the six Cannon employees, stated that the pension fund monies had been invested in companies in which Murdock had substantial interests.

David Murdock sold 80 percent of Cannon Mills' operations to Fieldcrest Mills Inc., now Fieldcrest Cannon Inc., in January 1986. Fieldcrest did not purchase the Cannon pension fund, but instead created its own retirement plan for the workers.

The settlement provides for the establishment of a comprehensive retirement center for the exclusive benefit of the 20,000 participants and beneficiaries of the Cannon Mills Retirement Trust (CMRT). The retirement center, whose establishment is subject to Department of Labor approval, will provide a full range of benefits to CMRT participants. Examples include pre-retirement counseling, post-retirement counseling, assistance in the filling out of forms for Social Security and Medicare, and assistance in the processing of such claims. The monies have been turned over to an independent trustee for initial investment and for distribution to the retirement center subject to the approval of ACTWU general counsel Ronald Rosenberg.

If Labor Department approval is not obtained, the trustee will distribute the settlement monies to the 20,000 participants based on legal formulae. According to the Settlement Agreement, establishment of the retirement center is the preferred resolution. This provision was included because cash distribution to so large a group of participants (20,000) would necessarily mean that each participant would receive a modest amount.

The defendants also agreed to pay the plaintiffs' costs and attorneys' fees. The union had invested large sums in the prosecution of the case, even though ACTWU, as such, could not receive any damages for itself.

ROCKVILLE, MD (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Sage Software, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: SGSI) today announced the Repository Explorer.

The Repository Explorer, implemented under OS/2, introduces users to relational repository concepts, technology and terminology. Users can populate, query, view and customize the repository data model as they determine the applicability of this new technology.

The Repository Explorer is a learning tool which will enable users to understand how a repository data model may be implemented using a relational database under OS/2 EE, IBM's AD/Cycle workstation environment. The Repository Explorer provides users with an opportunity to become familiar with repository data base implementation using IBM's OS/2, Presentation Manager, Database Manager and Query Manager and, as well, an opportunity to learn the process of customizing and extending a repository data model. It is a low risk way to learn how to construct actual repository based applications.

Sage's Repository Explorer features repository-based application construction using Query Manager panels, procedures and queries. Further, it provides a facility to extend the data base by adding tables representing entities or relationships and columns representing attributes. It provides physical data storage under the OS/2 Database Manager, allowing predefined and customized ad hoc queries using Query Manager.

Sage Software's commitment to IBM's AD/Cycle environment formalized its long-term strategy to build productivity tools which are complementary to IBM strategic software initiatives. Since the introduction of AD/Cycle, with the underlying Repository/MVS, Sage recognized the requirement for a "hands-on" learning tool available on the desktop to clarify repository technology and its implications on application development.

The Repository Explorer is a desktop development tool operating under IBM's OS/2 EE, version 1.2 in a workstation environment on an IBM PS/2, model 70 or 80. It requires 17MB of disk storage and Sage recommends 8MB of memory and runs as a PM application.

BALTIMORE (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Baltimore Gas & Electric (NYSE: BGE) announced today a revised restart schedule for its Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant.

Company officials said that heat-up of Unit One should begin this weekend, and that the company believes it will receive concurrence from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) to support bringing Unit One on line during the first half of April. Assuming a restart, BG&E then will shut down Unit One sometime in the second half of April for approximately 10 weeks to conduct mandatory surveillance testing. Under the plant's operating license, this testing must be conducted during that time period.

However, BG&E officials point out that the company is still evaluating the option of combining the current outage of Unit One with the surveillance outage, should there be any slippage in the present restart schedule.

The company will be assessing its performance during start-up and operation of Unit One. The utility will meet with the NRC to review the results of the performance evaluation. BG&E said it anticipates the agreement of the NRC's Region I administrator will be needed prior to start-up following the surveillance outage.

Meanwhile, Unit Two, which had been scheduled to restart sometime this summer, has been rescheduled to return to service by the end of the year. In addition to replacing the pressurizer sleeves, BG&E is conducting essentially the same maintenance and modification work on Unit Two that was required to return Unit One to service. The later date was established in order to ensure that the total scope of work at the plant is kept within manageable limits. The utility said it believes it will not be necessary to obtain the concurrence of the NRC in order to restart Unit Two.

Both units have been shut down since last spring after cracks in Unit Two's pressurizer sleeves were discovered during a refueling outage. Unit One was immediately taken out of service to check for similar cracks, but none were discovered. Additional equipment repairs and modifications were identified on Unit One, all of which have either been, or are in the process of being, completed.

DECATUR, IL (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - The cornstarch-based additive, Polyclean(TM), now being used by several plastic processors encourages biological, as well as, oxidative and photodegradation of plastic products according to the manufacturer, Archer Daniels Midland Company (NYSE: ADM).

In addition, ADM says products made using the Polyclean System can be safely used in composting operations and recycled into other plastic products.

That statement was made today by R.E. Burket, assistant to the chairman of ADM, who added, "In recent weeks, we have heard and read numerous conflicting reports about the product which we produce. There appears to be a major misconception about how the Polyclean System works. We want to assure our customers, and the consumers who buy products made with the Polyclean System, that these products will indeed degrade and that the degraded material is safe for the environment.

"Consumers should have the right to choose products based on clear, understandable labeling," said Burket, "and that's what we're encouraging." ADM welcomes the recent involvement of the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) to establish clear labeling standards and test methods for degradable plastics.

Because of the cornstarch-based additive, polyethylene will break down through the action of naturally occurring organisms, oxidation, photodegradation. Breakdown will occur whether the product is buried in a landfill, floating in water, or laying above the ground. Even in the near absence of oxygen, degradation will occur due to the catalyst system included, albeit at a slower pace. The overall degradation which can occur in as little as 18 months, produces carbon dioxide and water, and a soil-like humic material may remain after decomposition.

Burket indicated that studies conducted in the United States and Europe have proven that this technology works. In addition, ADM is now conducting studies on the Polyclean System at the State University of New York and Hazelton Laboratories to redocument these findings. Burket said "We don't want the Polyclean system unfairly criticized and lumped together with other technologies or products that don't have similar qualities and benefits."

ADM provides its customers who use the Polyclean System technology with extensive background information and technical assistance. Burket said that "the plastic processors using the Polyclean System are encouraged to work closely with ADM to make product claims that can be substantiated by technical research."

Burket acknowledged that ADM recognizes biodegradable products aren't the only answer to the solid waste problems faced today. "We support an integrated waste management system which incorporates the use of biodegradable and degradable plastics technology together with source reduction, recycling, composting, incineration, and landfilling to help alleviate this crisis," he said.

ADM is also funding continued research and development into second and third generation products which will encourage new uses for biodegradable plastics. "We are committed to the Polyclean System because we know it works and believe it makes a positive contribution toward solving the solid waste problems facing the world," Burket added.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - SmartCard International, Inc. (NASDAQ: SMRT) today announced its financial results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Cash and cash equivalents at Dec. 31, 1989 were $995,577, as compared to $355,547 at Dec. 31, 1988. At Feb. 28, 1990, cash and cash equivalents were reduced to $723,302, and working capital was $630,789. The company requires substantial additional funds to cover the cost of manufacturing, additional applications software and hardware development, increased marketing efforts, and for working capital and general corporate purposes. During 1989, the company was able to raise approximately $1.4 million in net proceeds through the sale of stock to Poly Ventures L.P. (a venture capital firm) and by a private placement utilizing Hayne, Miller and Farni Inc. as the company's placement agent. The company is currently pursuing funding alternatives that may involve additional sales of equity, joint venture partners or that may involve additional borrowings. The company has determined that it has funds that will enable it to remain in business until about October 1990. Accordingly the present viability of the company is contingent upon obtaining near-term financing.

Operating revenues for 1989 were $165,302 compared to $200,256 for the same period in 1988. The decrease in these revenues is attributable to the company's discontinuance of the UltiSmart(TM) card program. In addition, the company generated a small amount of revenues from MagnaCard product sales. The company's net loss for 1989 and 1988 was $1,045,799 and $2,389,922, respectively. The decrease in net loss is attributable to the expense cut-back program adopted by the company during 1989.

SmartCard International is a development stage company which conceives, designs, engineers and markets "smart card" systems. Smart cards are plastic cards having the approximate dimensions of a standard credit card, which are embedded with microchips, giving the card both logic and memory.

WEST CHESTER, PA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - At 30 seconds before noon (Eastern) today, QVC Network Inc. (NASDAQ: QVCN) flicked a switch and the long-awaited consolidation of the nation's two leading cable television shopping programs was completed.

At that instant, precisely on schedule, QVC stopped production of the CVN shopping program and discontinued CVN's transmission to the Galaxy III satellite orbiting 22,000 miles above the equator.

Thirty seconds later, QVC's Earth Station began beaming the QVC shopping program from that satellite to all of North America, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Simultaneously, hundreds of local cable television systems started transmitting the QVC program on cable channels that previously carried CVN.

Today's switchover transformed the QVC program into the most widely received cable shopping program -- now reaching more than 33 million cable homes plus more than 2 million satellite dish owners.

Founded in 1986, QVC Network is one of America's fastest-growing companies rapidly approaching the $1 billion mark in annual sales.

QVC acquired CVN in October 1989. Today's dramatic step was the climax of a six-month transition involving the gradual interweaving of the two televised shopping programs. The expanded QVC program will continue to be produced and transmitted live, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, presenting a wide range of consumer products.

HOUSTON (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Texaco Chemical Company, a subsidiary of Texaco Inc. (NYSE: TX), announced today that it has acquired the ethyleneamine business of Air Products and Chemicals, Inc. (NYSE: APD). The acquisition includes the technology and patents associated with Air Products' proprietary process for manufacturing ethyleneamines. No facilities or personnel were included with the transfer of business, and no purchase price was announced. Under the terms of the acquisition, Air Products will manufacture ethyleneamines for Texaco Chemical at Air Product's St. Gabriel, La., facility under a long-term custom processing arrangement.

Ethyleneamines are used in the manufacture of lubricant additives, textile treatment chemicals, as well as agricultural and surfactant products.

In commenting on the acquisition, C. Turner Lewis, vice president of specialty chemicals for Texaco Chemical, said, "The purchase of additional technology and long-term processing arrangements will allow us to provide standard grades of diethylenetriamine (DETA), triethylenetetramine (TETA), and specialty polyamines immediately. It also will give us a broader slate of ethyleneamines, allowing our customers to utilize either conventional ethyleneamines or our patented TEXLIN(TM) series of ethyleneamines."

In January 1989, Texaco Chemical announced it would more than double its output of its TEXLIN(TM) series of ethyleneamines by expanding its existing plant in Conroe, Texas. The Conroe project uses Texaco Chemical's proprietary and patented technology developed in its Austin (Texas) laboratories. The products from the Conroe project possess chemical qualities that have never before been produced on a commercial scale in the manufacture of ethyleneamines. It is expected that the new plant will begin production in the second half of 1990.

Backed by a strong raw material position and plant flexibility, Texaco Chemical intends to become a major producer of ethyleneamines. The complete product line will be produced in the two facilities at Conroe and St. Gabriel. Product samples are currently available to prospective customers.

Texaco Chemical markets ethyleneamines worldwide and is represented by affiliates and joint ventures in Western Europe, Latin America, West Africa, the Far East and Canada. Texaco Chemical representatives serve all major cities and industrial centers in the United States.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Lexington Precision Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: LEXP) announced today that it has merged its two rubber fabricating units, Stalwart Rubber Company and Elastomeric Products, Inc. The new company formed by the merger is a wholly owned subsidiary of Lexington Precision and is called Lexington Components, Inc., or LCI. Sales of LCI are projected by the company to exceed $45 million in 1990.

In conjunction with the merger, Lexington Precision announced that James

B. Bergman, former president of EPI, was elected president of LCI and that Glenn E. Heinrich, former president of Stalwart, was elected executive vice president and chief operating officer of LCI. A new LCI sales and technical service office will soon be opened in Detroit.

"Lexington Precision is committed to manufacturing top-quality parts at competitive prices. The company is also committed to providing its customers with superlative service. We believe that the merger of Stalwart and EPI, along with a substantial new investment in plant, equipment, and new technology, will help us fulfill those commitments," stated Warren Delano, Jr., president of Lexington Precision.

LCI will continue to pursue aggressively the expansion of its core automotive businesses. Currently, LCI is a leading manufacturer of silicone cable and connector seals used in primary wire harnesses. The company is also a recognized leader in the manufacture of silicone and organic rubber insulators for ignition wire harnesses.

To provide increased capacity and to improve service for automotive customers, LCI anticipates the opening of its new 52,000 square foot manufacturing facility in Warren, Ohio in June of this year. LCI plans to invest over $3.7 million in this facility during 1990.

To strengthen its existing capabilities as a manufacturer of insulators for ignition wire harnesses, LCI is presently consolidating the manufacture of its silicone and organic rubber insulators at its Jasper, Georgia plant. Over $1 million will be spent to expand and modernize the Jasper plant. Construction will soon begin on a new 3,200 square foot testing laboratory and quality control center. As a result of the consolidation at the Jasper plant, production of LCI's Burton, Ohio plant has been cut back and the plant is scheduled to close by June 1, 1990.

"Consolidating the manufacture of ignition wire insulators in Jasper, Ga. will greatly enhance LCI's competitive posture and will enable the company to focus clearly its technical and financial resources on the design and manufacture of quality insulators," stated Delano.

Lexington Precision also announced today the formation of Lexington Medical, a division of LCI, which will produce molded silicone and organic rubber components for the health care industry. Lexington Medical is presently completing the construction of a 4,800 square foot clean room at LCI's Rock Hill, S.C. plant.

"The new clean room facility will ensure that the parts which we manufacture for the medical industry meet exacting quality standards. Additionally, the clean room will have enough transfer and liquid-injection molding capacity to accommodate anticipated increased demand from both existing and prospective medical customers," stated Delano.

Extruded rubber components and lathe-cut seals will continue to be manufactured at LCI's Blue Ridge, Ga. plant, where construction is soon to begin on a new testing laboratory.

LCI's mold-making operations will remain in Rock Hill, S.C. and its rubber compounding and mixing facilities will remain in Jasper, Ga.

Lexington Precision manufactures precision metal and rubber components which are used by some of America's leading manufacturers of office equipment, computers, televisions, medical devices, industrial equipment and automobiles. Principal manufacturing facilities are located in Casa Grande, Ariz.; Blue Ridge and Jasper, Ga.; Lakewood, Manchester, Rochester and Silver springs, N.Y.; Warren, Ohio; and Rock Hill, S.C.

MIAMI (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastern Airlines today emphasized that a liquidation of the company is exceedingly remote and is clearly not in the best interest of any group involved in the bankruptcy -- particularly the unsecured creditors who would end up with virtually nothing in a liquidation.

The company said that, historically, the full creditors committee has been a constructive group. Eastern said that when negotiations with the committee are fully pursued, it is confident that reason will continue to prevail and the outcome will be one that allows Eastern to successfully emerge from bankruptcy.

Eastern said speculation by anonymous sources about a liquidation of Eastern are simply part of an irresponsible negotiation posture advocated by a small minority of the unsecured creditors committee.

The company speculated that it is being led by bitter unions who nearly destroyed Eastern a year ago and are trying to do it through vicious rumors and leaks at the early stages of confidential committee deliberations.

Eastern President and Chief Executive Officer Phil Bakes said "the latest wild rumors will have absolutely no effect on operations or our plans to add seven new daily roundtrip flights this Sunday, April 1, from Atlanta to the cities of Norfolk, New Orleans, Richmond, Greenville/Spartanburg, Sarasota, Fort Myers and Pensacola."

"Eastern is running better than ever," Bakes said. "Our domestic load factor this month is 68 percent and we're operating 99 percent of our scheduled flights." Bakes also said bookings from its new "Y-Not" first class fare program jumped 34 percent in one week.

Bakes said Eastern has a strong cash position to see it successfully through the reorganization, with current reserves of more than $800 million in cash and a supplement of $350 million when the sale of its Latin American routes is completed.

Earlier this week Eastern met with its creditors to present revised financial projections, estimating larger than anticipated losses from airline operations but nevertheless a net profit of approximately $45 million for 1990, after capital gains of $375 million. This compares with an originally-projected net profit after capital gains of $230 million in the original plan.

LIVINGSTON, NJ (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - The Howard Savings Bank (NASDAQ: HWRD) has announced that it plans to add approximately $30 million to its reserve for possible loan losses for the first quarter. After this first quarter addition, the bank's allowance for loan losses at March 31, 1990, will be approximately $112 million, compared to $84.9 million at year-end 1989.

The increase in reserves will result in an after tax loss of approximately $17 million or $1.16 per share in the first quarter. The bank anticipates that its non-performing loans will increase to approximately $410 million at the end of the first quarter, compared to $314.8 million at Dec. 31, 1989.

According to Leo J. Rogers, Jr., president of the Howard, "The bank intends to take this step because of both the continuing weakness in the region's real estate markets and a further deterioration in loans previously identified by the Bank as problem loans."

Rogers continued, "This move is one of a number of actions being undertaken by the bank to strengthen its financial position. It reflects the bank's concern that the real estate market could deteriorate further and that currently performing land and construction mortgage loans could fall into the non-performing category by year-end."

During the first quarter of 1990, the Bank has strengthened loan management through the appointment of a new executive vice president and chief credit officer. The Bank is also taking a thorough look at operational productivity and has already begun implementing cost control measures. And, the bank is continuing its strategy of enhancing its retail network by adding branches in its prime market areas and selling less profitable offices and those outside its major network.

In addition, the Bank's Board of Directors has suspended payment of quarterly dividends.

The Howard remains in compliance with all applicable capital standards. Taking account of the anticipated first quarter loss, the bank's primary capital ratio will be approximately 7 percent. Shareholders' equity will be approximately $270 million, or about $18.77 per share.

TULSA, OK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - BancOklahoma Corp. (NASDAQ: BOKC) announced today the FDIC plans to commence efforts to market its position in the company, consisting of warrants issued by BOKC and preferred stock in Bank of Oklahoma, N.A. Leonard J. Eaton, chairman and chief executive officer, said the company will cooperate fully with the FDIC in this effort.

The FDIC holds $90 million of preferred stock in Bank of Oklahoma, N.A., and warrants for 60 percent of BOKC's outstanding common stock. A waiver of the FDIC's right to convert its Bank of Oklahoma, N.A. preferred stock into essentially all of the bank's common stock will expire March 31.

Eaton said the FDIC announced last year its intention to market its interests and BancOklahoma and the FDIC have been working on a method to do so and return the company to private ownership.

"This will be the final step in plans to return Bank of Oklahoma to profitability, stability, and private ownership," Eaton said. "While no timetables have been established, I am optimistic a transaction will be consummated during the current year."

BancOklahoma Corp. earned $3.8 million in 1989, $2.2 million in the fourth quarter and, after appropriate provisions for loss reserves, expects to report profits in the first quarter, Eaton said.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Stage II Apparel Corp. (AMEX: SA) today reported financial results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Net income for the year was $3,116,000, or 73 cents per share, from $3,752,000, or 88 cents per share, on fewer shares outstanding. Average number of shares outstanding decreased to 4,276,000 in 1989 from 4,282,000 in 1988 as a result of the company's purchase of treasury stock.

Net sales were $98,977,000 for the year, up 4 percent from $95,472,000 in the comparable 1988 year.

Jack Clark, chairman of Stage II, stated: "The fourth-quarter and annual results were negatively impacted by increased levels of promotional sales in response to weakness in apparel sales at the retail level and write-downs associated with the discontinuance of certain of the company's brand names.

"However, our 1990 results will benefit from our new Billy The Kid license agreement signed in January 1990, and a full year's impact of the Beverly Hills Polo Club license signed in 1989. Our bookings remain strong and are ahead of last year's."

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals today released the following:

In an historic move, Colgate-Palmolive has become the first consumer products company to issue an annual report to is shareholders on the company's use of animals in product testing. Colgate-Palmolive's release of its 1989 Report of Laboratory Research with Animals, obtained by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) this week, comes less than six weeks before shareholders were due to vote at the annual meeting on a proposal sponsored by PETA member Suzanne Carpenter, asking the company to detail its use of animals and its efforts to implement non-animal test methods.

Gillette, Johnson & Johnson, and Bristol-Myers Squibb are among the companies that have chosen to fight such proposals, which are gathering public support, rather than disclose what is done to animals -- their own and those of their contract laboratories.

Colgate-Palmolive's report shows that the company experimented on 1,669 animals in 1989, including 57 dogs, 90 mice, 24 rabbits and 1,498 rats. According to the report, the rats, mice and rabbits were used in skin irritation, oral toxicity and metabolism tests, while the dogs were used in "oral care and teeth brushing experiments." Colgate-Palmolive's expenditures on "animal research alternatives" were down $163,000 from 1988 ($695,000 vs. $532,000 in 1989), while their use of animals increased from 1,425 animals in 1988 to 1,669 animals in 1989. Colgate- Palmolive did, however, report an 86 percent reduction in the use of animals since 1982.

PETA, as part of its "Corporate Responsibility Project," is bringing shareholder proposals in an attempt to educate shareholders and to gain information about the scope and cost of animal tests. Six of the nine companies targeted by PETA's proposals reduced their animal usage by an average of 42 percent from 1986 to 1988, according to Animal Testing and Consumer Products, a book recently published by the Washington-based Investor Responsibility Research Center (IRRC).

More than 48 million shares, representing $3 billion of stock in American Home Products, Greyhound, Avon, Bristol-Myers, Gillette, Johnson & Johnson and Schering-Plough, were voted in favor of PETA- sponsored proposals last year, with another 30 million shares voting for a similar proposal at IBM. Several of the companies' annual meetings were dominated by discussion of the proposals.

"The issue here is the shareholder's right to know, and our proposals only ask for the most basic information regarding animal use," says Rich. "The data does no good gathering dust in company file cabinets. Shareholders have the right to monitor company efforts to eliminate the use of animals but are virtually helpless to do so without company data. Some companies oppose access to this data because what they do to animals is ugly. We're determined to change that. Our goal is the elimination of all animal tests in favor of in vitro technology and the use of ingredients known to be safe."

DETROIT (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Stephen E. Ewing, president and chief operating officer for Michigan Consolidated Gas Company (MichCon), today called for the private, corporate, and governmental sectors "to work together to move toward implementing a model day-care delivery system for Detroit and Wayne County."

Ewing made remarks on "The Role of the Corporate Sector in the Future of Child Care" before the 19th annual meeting of the Child Care Coordinating Council of Detroit/Wayne County, held in Livonia, Mich.

While the attitude toward parenting as a fundamentally female role is changing, Ewing said that most corporate and governmental policies haven't kept up with changes in society. "Nearly two-thirds of tomorrow's entering work force will be women, and they will make up nearly one-half of the total labor force. As women enter the work force in ever-increasing numbers, child care will become even more important to a company's ability to compete."

Acknowledging that his company is not yet a leader in corporate child care Ewing said the responsibility for child care rests with parents, government and business. "If experience is a reasonable predictor, business supplements will be designed around government programs in much the same way that pensions are designed around Social Security," he said. Ewing said that providing child care must be tempered by the knowledge that any program instituted must be fair and applicable to all who need it.

While his own company offers a Tax Saver Program for dependent care, a work at home pilot program, and a flex-time option to help employees balance work and family demands, Ewing said MichCon will do more. He recently appointed a work/family task force to evaluate the company's current programs and policies and to look at resource and referral programs, on-site/near site centers, consortium options, and flexible or cafeteria-style benefit programs.

"In the corporate world, we know we must deal with the issue," Ewing said. He encouraged the public "to take the opportunity to raise the level of concern among legislators and organizations to the need and the benefit of child care to our society and economy."

Established in 1970, the Child Care Coordinating Council is a private, non-profit organization. Its mission is to plan, coordinate and work for the provision of quality programs and supportive services to meet the needs of children and families in Wayne County. The Council is a United Foundation Torch Drive Agency.

BRYN MAWR, PA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - In an application filed today with the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC), Philadelphia Suburban Water Co. requested authorization to increase its rates for service effective May 30, 1990.

If approved, the request would add $7.8 million to the company's annual revenue, an increase of 9.7 percent. This would raise the cost of monthly water service for the average residential customer to about $20.94, an increase of $1.78 or 9.3 percent over the rates now in effect throughout the company's major operating divisions.

The Great valley Division, however, which includes portions of East Goshen West Goshen, Westtown, West Whiteland, East Bradford, Birmingham and Thornbury townships, will see a different effect from this filing as the company begins the implementation of a multi-year plan to equalize rates throughout the total Philadelphia Suburban Water Co. system.

Water bills for the average residential customer in the Great Valley Division will increase by $2.79 per month, or 15.2 percent.

Robert A. Luksa, president and chief operating officer, said, "The increase is necessary to meet rising operating expenses and costs associated with the substantial capital improvements required throughout our 103-year-old system." Since the last rate case application was filed in April 1989, the company has invested more than $24 million in its utility plant.

He also emphasized that the additional revenue is necessary if the company is to continue to provide high quality water and the dependable service to which its customers are accustomed. Even with the proposed increase, the cost of water for the average residential customer will only be about 70 cents per day.

Philadelphia Suburban Water Co. is a subsidiary of Philadelphia Suburban Corp. (NYSE: PSC). The company serves more than 234,000 customers in portions of Delaware, Chester and Montgomery counties, north and west of Philadelphia.

TULSA, OK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - T/SF Communications Corp. (AMEX: TCM) today announced earnings for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. The company had previously announced that fourth quarter earnings would be below those for the same period in 1988.

For the year 1989, the company's net income was $325,000 on revenues of $74,273,000. This compared with net income of $2,624,000 on revenues of $57,653,000 for 1988. For the fourth quarter of 1989, the company had a loss of $41,000 on revenues of $20,522,000 compared with earnings of $497,000 on revenues of $19,036,000 for the fourth quarter of 1988.

The company reported that primary reasons for reduced earnings in 1989 were an increase in interest expense of $1,650,000 and increased depreciation and amortization of $1,550,000. From an operating standpoint the primary reasons for reduced earnings were disappointing results in the company's Shopper's Guide free distribution newspaper and commercial printing division. The setback in the Shopper division was attributed primarily to the loss of a major customer for both the paper and commercial printing divisions as well as unexpected problems in the integration of several companies within the division. Operating results form 1989 reflected improvement over 1988 in the daily newspaper division and in the information services division. Results in the trade publishing division were down in 1989 as a result of a decline in advertising sales. The decline in fourth quarter earnings was due to the same reasons as those for the year as a whole.

G. Douglas Fox, chairman and chief executive officer of T/SF Communications stated, "While we had hoped for better results in 1989, our cash flow was still strong. Earnings before interest, depreciation and taxes for 1989 were $8,489,000, compared with $8,373,000 in 1988.

"With expected recovery in our Shopper's Guide division in 1990 and a continuation of improved results for other division, we anticipate significantly better earnings this year.

T/SF Communications is a diversified publishing and information company, publishing a daily newspaper, free distribution shopper newspapers in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York with a total circulation of 1,200,000, and five trade magazines, as well as operating an information services division for the trucking and insurance industries.

TROY, MI (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Larizza Industries, Inc. (AMEX: LII), an original equipment supplier to the automotive and defense industries, today announced a net loss for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 of $29,102,000 equal to $2.11 per share, compared to net income of $1,348,000, equal to $0.10 per share, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988. Sales for the year amounted to $186,331,000, an increase of 25 percent over fiscal 1988 sales of $149,018,000.

Fourth quarter results included a net loss of $21,600,000, equal to $1.57 per share, on sales of $43,113,000 versus a net loss of $5,573,000, in the fourth quarter of 1988, equal to $0.40 per share, on sales of $44,608,000.

1989 results were adversely affected by operating losses from the company's Pulsar Plastics operation in London, Ontario, sharply higher interest costs and $16.3 million in nonrecurring charges.

The nonrecurring charges, equal to $1.18 per share, included a provision of $9.5 million related to the closing of the Pulsar operation. Pulsar experienced significant operating losses during the year, the cost of which is included in the 1989 results from operations.

The $9.5 million provision includes $1.9 million for intangibles written off, $5.3 million for assets written down to estimated net realizable value, and a reserve of $2.3 million for losses expected during the shutdown period.

An additional $1.8 million nonrecurring charge was recorded to provide for an expected loss on the sale of the company's plating operation which has plants in Peterborough and Whitby, Ontario, Canada. Larizza has a signed letter of intent for the sale of the plating operation, subject to the negotiation and execution of a definitive agreement, and the buyer's final review of the plating operation.

Other nonrecurring charges included $2.8 million for other intangibles written off and loan fees of $2.2 million related to the company's credit agreement signed in January 1989.

Interest expense also rose to $11.7 million during 1989 compared to $4.8 million during the previous year due to higher debt levels and higher interest rates.

As previously announced, Larizza has retained a financial advisor and is involved in discussions with third parties which the company believes will result in a corporate restructuring, equity infusion or other transaction. In addition, the company and its lenders are discussing a restructuring of its credit facility in conjunction with these proposed transactions.

The company reported earnings of $2,664,000 or 8 cents per share of common stock, on revenues of $75,667,000, compared with income of $120,000, or 3 cents loss per share of common stock after preferred stock dividends, on revenues of $58,920,000, for 1988. For the fourth quarter of 1989, the company reported income of $1,226,000 or 4 cents per share, on revenues of $20,988,000, compared with a loss of $350,000, or 3 cents per share, on revenues of $19,475,000, for the fourth quarter of 1988.

The primary reason for increased earnings was the gain on the sale of the company's natural gas division in July, 1989, of $4,323,000 (12 cents per share). On an operating income basis (meaning, for this purpose, income from continuing operations exclusive of the natural gas division), the company lost $1,562,000 on revenues of $75,667,000 for 1989, compared with net income of $428,000 on revenues of $58,920,000 for 1988. For the fourth quarter of 1989, the loss from continuing operations was $480,000, or 1 cent per common share, compared with a loss of $216,000, or 1 cent per share for 1988.

The company attributed the reduction in operating income to a $1,250,000 increase in interest expense, a $1,500,000 increase in depreciation and amortization and to disappointing results in the Shopper's Guide division of T/SF Communications, a 65 percent owned subsidiary of the company.

G. Douglas Fox, president of Tribune/Swab-Fox, stated, "With the successful completion of the initial public offering of T/SF Communications and the sale of our natural gas division, 1989 was a very positive transitional year. In 1989, earnings from continuing operations, before interest, depreciation and taxes, were $6,104,000, excluding the gain on the gas division sale. This compares with earnings before depreciation, interest and taxes, excluding the operations of the gas division, of $5,947,000 in 1988. This measure of performance is used by many media analysts."

"The company finished the year in the strongest financial position in its history with cash and cash equivalents of $23,895,000, an excess of current assets over current liabilities approximating $25,500,000 and stockholders' equity of $36,870,000, compared with stockholders' equity of $20,693,000 a year earlier.

PATERSON, NJ (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Broadway Financial Corporation announced today that it anticipates that its nonaccrual loans are expected to increase from $3.4 million at Dec. 31, 1989 to approximately $10.0 million as of March 31, 1990. This increase results from certain adverse developments in March 31, 1990. This increase results from certain adverse developments in March, 1990, with respect to two unrelated borrowers who owed the bank approximately $6.2 million. Such loans are secured by substantial real estate collateral.

While management has not yet determined the company's provision for possible loan losses for the first quarter of 1990, Broadway anticipates a substantial decline in earnings for the first quarter of 1990 compared to the first quarter of 1989 as a result of the increase in nonaccrual loans.

"Broadway's financial condition remains strong, and we anticipate no change in the annual dividend rate of $.48 per common share," said Peter M. Kolben, president. "Our faith in the long-term profitability of the company remains high." Broadway's capital ratios substantially exceeded all regulatory requirements at year-end 1989.

MILWAUKEE, WI (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Allis-Chalmers Corporation today reported income from continuing operations of $68,000, including investment income of $463,000, in 1989 versus a loss of $2.6 million in 1988.

Net income was $68,000 in 1989 compared with $814,000 in 1988. The 1988 amount included the loss from continuing operations of $2.6 million, a loss from discontinued operations of $400.4 million, extraordinary income of $388.1 million and an income tax benefit from recognition of capital loss carryforwards of $15.7 million.

The results from continuing operations in 1989 and as reclassified for 1988 consist primarily of the machine repair subsidiary, Houston Dynamic Service, Inc. (HDS). B.R.B. Industries, a manufacturer of molded fabric products for women's apparel which Allis-Chalmers acquired on Dec. 20, 1989, did not have material impact on 1989 operations. Discontinued operations relate to businesses that were sold in 1988 and costs associated with voluntary bankruptcy proceedings, from which Allis-Chalmers emerged on Oct. 31, 1988.

Gross margin as a percentage of sales improved to 27.2 percent in 1989 from 20.7 percent in 1988, primarily the result of price increases by HDS and a continued shift to higher margin business.

Sales increased to $3.8 million in 1989 from $3.2 million in 1988, due mainly to continued improvement in demand for HDS machine repair services in the chemical and petrochemical industries.

In the fourth quarter of 1989 there was a loss from continuing operations of $6,000, including investment income of $150,00, compared with a loss of $1.5 million in 1988. Results For 1988 also included a loss from discontinued operations of $389.9 million, extraordinary income of $388.1 million and an income tax benefit of $15.7 million, resulting in net income of $12.4 million. ST. PETERSBURG, FL (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Medcross, Inc. (NASDAQ: MDCR) a provider of healthcare and healthcare management services, reported operating results for the year end Dec. 31, 1989.

Revenues for the year end Dec. 31, 1989 increased by over 8 percent to $4,238,082 compared to 1988. The net loss decreased significantly to $482,569 or $.070 per share, versus a net loss of $1,026,694 or $.215 per share for 1988.

Robert M. Irvin, Medcross' president, said that the company's business plan for 1989 was predicated on the manufacturer's expectations that the FDA would approve gallstone lithotripsy for commercial use during 1989. A great deal of time, effort, and money was expended in marketing gallstone lithotripsy programs in several states in order to take a lead position in that market. Contrary to expectations, FDA approval was not received in 1989, causing physician interest in the company's gallstone programs to cool, at least until FDA approval is received. As a result, the anticipated closings of the company's programs in 1989 did not materialize and it was not profitable during that period.

Medcross, Inc. whose shares (MDCR) are traded on NASDAQ, provides management services to healthcare ventures and consulting services to hospitals, clinics and healthcare professionals. Medcross' businesses include mobile and fixed-based computerized tomography and gallstone lithotripsy. Medcross Securities, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary, is licensed by the NASD to market direct participation programs.

"Bill brings a wealth of practical experience in running a company that faces the kind of challenges Brite will be facing over the next few years."

According to Brannan, the company acquired the shares because its board believes the stock is attractively priced and is a better investment for the company's available funds than current alternatives.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - North American Salt Company, of Mission Kan. has acquired certain U.S. and all of the Canadian assets of Domtar Inc.'s Toronto-based Sifto Salt Division following U.S. Justice Department approval, D. George Harris, chairman of North American Salt, said. North American Salt is a new entity which comprises American Salt Company and Carey Salt Inc. The firm also markets products of Great Salt Lake Minerals & Chemicals Corp. of Salt Lake City. Chase Manhattan Bank acted as financial advisor to North American Salt in the transaction with Domtar which is headquartered in Montreal.

The Sifto Salt assets include an underground salt mine in Goderich, Ontario; evaporated salt plants in Goderich; Amherst, Nova Scotia, and Unity, Saskatchewan; the Nickell Salt Company in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, and related distribution facilities.

"The addition of Sifto will bring North American Salt's annual sales to about $200 million and gives us the size and geographic spread we need to be competitive in the North American salt market," Harris said. "We now have good product balance between evaporated and solar salts for food, water softening and other more demanding applications, as well as rock salt mining for road salt and animal feed," he added.

North American Salt is now about the size of SCM Chemicals was when Harris was named its president in late 1981. Sales and profits more than doubled in the three-and-a-half years he was responsible for the division. He had been elected president of SCM Corporation just prior to its takeover by Hanson Trust PLC in 1985. SCM Chemicals is one of the few SCM units still retained by Hanson.

Details of the organization of North American Salt will be announced in about a week, Harris said.

CLEVELAND (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - The head of the Communications Workers in the five-state midwest region today blasted AT&T as a "company that has gone out of control in search of quick profits at any cost" in the wake of an announcement that some 5,300 technical and other personnel will be dropped from the payroll in the next several months.

"We are seeing the worst example of insensitive, greedy corporate management, singularly concerned with today's bottom line and totally unconscious of the crippling long-term effects of their decisions on the company's welfare and the impact on people and communities," declared Robert Johnson, vice president of District 4 of the Communications Workers of America.

On Thursday, the company made public its plans to reorganize its Network Services unit, laying off some 5,300 technicians and other personnel nationwide and shutting down about 60 work centers in 30 cities.

Within CWA's 4th district, at least 20 percent of the personnel cuts will be in Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin.

"The union is incensed," Johnson said, "that these radical cuts chop the productive side of the company and once again ignore the bloated layers of management that have weighed this company down in the so- called 'new competitive environment,'" Johnson said. He pointed out that despite a generous early retirement program offered to corporate managers in AT&T, the ratio of productive workers to managers remains at 1.5 to 1, "an unsustainable weight for our members to carry."

"Given their track record since divestiture, it's hopeless to expect AT&T management to be concerned with human impact, but we would expect them to be smarter about their own business requirements. Once again they will be losing experienced, mature, productive and loyal people who will be snapped right up by the competition. Meanwhile, at the upper levels of management, the company will continue to be handicapped by huge overhead costs for thousands of managers who make no direct contribution to the company's bottom line."

ATLANTA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Today Atlanta Gas Light Co. (NYSE: ATG) filed proposed new rates with the Georgia Public Service Commission (PSC) that would increase annual company revenues by $33,932,000 which amounts to an increase of 3.4 percent in total company revenues.

In its filing, the company included testimony of various witnesses in support of the proposed increase. Among the reasons for the filing are the increased investment in new facilities needed to serve the growth in the company's service area, increases in the cost of raising capital, increased costs to relocate mains and facilities where new streets and highways are built or existing roads are widened, continuing inflation, and substantial increases in the cost of medical and disability insurance and workers' compensation costs.

If approved by the PSC, the increase filed today would raise the average monthly residential bill (for 80 therms) by $1.78 from the present billing of $49.73. Also, under the new rates, the discount for low income elderly customers would increase from $1.57 to $3.00 per month.

The filing includes two new tariff proposals. The first is an economic development rider, designed to attract new industry and to encourage expansion of existing plants. The second is a seasonal rate, designed primarily to encourage the use of natural gas in drying agricultural products during the summer.

While the company filed the rates to become effective on May 1, the PSC normally suspends rates for an additional five months to permit time for hearings to be conducted. If this procedure is followed, the new rates would go into effect Oct. 1.

Atlanta Gas Light Co. is the largest distributor of natural gas in the Southeast. The company, which also operates under the trade names Georgia Natural Gas Co. and Savannah Gas Co., serves about 1.1 million residential, commercial, and industrial customers in 224 Georgia communities, including metro-Atlanta, Athens, Augusta, Bruswick, Macon, Rome, Savannah, and Valdosta.

WORCESTER, MA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Norton Company (NYSE: NRT) today filed suit in Federal Court in Boston seeking to enjoin BTR's tender offer for Norton and BTR's proxy solicitation.

Norton charged that BTR has violated the federal securities laws by failing to disclose, among other things, its practice and pattern of closing or moving plants and laying off workers after various acquisitions it has made in the United States, Australia, South Africa, Great Britain, and elsewhere.

Norton also alleged that BTR is violating Massachusetts law by seeking to elect directors to Norton's Board who are committed to a takeover of Norton by BTR, since such a takeover would be detrimental to Norton's employees, customers, suppliers, and local communities, as well as to its shareholders.

Norton also said the new lawsuit filed today by BTR against Norton is totally without merit. As announced yesterday, Norton's board has canceled the previously scheduled annual shareholders meeting and called a special shareholders meeting for June 26, 1990. Norton said that it would vigorously oppose the BTR lawsuit, which claims that a meeting must be held as previously scheduled.

CAMDEN (N.J. MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Campbell Soup Co. (NYSE: CPB) announced today it is reassigning a number of accounts among its advertising agencies in an effort to link advertising compensation with sales performance.

The company announced that BBDO, New York, will be assigned "Swanson" traditional frozen prepared products, which had been handled by both Hal Riney & Partners, San Francisco, and Ogilvy & Mather, New York. BBDO will also be assigned all "Mrs. Paul's Kitchens" frozen seafood products, which had been handled by DDB/Needham, New York. BBDO will continue to handle "Campbell's Chunky" soups and "Campbell's Home Cookin'" soups.

"Campbell's Souper Combo" frozen soup and sandwich combinations will be moved from BBDO to FCB/Leber-Katz Partners, New York, which will retain the "Prego" spaghetti sauce account. FCB/Leber-Katz will pick up the "V8" vegetable juice business, which had been handled by Saatchi & Saatchi London.

Ogilvy & Mather will continue to be the agency for "Great Starts" frozen breakfasts, "Le Menu" and "Le Menu Light Style" dinners and all "Pepperidge Farm" products. Backer, Spielvogel, Bates, New York, will retain "Campbell's" condensed soups and "Campbell's Special Request" reduced sodium soups.

Paul N. Mulcahy, Campbell's vice president of advertising, said the primary reason behind the shifts was "a desire to develop and implement an agency incentive program based on sales performance."

Mulcahy said the incentive program will be outlined to the agencies in a few weeks and will go into effect on Aug. 1 -- the beginning of Campbell's 1990-91 fiscal year.

"We felt it necessary to consolidate agencies to bring spending levels to the point where an incentive program would be practical," Mulcahy said.

"It was a difficult task, because we were not at all unhappy with our previous agency lineup. It is simply the need to consolidate which, unfortunately, forced these changes."

Campbell, one of the nation's largest advertisers, plans to spend more than $150 million on advertising in the current fiscal year.

ST. LOUIS (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Y&A Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: YGRP) today reported record revenues and net earnings for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Revenues for the year increased 125 percent to $10,493,000 with net earnings of $344,000, or $.22 per share (1,485,000 shares outstanding), compared to revenues of $4,655,000 and net earnings of $198,000, or $.16 per share (1,229,000 shares outstanding), for fiscal year 1988.

Y&A Group also announced a record contract backlog of $10,400,000 at Dec. 31, 1989. ENGLEWOOD, CO (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Roadmaster Industries Inc. (NASDAQ: WHEL) today reported its audited financial results for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. The company said that both its revenues and net earnings were the highest ever in the history of the company.

Net sales for 1989 were $189,030,000 compared to $109,100,000 for 1988. Operating income was $13,149,000, up from $7,543,000 last year. Net earnings for the year were $1,238,000 or 5 cents per share compared to $861,000 or 3 cents per share a year earlier. The 1989 year end consolidated statements of earnings includes charges for depreciation and amortization of $1,578,000 and other non-cash charges of $1,038,000 for an aggregate of $2,616,000. The average common shares outstanding during the year used in the 1989 computations was 27,154,000. Total common shares outstanding at Dec. 31, 1989 was 26,227,000, reflecting 1,309,000 common shares repurchased during the year.

Commenting on the company's year end results, Henry Fong, Roadmaster Industries' president and chief executive officer indicated that both continuing operations and the company's acquisition program was progressing well.

He stated, "We are particularly pleased to see our EBITs (Earnings Before Interest and Taxes) increase from $7,543,000 to $13,149,000 for 1989, a more than 74 percent increase. This number is significant since many financial analysts and investors consider EBITs a better measure of a company's true value because earnings are frequently distorted by accounting conventions concerning depreciation, amortization and change in working capital."

MADRID, SPAIN (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Iberia Airlines has lodged a formal complaint with the Spanish Civil Aviation Authorities against American Airlines, owner of the SABRE central Reservation System (C.R.S.) on March 16, 1990.

Iberia claims that flights displays made available to travel agents in the United States by SABRE are both biased against Iberia and disciminatory. In Iberia's opinion, this violates the provisions in the Spain-U.S. bilateral air services agreement which guarantees the airline equal rights in commercial matters and access to the U.S. market. Iberia states categorically that American Airlines and all other U.S. carriers enjoy such rights in Spain.

In the case of the SAVIA/AMADEUS C.R.S. used by 1,700 travel agents in Spain, U.S. carriers receive fair and equal treatment, in accordance with the European Economic Community's regulations governing central reservation systems in Europe. On the other hand, U.S. regulations do not require C.R.S. vendors, such as SABRE, to provide clearly defined, neutral flight displays.

Iberia, in common with other European carriers has repeatedly pressed, over the past years, for fair and equal treatment in the United States. The European carriers' complaints have been supported by the European Civil Aviation Conference and the E.E.C. during discussions with the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Lately, American Airlines filed a formal complaint against Iberia with the U.S. Department of Transportation. The basis of the complaints is that Iberia has decided to terminate its participation agreement with SABRE as of June 12, 1990. American Airlines is seeking the support of the U.S. Administration to force it's principal Spanish client, Iberia, to stay within its worldwide SABRE system.

In recent months, SABRE has installed equipment in a small number of travel agents in Spain, connecting them to the C.R.S. free of charge, on the condition that the travel agents make a minimum of reservations through the system each month. Had Iberia continued as a participating carrier in SABRE, the airline would have to pay $2.10 per passenger segment booked via this system, thereby financing the development of SABRE in Spain.

Although Iberia cannot comment on the legal implications of SABRE's action in Spain, the carrier reserves the right to decide with which distribution systems it wishes to enter into agreement, based upon the requirements of the airline and the consumers it serves.

Iberia is confident that a solution can be found if negotiations are allowed to continue free from coercion, permitting the two companies to reach mutually satisfactory agreement, eliminating unfair competition and providing equal opportunities to competition in both markets.

RENO, NV (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Porsche Cars North America Inc. today announced it will recall 53,427 vehicles of its 924S and 944 model ranges to correct a defect in an engine compartment fuel hose. The voluntary recall involves 1987 through 1988 model year 924S vehicles, 1985 through 1988 model year Porsche 944 vehicles, 1987 through 1988 model 944S vehicles and 1986 through 1988 model 944 Turbo vehicles.

The engines of these vehicles are fitted with a short portion of a fuel line hose which could be subject to hardening. This hardening of the hose material could lead to leaks between the hose and its associated metal fittings. Such leaks could cause engine fires.

The company said that it is aware of 16 incidents of fires related to the fuel hose defect. There have been no reports of injuries or accidents related to the defect.

Porsche Cars North America said today that it has informed the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and Porsche dealers nationwide, of its plan to recall the vehicles. DENVER, CO (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Presidio Oil Company (AMEX: PRS.A and PRS.B) today reported total revenues of $72.3 million and a net loss of $17.5 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. After dividends and costs related to preferred and common stock, the net loss for the year was $20.4 million or $1.48 per share of Class A common stock and $1.58 per share of Class B common stock. Net cash provided by operating activities increased to $23.2 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, a 135 percent increase over the prior year.

Presidio said that the results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 reflect less than a month of operating results from its acquisition of substantially all of the oil and gas assets of Home Petroleum Corporation on Dec. 13, 1989 for $157 million. Additionally, in February 1990, Presidio completed the sale of 10 million shares of its Class A common stock at $7.50 per share and $50 million of 9 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2015, the net proceeds from which have been used to prepay approximately $120 million of bank debt.

"With the completion of the Home Acquisition and a successful public offering of common stock and convertible debentures, Presidio has substantially increased its asset base, significantly improved its balance sheet, and provided the basis for improved financial results in 1990. In this respect, during 1989 and the first quarter of 1990, Presidio increased its proved reserves from approximately 14.7 million to 20.7 million barrels of oil and from 193.4 to 241.1 billion cubic feet of gas, while at the same time increasing our stockholders' equity from $26.7 million to $115.3 million," said George P. Giard, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Presidio. He further added that, "With the completion of these transactions we anticipate very substantial increase in revenues, operating cash flow and results of operations in 1990."

Presidio said that if it can meet its production goals during 1990 of 3.4 million barrels of oil and 24.2 billion cubic feet of gas, and if oil prices average $19 per barrel and gas prices average $1.65 per thousand cubic feet for the year, it currently anticipates that its 1990 total revenues from both oil and gas production, as well as its gas gathering operations, would approximate $125 million and its operating cash flow, after $32 million of interest expense, would approximate $47 million, or about $1.60 per common share, based on the 29.9 million shares of Class A and Class B common stock anticipated to be outstanding by year-end 1990.

Presidio also said that it plans a 1990 capital budget of $40 million, of which $26 million will be expended on development drilling, $6 million on exploratory drilling, and $8 million on expansion of the company's gas gathering systems in Wyoming.

Presidio is an independent oil and gas company engaged in onshore oil and gas exploration, development and production in the continental United States, primarily in Wyoming, Texas, Louisiana, North Dakota and West Virginia and in the transportation of gas through gas gathering systems in Wyoming and West Virginia.

COLUMBUS, OH (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Danninger Medical Technology, Inc. (NASDAQ: DANN) today reported a net loss of $44,852 for the fourth quarter of 1989, or one cent per share, versus net income of $35,243, or one cent per share, for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1988. Net sales were $1,317,309 for the fourth quarter of 1989, a forty-four percent increase compared to the same period a year ago.

For the year 1989, the company reported a net loss of $62,630, or two cents per share, compared to net income of $404,736, or nine cents per share in 1988. Danninger's research and development expenditures were substantially higher in 1989 as a result of specific initiatives to expand the company's product line. In addition, 1989 results were affected by lower margins principally associated with start-up production costs of Cross Medical Products, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary.

Dr. Edward R. Funk, chairman, said, "1989 was a year of transition and investment for Danninger Medical Technology, Inc. Plans have now been implemented which will result in improved results during 1990 and beyond for both Danninger and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Cross Medical Products Inc. The company has introduced new products and will continue to expand distribution channels for its products in both domestic and international markets."

POMPANO BEACH, FL (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Agripost, Inc., announced today that Agri-Dade, Ltd., the limited partnership that has constructed and will operate the company's first solid waste disposal facility in Dade County, Fla., has received a 30-day extension of its construction loan from its construction lenders. The lenders have also agreed to accept a note in lieu of cash payment of the interest which is due for the quarter ended March 30, 1990. Agri-Dade will use the month of April to complete operating, construction, marketing and financial plans to meet the company's and the lenders' requirements.

The company has substantially completed construction on its first solid waste processing plant. The facility is presently being operated at approximately one-quarter of capacity pending completion of repairs to a damaged motor. Modifications to the post-composting portion of the processing equipment are also required before the facility can pass acceptance tests and function at full capacity on a normal schedule. The repairs to the damaged motor are expected to be completed during April. The post-composting modifications will require several months to be completed; consequently, permanent steady-state operation is not expected until the fall of 1990.

The cost of these modifications, half of which must be paid by the company and half by the general contractor, plus the additional interest and operating costs resulting from the delay in their accomplishment, means that additional funds estimated at $5 million will be needed to complete the facility. The majority of these funds are expected to come from the sale of $22 million in tax-exempt Industrial Development Revenue Bonds (IDRBs). The sale of the IDRBs has been approved by Dade County and is currently awaiting a private letter ruling from the Internal Revenue Service and negotiation of the terms of letters of credit to guarantee the bonds. The remaining amounts above the $22 million are expected to come from a combination of subordinated loans, equity contributions, and/or drawdowns against existing letters of credit which secure the present $18,835,000 construction loan.

The construction loan was originally scheduled to convert to a term loan by March 30, 1990, following passage of acceptance tests. The company believes that once arrangements for the necessary additional funds are completed, the conversion date for the construction loan, which has now been extended to April 30, 1990, will be further extended. However, there can be no assurance that satisfactory arrangements can be completed by April 30, or that the date will be extended.

Hester, Jr., who was recently named President, Chief Executive Officer, and Chairman of the Board of the company.

The announcement was made as a result of actions taken at the Board of Directors meeting last week, the first meeting since a takeover was completed earlier this year.

"A shareholder group lead by myself and Raymond A. Connelly, just completed a rather lengthy, yet successful proxy contest," said Hester. "Now we can proceed with the rebuilding and strengthening of the company. We are looking forward to realizing the potential we have for growing Appalachian Oil and Gas."

"Our initial focus will be improving our gas contract and marketing arrangements, as well as our field operations," said Hester. "That should allow us to improve our near-term cash situtation. As that is accomplished, we can begin to focus on some longer range strategies most important of which will be to replace the company's depleted oil and gas reserves."

The new officers of the company include Hester, as CEO and President; and Arthur L. Freed, who was re-elected as Secretary/Treasurer of the firm. Hester is also CEO of Hester Exploration and Development, Inc., in Atlanta. Hester Exploration is an operating and production company with interests in approximately 200 wells in five states. Freed has been Secretary/Treasurer of Appalachian Oil and Gas since 1982.

The new Directors for the company also include Hester, who has been selected as Chairman; Raymond A. PHILADELPHIA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Hopper Soliday Corporation (NYSE: HS), a financial services holding company, today reported a net loss for 1989 on revenues that more than doubled over the previous year's revenues.

Revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, totaled $37,821,034 compared with revenues of $15,254,457 for 1988. The net loss for 1989 was $8,267,872, or $4.12 per share, versus a net loss for 1988 of $10,362,569, or $5.17 per share.

For 1989, $1,996,000 of the loss results from provisions taken for when the corporation's securities brokerage unit ceases its self- clearing operations, and $2,414,000 was a further writedown of goodwill. The remaining loss of $3,857,812 resulted from higher expenses incurred from inefficient clearing operations, increased carrying costs to support operations, and the longer-than-expected time required to consolidate functional responsibilities of the brokerage units.

James D. Lowry, chairman and chief executive officer, said the conversion to a fully disclosed clearing operation should be completed in April 1990. "The conversion, when complete, will result in a significant amount of the firm's costs becoming variable and is a major part of the corporation's expense-reduction, revenue-enhancement plan," he explained.

The 1989 loss was reduced by $98,687, or $.05 per share, by a profit on the early extinguishment of a portion of debt held by former owners of the company's Hopper Soliday & Co. brokerage unit.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - McDonnell Douglas Space Systems Co. through its wholly owned subsidiary, McDonnell Douglas Commercial Delta Inc., will play a significant role in bringing improved communication to Indonesia's 13,677 islands on April 9. McDonnell Douglas' Delta II expendable launch vehicle, scheduled for a 6:29 p.m. EDT liftoff from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, Fla., will deliver the Palapa B-2R communications satellite to geostationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator.

The launch window is from 6:29 p.m. - 9:34 p.m. with a total of two hours and 14 minutes available to launch.

Palapa B-2R will join two Palapa satellites already in orbit, electronically linking the people of Indonesia with their island neighbors through high-speed data relay as well as telephone and television signals.

The word "Palapa" connotes Indonesian national unity, and the satellites have proven to be an economical and efficient way to hurdle the country's geographic barriers including impassable mountain ranges and vast areas of water.

The satellites will also be used for internal communications services within the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore and Papua New Guinea. NASA originally launched the satellite on board the eleventh Space Shuttle flight on Feb. 3, 1984, but it failed to reach proper orbit. Later that year a space shuttle crew recovered the satellite and returned it to earth.

Designed and built by Hughes Aircraft Co., the satellite is one of the company's HS-376 series. When fully deployed it will measure 22 ft. 10 in., making it twice as large and four times as powerful than earlier Palapa A versions.

The Palapa B-2R is the fourth Palapa satellite to be launched by McDonnell

Douglas and marks the 194th launch of McDonnell Douglas Delta rocket. It is also the third commercial launch for the company.

EDISON, NJ (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - Midlantic Corporation (NASDAQ: MIDL) announced today that it and seven of its directors including Robert Van Buren, chairman, and Roy T. Peraino, president, were named as defendants in a lawsuit filed on or about March 27, 1990, in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The suit is styled as a putative class action and in part as a derivative suit on behalf of Midlantic. The suit claims, among other things, that Midlantic failed to make material disclosures to its shareholders and the public concerning the financial condition of the company in violation of the federal securities laws. It also alleges that the individual defendants breached their fiduciary duty to Midlantic in violation of the common law of New Jersey through, among other things, their participation in the recent adoption by Midlantic of a shareholder rights plan.

The plaintiffs seek unspecified but allegedly substantial damages, a declaration of the actions to be taken at Midlantic's 1990 annual meeting of shareholders to be of no legal effect and a declaration that the shareholder rights plan is null and void.

As to the claim purported to have been brought derivatively on behalf of Midlantic, the company intends to evaluate the allegations made and to employ its best business judgment as to whether it is in the best interest of the company and its shareholders to continue the pursuit of the alleged derivative claim. As for the other claims asserted in the lawsuit, the defendants intend to defend these matters vigorously.

Midlantic Corporation, with $23.7 billion in assets at Dec. 31, 1989, is an interstate bank holding company headquartered in Edison.

ST. LOUIS (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - A system of flexible, interactive spaces designed by the St. Louis office of Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum Inc. (HOK), will expand St. Louis' Cervantes Convention Center making it the nation's second largest with contiguous exhibit space on a single floor.

The plan includes a multi-functional sports stadium complex designed by the HOK Sports Facilities Group for St. Louis NFL Partnership, a private group seeking to acquire a football team. The stadium has been designed for use as an exhibit space when not occupied by sports events.

In addition to its actual floor space, the stadium building will offer several other functions to the convention center. The stadium's skyboxes, on the club level overlooking the field, can be used as show manager suites during conventions. The club level, usually placed on a higher level in most stadiums, not only creates a more intimate relationship with the players, but also is directly connected to the adjacent convention center's second level.

Circulation within the club level has been designed much like a shopping center mall. Instead of the usual hall of endless doors, there will be a festival-like Main Street atmosphere in which corporate sponsors can create their own environment, both internally and for the mall.

DALLAS (MARCH 30) PR NEWSWIRE - BancTEXAS Group Inc. (NYSE: BTX) today announced its financial results for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989. The company's results for the year include previously announced losses as well as adjustments for two events which have occurred subsequent to the fiscal year end but have an effect on the 1989 financial statements, the disposition of BancTEXAS Dallas N.A. by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the entry of a judgment against BancTEXAS Group Inc. by a Dallas court.

The failure of BancTEXAS Dallas and the FDIC's transfer of its assets and liabilities are reflected, in accordance with applicable accounting principles, in BancTEXAS Group's financial statements as if those events had occurred prior to Dec. 31, 1989. BancTEXAS Group also recognized in the fourth quarter of 1989 a loss of approximately $2.8 million as a result of a judgment rendered on March 16, 1990 in favor of Bear, Stearns & Co., in a lawsuit which has been pending since 1987.

Including the effects of the foregoing matters, BancTEXAS Group reported a net loss for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, of $49 million, or $2.91 per share, compared with a loss of $30 million, or $1.76 per share, in 1988.

BancTEXAS Group operates two subsidiary banks, BancTEXAS Houston N.A. and BancTEXAS McKinney N.A. Neither the loss of BancTEXAS Dallas nor the company's previously announced losses have caused any disruption of the service to these two banks' customers, and the deposits at the two banks continue to be insured to the full extent permitted by FDIC regulations.

BancTEXAS Group's independent accounting firm, Deloitte & Touche, did not express an opinion on the company's 1989 financial statements, due to their inability to determine the extent to which the company's financial statements may be affected by various regulatory, operating and legal conditions previously disclosed by the company.

FORT WORTH, TX (MARCH 30) UPI - A house fire apparently sparked by two young cousins playing with a cigarette lighter, killed the children and critically burned a 4-month-old relative Thursday, authorities said.

The bodies of Jessie Davila Jr., 3, and Erica Mata, his 2-year-old cousin, were found in the closet of a back bedroom of the South Fort Worth home, Lt. Kent Worley, a fire department spokesman, said.

Firefighters found the Davila on a shelf about three feet off the ground, Worley said. A cigarette lighter was found beneath his body, he said. His cousin was found in the doorway of the closet.

The infant, Richard Davila, was in critical condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, hospital officials said, suffering from second and third degree burns over 41 percent of his body.

''He's showing a heck of a fight for his age,'' Worley said.

The fire started shortly after 8:30 a.m. after the children apparently began playing with a cigarette lighter and ignited some clothing, Worley said.

(MARCH 30) UPI - No rings, no big checks, no visits to the White House.
Just pure satisfaction for the San Francisco Giants.

Since being crushed and swept in the 1989 World Series by the Oakland Athletics, the Giants claimed their first victory over their Bay Area neighbors with a 4-0 dumping Thursday.

Robby Thompson hit a two-run homer and Kevin Bass stroked three hits for the Giants. Starter Kelly Downs and relievers Eric Gunderson, Jeff Brantley and Dan Quisenberry combined on a four-hitter to help the Giants snap a 10-game losing streak against the A's, including the World Series.

''It's the biggest win of my spring training career,'' San Francisco Manager Roger Craig. ''I wouldn't care if it were five degrees,'' he said of the cold, blustery weather.

Matt Williams led off the second inning with a walk off A's starter Mike Moore, and Thompson followed with a 415-foot home run to center. Will Clark's walk and singles by Kevin Mitchell and Matt Williams made it 3-0 in the third.

Doubles by Bass and Clark concluded the scoring in the eighth inning off rookie left-hander Joe Klink. Bass, a newcomer to the Giants, has six hits in 15 exhibition at-bats for a .400 average.

Before the game, the Giants announced that outfielder Jim Weaver and catchers Will Tejada and Jose Pena were placed on waivers for the purpose of giving them their unconditional release.

Elsewhere in spring training games, California overpowered San Diego 13-8, Seattle edged a split Chicago Cubs squad 5-4, Cleveland stopped Milwaukee 6-4, Atlanta beat a split New York Mets team 2-1, St. Louis downed Philadelphia 7-4, Los Angeles nudged the Mets 5-4, Cincinnati overcame Minnesota 4-2, Boston knocked off Detroit 5-3, the New York Yankees thumped Baltimore 10-3 and Milwaukee got by the Cubs 6-4.

At Yuma, Ariz., rookie Lee Stevens belted a grand slam and John Orton hit a solo shot in a five-run seventh inning, sending the Angels past the Padres, 13-8.

At Tempe, Ariz., Mickey Brantley singled home Edgar Martinez with no outs in the 11th inning to lift the Mariners, 4-0, to the 5-4 triumph over the Cubs' split squad.

At Chandler, Ariz., Cory Snyder doubled twice and drove in two runs and Cleveland took advantage of a Milwaukee error to score three unearned runs in the fifth inning and defeat the Brewers 6-4.

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Dale Murphy's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the eighth inning scored Lonnie Smith from third base and lifted the Braves to a 2-1 victory over a split Mets team.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., the Cardinals rallied for four runs in the ninth inning, the final three coming on Milt Thompson's home run, and beat the Phillies 7-4.

At Port St. Lucie, Fla., Juan Samuel went 3 for 5 with two RBI against his former team to help the Dodgers deal the Mets a 5-4 loss. The center fielder was traded to Los Angeles in the offseason.

At Plant City, Fla., Paul O'Neill, with 70 percent of Cincinnati's RBI so far this spring, drove in two more to pace the Reds' 4-2 victory over the Twins.

At Winter Haven, Fla., the Red Sox scored three runs on one hit in the fourth inning and went on to a 5-3 victory over the Tigers, who played a split-squad game.

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Rick Cerone's two-run single in the fourth and Roberto Kelly's two-run double in the fifth highlighted the Yankees' 10-3 triumph over the Orioles. Don Mattingly went 4 for 5 with two RBI. Dave Winfield went 0 for 3 and walked in his first game in more than 18 months. Winfield missed the 1989 with a herniated back.

At Mesa, Ariz., B.J. Surhoff had five hits and he and Robin Yount each drove in two runs to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-4 triumph over the Cubs in a game between split squads. Marvell Wynne of the Cubs hit a solo homer and Shawon Dunston contributed three hits.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 30) UPI - Janet Faye McKinzie was convicted Thursday of racketeering and fraud in the looting of North America Savings & Loan, which federal officials say lost $40 million before collapsing.

McKinzie, 40, wept as the verdict was announced. She faces up to 175 years in prison.

The U.S. District Court jury found McKinzie, former business manager and executive consultant to North America's late founder Duayne D. Christensen of 22 of 26 counts, including racketeering, bank fraud, wire fraud and interstate transportation of stolen property.

The jury will return next month to determine if the proceeds of a $10 million life insurance policy that named McKinzie as sole beneficiary upon Christensen's mysterious death in 1987 should be turned over to the Treasury Department.

McKinzie and Christensen lived a lavish lifestyle that included Rolls-Royces and expensive clothes, jewelry and parties. He was killed when his Jaguar crashed into an overpass piling on the Corona del Mar Freeway in January 1987 just a few hours before North America was declared insolvent by state regulators. The Orange County coroner was not able to determine if the crash was accidental or a suicide.

The collapse of North America, which Christensen opened in 1983 with a $6.4 million investment, eventually cost U.S. taxpayers more than $120 million. Federal regulators said $40 million was looted from the thrift.

The FBI said the couple spent vast sums on gold doodads and celebrated McKinzie's 37th birthday with a party featuring a full-course meal for hundreds of guests at which Sammy Davis Jr. sang.

McKinzie's attorney, Richard ''Racehorse'' Haynes, portrayed her as a helpless victim who was duped into the scheme by Christensen, a former dentist who allegedly pumped her full of prescription drugs.

The defense contended that McKinzie's judgment was impaired by the drugs, which included anti-anxiety medication called Xanax.

The prosecutors said McKinzie new exactly what she was doing.

''These schemes are not complicated,'' Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul L. Seave told the jury. ''They just required a lot of hard work, and Janet McKinzie was a very hard worker.''

She and several other former principals in the savings and loan still face civil suits brought by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. Three of McKinzie's associates pleaded guilty to criminal charges in the fraud in late 1989 and early 1990. The S&L finally was closed by the federal government in June 1988.

(MARCH 30) UPI - The House passed a landmark bill Thursday to spend 27-BILLION dollars on child care. The House agreed to let parents choose religious-based child care for their children over the objections of some members who felt that mixed church with state. But the House went against the administration and allowed states the right to regulate child care. The bill must be reconciled with a Senate version.

A spokeswoman for the environmental group Greenpeace says it engaged in a ''dogfight'' with Navy and Coast Guard boats off the Florida coast Thursday during which two Coast Guard crewmen fell overboard and had to be rescued. Coast Guard spokesmen deny their crewmen were rescued by Greenpeace. They say they were rescued by other crew members. Greenpeace boats were protesting Trident-2 nuclear missiles.

Fire officials in Fort Worth, Texas, say two infants playing with a cigarette lighter apparently lit a house on fire... killing themselves and critically injuring a four-month-old male relative. Firefighters found three-year-old Jessie Davila Junior on a shelf about three feet off the ground... a cigarette lighter beneath his body. His two-year-old cousin Erica Mata was found in the doorway of the closet.

(MARCH 30) UPI - The state senates of Connecticut and New Hampshire Thursday advanced bills to replace un-enforced anti-abortion laws with laws to permit abortion under most circumstances. The New Hampshire law would allow abortions up until a doctor decides a fetus can live on its own. But the governor vows to veto the bill. The Connecticut bill would require a counselor or clergy member to talk to a girls under 16 before they could have abortions.

An animal rights activist who says greased pig contests are cruel has filed a criminal complaint against the Martin County Fair in Florida to stop the 27-year tradition. In the contest the pigs are greased and turned loose in front of a crowd. School children try to catch them. Lacey Fox says the pigs get ''twisted around and landed upon... having their legs twisted up at angles and all sorts of things.''

A Charlotte, North Carolina, man stripped to his underwear and pretended to be a jogger to escape from the bank he robbed. A federal judge gave him four years in prison Wednesday and a stern lecture to kick his cocaine habit. Jeffrey Link said he ran behind a trash bin after robbing the bank... stripped to his baby blue boxer shorts and tennis shoes hoping he'd be mistaken for a jogger.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Houston's Akeem Olajuwon has become the third player in NBA history to record a quadruple double, again.

With 18 points, 16 rebounds, 11 blocks and 10 assists Thursday night, Olajuwon accomplished what league officials stole from him after a March 3 contest against Golden State, when he was stripped of the achievement because of a questionable assist.

Olajuwon's performance was only part of the Rockets' dominance in their 120-94 massacre of Milwaukee, which improved their record to 34-36 and put themselves squarely in the hunt for a playoff spot. The win pulled them to within one-half game of Seattle in the race for the eighth spot in the Western Conference.

''The team was cooperating in the last five minutes to help me get it,'' Olajuwon said. ''I want to thank my team. In the third period I was aware that I was close. On defense I was looking for blocks and on offense I was looking for assists.

''This is a nice individual and team accomplishment, but I would still like to win a championship. I believe I'm a complete player. I play to win.''

The other two players in the quad-double club are Alvin Robertson, then with the San Antonio Spurs but now a Buck, and Nate Thurmond of the Chicago Bulls.

Houston's front line of Olajuwon, Otis Thorpe and Buck Johnson outscored the Milwaukee frontcourt 58-34. Thorpe added 21 points, going 9 of 13 from the field, and Johnson had 19.

The Bucks were led by Alvin Robertson, who collected 18 points, and Jay Humphries, who added 17.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Elsewhere in the NBA, Phoenix out-paced Charlotte 105-92, Indiana stymied Sacramento 111-101, Dallas slipped past San Antonio 109-105, Portland defeated Atlanta 112-106 and Golden State nipped Utah 128-123.

SUNS 105, HORNETS 92

At Charlotte, N.C., Tom Chambers scored a game-high 29 points and Kevin Johnson added 25 more, leading Phoenix. The Suns have won 20 of their last 26 games. The loss snapped a two-game home winning streak for the Hornets, who were led by Armon Gilliam's 21 points.

PACERS 111, KINGS 101

At Indianapolis, Chuck Person and Detlef Schrempf each scored 25 points in Indiana's victory, extending the Pacers' longest win streak in two years to five games and solidifying its hold on the seventh playoff spot in the East. Antoine Carr led the Kings with 26 points and Pervis Ellison added 19.

MAVERICKS 109, SPURS 105

At San Antonio, Texas, Rolando Blackman poured in 10 of his team-high 28 points in the final 2:58 to push Dallas to a come-from-behind victory. Derek Harper contributed 21 points and Sam Perkins 20, as Dallas won its sixth in a row. The Spurs were led by David Robinson's 33 points and Willie Anderson's 20 and 10 rebounds.

TRAIL BLAZERS 112, HAWKS 106

At Portland, Ore., Buck Williams had 18 points and 12 rebounds to lead a balanced Portland attack. It was the second game in a row that eight Blazers hit double figures and the team pulled within two games of the Pacific Divison-leading Los Angeles Lakers. Dominique Wilkins had 27 points to lead Atlanta, which is now just one-half game ahead of Cleveland for the last playoff spot in the East.

WARRIORS 128, JAZZ 123

At Oakland, Calif., Golden State's Chris Mullin scored 29 points and the Warriors withstood a 49-point, 18-rebound onslaught by Karl Malone to defeat the Jazz and move within two games of idle Seattle for the final playoff berth in the West. Terry Teagle added 24, Tim Hardaway 23 and Mitch Richmond 22 for the victors. It was Utah's eighth loss in 10 games in Oakland.

VILNIUS, Lithuania, U.S.S.R. (MARCH 30) UPI - A leading Lithuanian Communist Party member loyal to Moscow warned that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev may be forced to use his newly expanded powers to bring in line secession-minded Lithuania.

Vladislav Shved, second secretary of Lithuania's pro-Moscow Communist Party, told the Soviet news agency Tass Thursday that if there was no breakthrough soon in the Moscow-Vilnius standoff, ''The only way to settle the crisis would be to introduce presidential rule on Lithuanian territory.''

Direct rule by Gorbachev, using the new powers vested in his semi-dictatorial presidency, would entail a decision by the Supreme Soviet to allow Lithuania to be ruled by decree from Moscow, suspending local government and the Lithuanian Parliament.

If direct rule were imposed, it would be the first time Gorbachev made use of his new executive powers, which enable him to govern unruly republics, declare war and restore citizenship.

Also Thursday, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis implored the U.S.

Congress to recognize the rebellious Soviet republic's independence as part of the liberation of Eastern Europe. The United States has never recognized the Soviet annexation of the three Baltic states in 1940.

Landsbergis has previously asked for Western recognition of independence, but this was his first direct request to Congress.

''The freedom of Lithuania is in great danger,'' Landsbergis said in an appeal that began with the words, ''Dear senators, dear congressmen.''

Landsbergis, who has failed to coax a single country into recognizing Lithuania's independence, said, ''Support for Lithuania is support for freedom and democracy in Eastern Europe.''

Vilnius and Moscow are in a showdown over the issue of the breakaway republic's fate. Lithuania's communists were unseated by the Sajudis nationalists in February parliamentary elections and on March 11 the new Parliament declared independence from the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev has called the declaration illegal and invalid and refuses to recognize the republic's claim to self-rule.

Soviet paratroopers arrested about 20 Lithuanian army deserters in a psychiatric hospital Tuesday and later seized the headquarters of the republic's independent communists, who broke with the Moscow party after last month's elections.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov predicted the Lithuania crisis will grow calmer with time and that the republic would follow legal procedures.

''If they want to go, then they have the referendum, a transition period and then they can leave - not just shutting the door,'' Gerasimov said.

He was referring to Gorbachev's entreaties that Lithuania await a law on secession now making its way through the Supreme Soviet. The draft law provides for a plebiscite and a five-year transition period.

But Gerasimov said Landsbergis has not been helpful.

''Gorbachev has sent two cables to that professor of music, Mr. Landsbergis, the chairman of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet, but got no real answer,'' he said, refusing to call him president but noting his musicology profession.

Lithuanians are largely shrugging off Gorbachev as well, snubbing orders to turn in their firearms and stop forming civilian brigades, Lithuanian and Soviet officials said.

LONDON (MARCH 30) UPI - Iran formed an unlikely alliance with the United States and Britain, alleging that the confiscation of 40 Iraq-bound components used to trigger nuclear weapons shows Middle East rival Iraq is attempting to build an atomic bomb.

There is ''no possible trace of ambiguity about Iraq's attempted illegal acquisition of nuclear triggers (because) their only use is to detonate a nuclear bomb,'' said the official Tehran Times newspaper Thursday in an editorial carried by the state-run Islamic Republic News Agency.

Iran's condemnation brings Tehran in agreement with Western adversaries Britain and the United States and came the same day three people were charged with trying to smuggle the components needed to trigger nuclear weapons. Two of the three also were indicted on similar charges in the United States.

An 18-month investigation by U.S. and British customs agents resulted Wednesday in confiscation of the shipment and the arrests of five people in raids at London's Heathrow Airport, an Iraqi Airways office and the suburban headquarters of Euromac, an export firm.

Baghdad denied seeking the restricted materials and accused Britain of mounting a slander campaign against Iraq.

Britain ordered the deportation of one of the five people arrested - Iraqi Omar Latif, an employee of the state airlines.

Three others were charged in Uxbridge Magistrates Court with trying to illegally export restricted equipment.

French-born export executive Jeanine Celestine Speckman, 41, was released on bail until May 10; Toufic Fouad Amyuni, 37, a Lebanese engineer, and Ali Ashour Daghir, 49, director of the export firm Euromac, were detained until an April 5 hearing. Daghir was born in Iraq and is a naturalized Briton.

A fifth person was released after questioning.

In the U.S. case, Daghir and Speckman were among five individuals and two British companies named in a five-count indictment in San Diego released Thursday.

Also named were Karim Dhadis Omran, Dafir Al-Azawi and Wallid Issa Ahmad, all identified as native Iraqis.

The two British companies were identified as European Manufacturer Center Ltd. and Atlas Equipment (U.K.) Ltd.

The defendants were all charged with conspiring to export banned military equipment to Iraq. Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The indictments were handed down March 23 and unsealed after the London arrests. It was not known if the defendants held in Britain would be extradited to the United States.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday that the Bush administration felt ''very strongly'' about the case as a nuclear non-proliferation issue.

''It is a very serious problem,'' he said. ''It does strike at the heart of the (Nuclear) Non-Proliferation Treaty.''

At the U.S. State Department, Iraqi Ambassador Abdul-Amir Al-Anbari met Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs Richard McCormack on a previously scheduled visit about business matters.

A State Department official said McCormack ''took the opportunity to take up the nuclear issue and informed the ambassador that the United States was going to do whatever it could to enforce its own laws'' on the export of nuclear technology.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said in Parliament the seizure showed that his nation was committed to stopping nuclear proliferation. He called on all nations to try halting the spread of ballistic missiles now possessed by 20 countries.

''Iraq is not the only power in the Middle East with nuclear ambitions,'' he said. ''It shows that vigilance pays off and it points to the vital need to solve by negotiation the wider conflicts in the Middle East.''

The Tehran Times took the opportunity to repeat Iranian allegations that Iraq used chemical weapons during the two nation's 8-year Gulf war that came to an uneasy cease-fire in August 1988.

Iraq, ''which has used chemical weapons on Iranians and its own citizens, has now given convincing evidence that it holds its obligations under the 1968 Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty as lightly as it does those under the 1925 Geneva Convention on Chemical Warfare,'' IRNA quoted the Times as saying in a dispatch monitored in Washington.

In Baghdad, an Iraqi Foreign Ministry spokesman quoted on the state-run

INA news agency denied as ''baseless'' Britain's allegations that Baghdad sought the components.

''Iraq holds British authorities responsible for the repercussions of the measure that was taken against the Iraqi citizen,'' the official was quoted as saying about the expulsion of the airline employee. Iraq also reserved the right to reciprocate, he said.

The spokesman said the actions were part of a slander campaign ''by the British authorities and media along with Zionist circles ... against Iraq, with the aim of threatening its security and paving the way, politically and media-wise, to attack it.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Heartened by changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, the United States has started a drive to repeal a United Nations resolution equating Zionism with racism, a State Department official said.

In testimony prepared for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Friday, Assistant Secretary of State for International Organizations John Bolton said, ''Now is the time to reassess the situation.''

The General Assembly of the United Nations voted in 1975, with the United States and 34 other nations opposed, to equate Zionism with racism. The resolution had no force in law.

Zionism is the historic Jewish attachment to the land of Israel that led to the creation of a state in 1948.

Bolton said in light of changes in Eastern Europe, where there was unanimous support for the 1975 resolution, ''We see distinct signs of movement by several governments,'' which had voted for the resolution or abstained.

Bolton did not identify the nations, but quoted statements from Czechoslovokia and the Soviet Union, which suggested there would be a change in their votes supporting the resolution.

Still unclear, he said, is ''the potentially pivotal'' role of the Soviet Union.

Bolton said the Soviets have recently ''worked quietly to help thwart'' the campaign by the Palestine Liberation Organization for membership in United Nations organizations.

Bolton said, ''We hoped that this Soviet cooperation could be expanded to obtain repeal'' of the Zionism-is-racism resolution but, he said, ''We have failed to produce agreement for a concerted approach.''

He said that the dialogue continues and ''the Soviets have assured us that the (Zionism) resolution represents a concept that is no longer acceptable according to the new political thinking in the Soviet Union.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Hailed by supporters as the most important youth legislation in a quarter century, the House passed a bill that would provide an estimated $27 billion in aid for child care and would allow parents to use federal money at church-run day care centers that teach religion.

Backed by the Democratic leadership, the bill passed Thursday night, 265-145, and now goes to a conference committee where House and Senate negotiators must work out the differences between the new plan and similar legislation passed by the Senate last June.

Opponents of the House bill said the new legislation unfairly limited parents' choices by requiring states to set child care standards, and warned President Bush would veto the measure.

But House Democrats said they doubted President Bush would veto the final bill once it emerges from the committee.

''If he vetoes it, it will become a political issue,'' said Rep. Gus Hawkins, D-Calif. ''I would reason that the president is a little smarter than asking for that type of issue when he runs for re-election.''

The majority of mothers of young children now work, and both Congress and Bush have pledged to improve U.S. child care, which the National Research Council concluded earlier this month is inadequate and often unsafe.

On an earlier 225-195 vote, the House rejected a $20 billion bill, sponsored by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, and supported by the White House, that did not require safety and training standards for day care providers.

What the House bill does not do is create a child care system.

Instead, it relies mainly on income tax credits for low-income families to help parents pay for child care, while distributing smaller sums to existing children's programs.

The bill increases block grants to states for child care, expands the Head Start program so poor children can be cared for all day and year round, and establishes programs at school for ''latchkey children.''

The leadership estimates its plan would cost about $27 billion for five years, but Republicans say it could be as high as $31.3 billion. The Senate bill is less expensive because it provides less money in tax credits.

Both the Democratic and Stenholm bills required that parents be able to obtain vouchers from states that they could use at day care centers that provide religious instruction or worship.

But some Republicans and conservative Democrats argued the standards would create a burden for currently unregulated religious day care centers in many states and was ''anti-religious.'' They said the best plan would allow the widest possible choice.

''The child care issue is about family and freedom - freedom from big government, freedom from welfare, freedom from taxes and freedom of religion,'' said Rep. Barbara Vucanovich, R-Nev.

''We in the Congress do not want to be a party to taking ... decision-making authority away from the parent,'' said Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fla.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., defended the standards, noting the federal government currently sets the conditions under which livestock can be transported - down to the temperature of their water.

''Now for America's children, somehow standards are immoral. ... This isn't a philosophical argument. This is an attack on America's children,'' Miller said.

''Is America's children as important as America's poultry? Are America's children as important as America's pigs? Is America's children as important as America's cows? The answer has to be yes.''

Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, added, ''Frankly, if child care legislation were an actual child, Congress would be charged with both abuse and neglect.''

Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., said a crucial difference between the bills was that the leadership's plan included school-based care for the up to 10 million ''latchkey children,'' which he said would help the middle class.

''Could we spend more? I'm sure we could,'' answered Stenholm. ''But again we look at the bottom line, and the bottom line is we're going to have difficulty paying for a lot of programs.''

Before considering the bills, the House voted on amendments involving the church-state issue - one by Rep. David Price, D-N.C., making it optional for states to allow vouchers to be used for sectarian child care and another by Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., forbidding such uses.

The House voted 243-182 against Price's amendment and 297-125 against the proposal by Edwards, which was backed by teachers groups worried that vouchers for child care could pave the way for federal vouchers for religious schools.

Edwards' amendment would have allowed vouchers to be used at centers run by religious groups, which account for about a third of child care, as long as there was no religious activity. He said without his proposal the bill would violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., a fellow liberal, disagreed, saying it would be constitutional to use vouchers at sectarian day care centers in the way federal loans go to students at religious colleges.

TOKYO (MARCH 30) UPI - Japan Airlines will order as many as 20 McDonnell Douglas MD-11 passenger jets in a deal that could exceed $2 billion, the nation's largest airline announced Friday.

''Japan Airlines made the the choice after detailed studies of the (European) Airbus aircraft and the McDonnel Douglas MD-11,'' the airline said in a statement.

Japan Airlines made firm orders for 10 aircraft, with options for a further 10, the company said.

The current cost per aircraft is about $110 million. If the option is exercised, the total value of the order would be about $2.2 billion, the company said.

''We are overjoyed they will buy our planes,'' said Yasutoshi Masuzawa, president of McDonnell Douglas Japan.

McDonnell Douglas, based in St. Louis, won out over the Airbus produced by several European nations.

''We were especially happy to be chosen with such a competitor in the running,'' said Masuzawa. ''Japan Airlines has the strictest standards in the world for selecting airplanes.''

Japan Airlines said the new MD-11 aircraft will replace its current McDonnell Douglas DC-10 fleet of 16 aircraft, which will be phased out of service.

''Between 1993 and 1998 Japan Airlines fleet plans currently call for 20 medium-capacity jet aircraft to add to the fleet,'' the company said.

Japan Airlines owns and operates 65 Boeing 747s, more than any other airline.

Japan Airlines was the national airline until late 1987 when the government sold its 34 percent holding and the company was privatized.

It is now up to a House-Senate negotiating team to work out differences in the two chambers' versions of a child-care law. The House yesterday approved a 27-BILLION dollar child-care bill that would allow parents to use federal money at church-run day-care centers that teach religion.

Prosecutors are expected to say that Poindexter masterminded a plan to sell U-S arms to Iran and divert some profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels. WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Eastern Airlines' creditors, after a year of supporting the carrier's efforts to rejuvenate itself, threaten to shut down the airline to force the sale of its planes, routes and leases, reports said Friday.

The Washington Post said the unsecured creditors told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland in a private hearing Wednesday they do not want the proceeds from sales of airline assets used to keep Eastern in the air.

The creditors said if Eastern and its corporate parent, Texas Air Corp., do not agree to a major financial commitment, they will seek appointment of a trustee to take over the company, sell its assets and shut it down.

The Wall Street Journal reported that trusteeship is one of several responses being considered by creditors fearing they will get no money at all, and that a trustee would operate the airline with an eye toward survival, not liquidation, a position endorsed by Eastern's unions but opposed by the two airlines.

Eastern attorney Bruce Zirinsky told The Post he viewed the creditors' threat as a bargaining position and said he is confident the airline and its creditors will agree on a financial plan that would avoid liquidating one of the oldest carriers in American aviation.

''The (creditors) committee has a fiduciary responsibility to negotiate on a reorganization plan,'' he said. ''They can't take the position they won't negotiate. They represent thousands of other creditors who have a large financial stake (in the company).''

The liquidation threat follows an unsuccessful attempt to persuade Eastern to guarantee repayment of 50 percent of the money owed unsecured creditors and to win a commitment from Texas Air to assume Eastern's continuing losses, estimated at nearly $1 million daily, The Post said.

The amount of money requested from Texas Air is not known but The Wall Street Journal reported that Texas Air told the creditors it cannot make the broad commitment they seek.

A Texas Air spokesman said the carrier is ''committed to an extensive and comprehensive plan to assist Eastern and we will stand by it,'' The Journal said.

The development is a stunning reversal of sentiment by the creditors, who until this week supported Eastern's struggle to emerge intact from Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Eastern filed for protection from its creditors in Bankruptcy Court in 1989 after a strike by the International Association of Machinists and sympathy walkouts by its pilots and attendants.

Eastern President Phil Bakes may have triggered the shift in sentiment earlier this week when he said the airline cannot meet the terms of a February settlement that called for repaying unsecured creditors 50 cents of each dollar owed.

Bakes cited passengers' reluctance, particularly business travelers, to fly Eastern for the carrier's inability to meet revenue projections.

The February agreement would have repaid unsecured creditors $300 million in cash and nearly $190 million more in secured notes to satisfy the nearly $1 billion owned, the reports said.

Tne newspapers reported that Eastern and Texas Air officials fear talk of liquidation could jeopardize $350 million from the sale of Eastern's South American routes to American Airlines.

Lifland endorsed the sale Thursday but it must still be approved by the Department of Transportation.

Press reports said that if Eastern is liquidated, the Transportation Department might contend the routes are in the public domain and subject to auction.

The reports said that in a two-hour conference call between the two airlines and the creditors committee, Eastern told the creditors the sale of its South American routes would permit it to repay 10 cents on the dollar, but without the sale the creditors would receive nothing.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Federal money for child care wins a second O-K from Congress.

Indictments expected today in the New York club fire arson.

Estonia takes another step toward independence.

U-P-I has this and other top news today.

It's been a rocky road, but it looks like child-care legislation has won out and will become a reality.

The House last night passed 165-145, legislation supported by the Democratic leadership. It has been hailed by its backers as the most importation youth legislation in 25 years.

Among other things, it would allow parents to use federal money at church-run day-care centers that teach religion. What the bill does NOT do is create a child-care system. It relies mainly on income tax credits for low-income families to help parents pay for child care.

Opponents say the measure UNfairly limits parents' choices because it requires states to set child-care standards. They believe President Bush will veto it.

But the House version is NOT likely to land on the president's desk. House-Senate negotiators will work out a final version, taking into account a Senate child-care bill that won approval last June.

House Democrats say they doubt Bush will veto the final child-care bill once it emerges from the conference committee.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Today is the deadline for a grand jury to issue charges or set free the man accused of igniting a blaze that killed 87 people in a New York City club.

The grand jury indictment is expected on 174 counts of murder and arson- two counts for each victim. By law, the grand jury must hand up an indictment by this evening or set Gonzalez free.

A court-appointed lawyer will represent the suspected arsonist... 36-year-old Julio Gonzalez... today at a hearing in state Supreme Court in the Bronx.

Gonzalez is charged with 87 counts of second-degree murder in connection with Sunday's fire... each of which carries a term of 25 years to life. His lawyers say he's aware he faces up to two-thousand years in prison.

Prosecutors in the Bronx call the case ''locked and shut.'' They say Gonzalez has made a full videotaped confession.

Gonzalez, a jilted lover, allegedly set the blaze using one-dollar worth of gasoline. He remains under psychiatric evaluation at Bellevue Hospital.

Wakes and funerals were held yesterday for some of the victims of Sunday's tragic fire at the Happy Land social club.

The majority of the victims of the fire will be buried in their Latin American homelands... including 49 who are to be flown to Honduras this weekend. Others are to be buried in the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and Ecuador.

(MARCH 30) UPI - An immigration reform law designed to curb the flow of illegal aliens may have paved the way for widespread discrimination against Hispanics, Asians and other minorities.

The investigative wing of Congress- the General Accounting Office- says about 20 percent of the employers it surveyed turned away job applicants because they looked ''foreign,'' or spoke with an accent.

The G-A-O report determined that the job discrimination results from provisions of the 1986 reform law changing immigration policies. It requires businesses to verify that employees are eligible to work... and fines employers who hire illegal immigrants.

The American Civil Liberties Union and several lawmakers are calling for the repeal of the law. But its chief author, assistant Senate Republican leader Alan Simpson of Wyoming, says Congress should work to improve the employee verification system... rather than repeal sanctions.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Exxon officials say they intend to employ only a small fraction of last year's clean-up fleet on the Alaska oil spill when work resumes in May.

Last summer's flotilla totaled 14-hundred vessels at its peak. Exxon says fewer than 100 boats will be back this year.

Crews fanned out across Prince William Sound yesterday to start shoreline surveys designed to define Exxon's role in this summer's clean-up.

Exxon spokesman Fred Davis could NOT explain how the company could determine the size of its clean-up fleet before shoreline survey teams complete their work. Exxon officials have insisted for weeks that it's impossible to calculate the size of its clean-up force until after shoreline surveys.

Exxon's announcement of the relatively small fleet could spark an already simmering dispute over the company's approaches. Alaska's Department of Environmental Conservation says some beaches are so badly fouled that Exxon must act aggressively.

In Washington, congressional auditors say that measures to prevent corrosion in the 800-mile-long Alaska pipeline were flawed... and that the federal government, state of Alaska and oil industry knew even when the pipeline was built 13 years ago.

G-A-O officials also say the pipeline has received too little attention from state and federal regulators who are supposed to oversee its operation. As a result, regulators were ''caught off guard'' by recent inspections showing premature corrosion of the pipeline.

The Alaska pipeline carries one-fourth of the oil produced in the United States.

(MARCH 30) UPI - The best-selling author of ''Lake Wobegon Days'' is championing the cause of more controversial art.

Satirical author Garrison Keillor went to Capitol Hill yesterday as a star witness before the Senate Labor Subcommittee on Education. The panel is taking a look at a Bush administration plan to lift federal content restrictions on grants made by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Keillor told lawmakers that he would like to see more controversial art than the few pieces that have upset some critics in Congress. In the 25-year history of the N-E-A, only 20 out of 85-thousand grants have been considered controversial.

Keillor welcomed the proposal by President Bush. It differs from a current law that expires in September which requires the N-E-A to reject art works defined by statute as obscene.

Republican Senator Jesse Helms of North Carolina was absent from yesterday's hearing. Helms wrote the current law restricting the N-E-A. But support for those restrictions seems to be waning.

Senator Strom Thurmond, a South Carolina Republican, says the endowment- and NOT Congress- should decide what restrictions should be placed on possibly obscene art.

RANGOON, BURMA (MARCH 30) UPI - The Burmese government said Friday it has signed several business agreements with South Korea's Daewoo Group to jointly produce electronic goods and garments for export. The agreements also include building a wholly Korean-owned five-star hotel in the capital of Rangoon.

The deals were signed earlier this week during the two-day visit of Daewoo Chairman Kim Woo-choong, said Col. Than Shwe, managing director of the government-owned Myanmar Heavy Industries Cos.

Under an agreement signed Thursday, Myanmar Heavy Industries and Daewoo will set up a joint-venture company named Daewoo Electronic Myanmar Co. to produce television sets, radio cassette players and refrigerators, Than Shwe said.

The new joint-venture will start with an initial $4 million investment, financed for 45 percent by the Burmese side and 55 percent by the South Korean group. In the first phase, the South Korean group will operate from three plants leased from Myanmar Heavy Industries.

Projected annual production for the first three years will be 3,000 color and 67,000 black and white television sets, 63,000 radio cassettes, and 4,000 refrigerators.

In the second phase, the joint-venture will set up a new plant on a 45-acre site at Pyinmabin, near Rangoon. Annual production targets in this phase are 32,000 color and 168,000 black and white television sets, 156,000 radio cassettes, and 55,000 refrigerators. The company expects to export as much as 80 percent of its production.

Under another agreement, Union of Myanmar Economic Holding Co. will set up a joint venture with Daewoo to manufacture garments for export. The initial investment will be $4.6 million, with 40 percent Burmese ownership.

Maung Maung Kyaw said the government has accepted Daewoo's offer to build a wholly-owned, 350-room, five-star hotel on a 45-acre site by a lake in downtown Rangoon. Daewoo will invest $60 million to build the hotel which is expected to boost tourism in the country.

The ownership of the hotel will eventually be transferred to the state-owned Hotel and Tourism Enterprise of Burma, but the time of the transfer is still being negotiated.

The military government of Burma, which seized power in September 1988, has opened the country's doors to foreign investment for the first time in 25 years.

TOKYO (MARCH 30) UPI - Japan posted a $4.907 billion surplus in its broadest measure of trade in February, moving back into the black after registering in January its first deficit in six years, the Finance Minstry reported Friday.

Finance Ministry officials said the current account, which measures merchandise and service trade, returned to a surplus in February after a stunning $636 million deficit in January. The January deficit was the first in Japan since January 1984, when the current account was $562 million in the red.

The Finance Ministry said that, although the trade surplus was back, it was relatively small. The latest surplus was 32.4 percent lower than its $7.255 billion level in February 1989. The Finance Ministry does not break down current account figures by country, and no figures were available for trade with the United States.

Japan reported a surplus in merchandise trade of $5.491 billion in February, a decline of 35.6 percent from the previous year when it stood at $8.521 billion.

Exports fell to $21.539 billion, a drop of 2.2 percent from the previous year's figure of $22.017 billion. Imports rose to $16.048 billion, up 18.9 percent from $13.496 billion a year ago.

Oil imports accounted for 44 percent of the total imports. Oil imports rose 11.8 percent in volume, but oil prices were up 28.8 percent compared with the previous year.

Imports of cars were up 63.7 percent from the year-ago figures. Exports of steel products, semiconductors and electronic goods fell.

ANALYSIS BY ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Could it be that the Democrats are hoping that Doug Wilder will do to Jesse Jackson what Jimmy Carter did to George Wallace?

Recall that in the early 1970s the feisty governor of Alabama was driving the Democratic establishment crazy by entering presidential primaries far from his native South and either winning or drawing enough votes to back his claim that the party's candidates had lost touch with ordinary people.

Wallace's critics said he was getting votes by pandering to prejudice and fear and that no political party was going to enjoy more than passing success that way.

But they were clearly rattled by Wallace's successes in places like Maryland and Michigan, and when former Georgia Gov. Carter came along in 1976 to challenge Wallace, the Democrats were pleased.

The party elders were downright delighted to have Carter whip Wallace in Florida, although few of them realized how much momentum his early victories would give the Georgian.

Before they or such better known candidates as Sens. Henry Jackson of Washington or Birch Bayh of Indiana or Sargent Shriver knew what was happening, Carter had pulled into first place in the crowded race for the Democratic nomination and not only won it, but captured the presidency as well.

No one expects Wilder, who made history last fall as the first black to be elected governor of any state when he won the job in Virginia, to make a serious bid for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1992.

But after his election victory and a remarkably successful legislative session in which Wilder showed himself to be as fiscally cautious as any white governor the state has had in recent times, some people are talking about Wilder as a possible vice presidential candidate.

A lot of water has to flow under a number of bridges before serious consideration will be given to a Democratic vice presidential candidate. But the very fact that Wilder is being mentioned for the post so early in the 1988-1992 cycle probably has more to do with Jackson's perceived capacity to make problems for the party than Wilder's potential for broadening its base.

Some politicians believe that Jackson got a lot closer to a place on the national ticket in 1988 than in 1984, and if he succeeded in 1992, his color, his liberalism, his style or all of the above would not only guarantee defeat but also drag down many other Democratic candidates at every level.

But most of them will not say publicly that Jackson is political poison for fear of being accused of racism. They see a way of avoiding that by opposing Jackson on the basis of governmental experience and offering Wilder as a proven legislator, administrator and politician.

It is true that Wilder has appeared to ally himself with the so-called centrist or moderate wing of the Democratic Party. But it remains to be seen whether the first elected black governor will let himself be used against the first black with a plausible chance to win a place on a major party presidential ticket.

SEABROOK, NH (MARCH 30) UPI - Operators shut down the Seabrook nuclear plant Thursday night because of a possible problem in a steam turbine and a spokesman said the $6.5 billion reactor would be idled for at least three days.

Seabrook, which was given a full-power license earlier this month by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, had been operating at nine percent capacity until Wednesday night when operators discovered the potential malfunction in the turbine's rotors.

The plant was first reduced to one percent power, then further lowered to .01 percent capacity before the decision was made to shut down the plant at about 9 p.m. Thursday, according to Rob Williams, a spokesman for New Hampshire Yankee, which operates Seabrook.

"We want to directly measure the clearances between the turbine's rotor shaft and the shell that encases the shaft," said Williams. "It was a management decision that it was not necessary to keep it in operation and it was decided to shut it all the way down."

He said the plant would be idled until plant inspectors can check clearances between the turbine's rotor shaft and its casing. A remote sensor indicated that the gap between the shaft and the casing were closer than normal specifications, the company said.

Ron Sher, another New Hampshire Yankee spokesman, said the adjustment of the turbine was typical for nuclear power plants during the power-ascension stage. Steam produced by heat from Seabrook's reactor is used to power the turbines, which in turn generate the plant's electricity.

Williams said the turbine's steam valves were closed off Wednesday to allow the giant machine to cool before inspectors began their examination Thursday.

The controversial nuclear plant, which has long been the focus of anti-nuclear groups, began its start-up last week and is expected to reach 100-percent generating capacity by early summer.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Factory orders rebounded by 1.8 percent in February, boosted by increased demand for automobiles, defense items and communications gear, the Commerce Department said Friday. Overall transportation orders were up by 10.4 percent last month after toppling by 29.4 percent in January.

The February increase in factory orders, to $231.6 billion, follows a 5.5 percent decline in January and a modest 0.4 percent increase in December, the department said.

Excluding defense items, factory orders rose 1.2 percent last month after a 4.3 percent fall in January, according to the department's Census Bureau. Excluding transportation, February orders climbed 0.6 percent after a 0.9 percent decline.

Factory shipments climbed by 3.3 percent in February - the largest gain since 5.4 percent last August - and unfilled orders declined by 0.5 percent last month, the Commerce Department said. Shipments were down by 1.8 percent in January and unfilled orders had shown an increase of 0.2 percent in the opening month of 1990. All the numbers were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

February orders for durable goods, expensive items made to last three or more years, were up by 2.6 percent, while orders for non-durable goods edged up by 0.9 percent, led by gains in foods and printing and publishing.

Orders for automobiles were up by 28.9 percent, after falling by 22.8 percent in January and seven percent in December. Electrical machinery orders were up by 3.8 percent in February after falling 15 percent in January, with orders for communications equipment ringing up a 13.2 percent gain after diving by 35.9 percent in January, the Commerce Department said.

In the volatile shipbuilding and military tank category, orders rocketed by 140.4 percent last month after a 73.5 percent January plunge and 228.9 percent gain in December, the department said.

February orders for aircraft, missiles and parts were off by 23.1 percent, following a 27.9 percent fall in January. Also on the negative side, primary metals orders were off by 5.5 percent in February after a 4.2 percent gain, and fabricated metals products were off by 1.2 percent last month after a 1.3 percent January decrease.

LONDON (MARCH 30) UPI - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, considering whether short-range nuclear missiles should remain in a united Germany, said Friday that the old targets for Western weapons had become new democracies.

''The world has changed,'' Kohl said at a 40-minute news conference with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. ''The range of these weapons ... would reach cities like Prague, or the (East) German city of Rostock, where I just spoke to a crowd of 100,000 people.''

Since the 350-mile-range missiles were installed, Czechoslovakia has undergone a peaceful ''velvet revolution'' to democracy and East Germany held its first free elections since 1933.

Kohl arrived in England Thursday for a dinner in Cambridge to mark the 40th anniversary of the Koenigswinter conference, an annual Anglo-German diplomatic event.

The two leaders also spoke privately at Thatcher's 10 Downing St. office Friday and agreed that a united Germany should remain part of NATO and be anchored in European institutions. Thatcher said they would remain in close contact to deal with various problems surrounding East Germany.

''Germany is part of the Western community and under no circumstances will we accept neutralization,'' Kohl told reporters after the meeting.

''What sort of weapons will be in Germany and what sort of troop levels will be in Germany? That will be decided with our partners in NATO, not by ourselves.''

Thatcher said she saw European unity ''growing day by day'' in all spheres with each nation's identity and history remaining intact. Soon the entire Soviet Union may become democratic, requiring ''a new framework of cooperation,'' she said.

She said both leaders had solved a diplomatic row that broke out Monday when Thatcher in an interview questioned Kohl's commitment to preserving the existing German-Polish border and called for a united Germany to sign a treaty with Poland.

''If between Germany and Poland we can talk to each other, then this is real peace,'' Kohl said. ''We can't forget history and the terrible things that we have done ... but I want to promote peace.''

At Thursday's dinner, Kohl said he hoped Poles, ''despite calling injustice by its proper name, would hold out its hand of friendship to guiltless Germans.''

Kohl said unification of Germany is a question of self-determination for Germans but that all neighbors of the two countries have an interest in it.

''With the scrapping of East-West confrontation and the advent of democracy in the countries in middle eastern and southern Europe, we are offered the first realistic chance since the end of World War II to overcome peacefully the division of Europe and the division of Germany.''

The Soviet Union, which heads the rival Warsaw Pact military alliance, has opposed North Atlantic Treaty Organization membership for a united Germany.

Thatcher said Thursday that Europe's security requires German membership in NATO, that U.S. and other forces remain stationed in Germany but in reduced numbers, and that NATO maintain a nuclear arsenal in Germany.

''We must try to learn the lessons of the past peace settlements,'' Thatcher said. ''The Americans must not go home. Nor must Britain retreat from the continent. The security interests of all those concerned must be taken into account. No one must feel threatened, humiliated or resentful.''

MANILA, Philippines (MARCH 30) UPI - Officials at Clark Air Base banned

Friday most travel by American airmen to the Philippine capital, where a policeman was killed in a communist-style ambush.

Police said suspected guerrillas with pistols Friday shot and killed Patrolman Demetrio Torres as he went to his office in suburban San Mateo town.

An announcemnt over the U.S. military television, Far East Network, said travel to Manila by some 9,000 airmen at the headquarters of the 13th Air Force is prohibited except for official missions.

The announcement said exceptions could be granted on a ''case-by-case basis'' by commanders at Clark, 50 miles north of Manila.

Clark's travel ban followed a similar directive Tuesday from the commander of U.S. naval forces in the Philippines at Subic Bay Naval Station ''due to increased threats to U.S. military members.''

Some 6,000 servicemen are stationed at Subic, the sprawling repair and logistics center for the U.S. Seventh Fleet, 60 miles northwest of the Philippine capital.

Eight Americans have been killed in the country in the past two years in slayings the government blames on communist guerrillas.

About a dozen Philippine lawmen have been killed in the past week in metropolitan Manila in advance of the 21st anniversary of the founding of the communist New People's Army. The NPA is the 19,000-member armed wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines.

Despite threats of an uprising to celebrate the anniversary, no incidents were reported in Manila on Thursday.

More than 200 lawmen have been killed in the capital since the NPA launched an urban guerrilla war three years ago.

The military said on Friday the NPA has drawn 1,000 battle-tested fighters from the countryside to the capital to intensify its anti-terror drive.

PONTIAC, MI (MARCH 30) UPI - An arbitrator has ruled that General Motors

Corp. did not violate its contract with the United Auto Workers union when the automaker halted production at its Pontiac Fiero plant in 1988.

The ruling Thursday by arbitrator Thomas Roberts affects nearly 12,000 indefinitely idled auto workers in Michigan, Massachusetts, and Missouri, and could affect 8,750 more workers at three GM plants expected to be idled within the next three years.

It also means the UAW will be forced to win tougher job security clauses during negotiations this summer for new national labor agreements with the Big Three automakers. National three-year contracts covering over 450,000 workers at GM, Ford Motor Co., and Chrysler Corp. expire Sept. 14.

"The decision provides a clear imperative to improve the job security provisions of our contract in the new agreement to be negotiated later this year," said UAW Vice President Stephen Yokich, who heads the union's GM Department and will spearhead the union's talks with the giant automaker this summer.

The term "idling" has been used by GM and other automakers to describe indefinite shutdowns of factories like the Fiero plant, which began building the two-seater car in late 1983 but closed in 1988 after steady sales declines.

The last contract signed in 1987 allows automakers to lay off workers when sales are slow. However, that agreement forbids the companies from permanently closing factories.

The UAW contended in the Fiero plant case that laying off nearly all the workers and halting production was a plant closing, but GM said the idling was caused by a sales decrease and allowable under the contract.

"This may be one of those cases where GM wins the battle and starts the war," labor analyst Harley Shaiken, a professor of the University of California at San Diego, told the Detroit News,

Besides the Fiero plant, GM's Leeds Assembly plant in Kansas City, Mo., was indefinitely idled in 1988. Its Framingham, Mass., assembly plant was idled in 1989.

At least three more GM plants either have been earmarked for closing or are most likely to close by 1993. Those include GM's Lakewood Assembly plant near Atlanta, which will end production this August and idle 2,200 workers. About 2,500 workers will be idled in 1992 when GM ends production at its van plant in Lordstown, Ohio.

GM's Van Nuys, Calif., plant is also expected to close in 1992 or 1993 when production of the Chevrolet Camaro and Pontiac Firebird ends there.

LANSING, MI (MARCH 30) UPI - Former Michigan State tackle Tony Mandarich has told a Lansing newspaper he built his massive body with ''desire'' and not illegal steriods as reported in the Detroit News.

In Detroit, The News said Friday it stands by the original story and disputed remarks by Mandarich in his interview with the Lansing State Journal.

In the March 21 story former players told the News steroid activity was common during Mandarich's collegiate career, which peaked with the 1987 Rose Bowl season.

''The article didn't surprise,'' Mandarich told the State Journal Thursday. ''This will go on my whole career. It's like a plague that's labeled me. I have no proof except for medical records. People think there is no explanation for being 6-6, 300 pounds, strong and fast - no excuse for it unless you're supposedly taking drugs.

''My answer to that is, what gets you there is desire, how badly you want something.''

Mandarich, now a player with the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League, said he passed a steroid test several times while he was at MSU.

Mandarich also told the State Journal he did not learn of The News story until a day after it was published. But the News said Mandarich was given detailed accounts of the story several days earlier by his agent, Vern Sharbaugh of Cleveland, and by the manager of an East Lansing bodybuilding gym used by Mandarich.

''We gave Tony Mandarich numerous opportunities to talk to us before the story was published,'' Bob Giles, publisher and executive editor of the News, said Thursday. ''We find it unusual that he waited this long to say anything. We would invite him to sit down with our reporters and go over the story line by line.''

Jeff Case, a former Spartans player who said he had obtained seriods from Mandarich and had been injected with them by Mandarich and at least one of his roommates, called the News' story ''totally accurate.''

''There's no change in my mind whatsoever,'' Case said.

The News said its story was written after more than 100 interviews, on and off the record, with players, coaches, parents, physicians and police.

LONDON (MARCH 30) UPI - The duke and duchess of York left the hospital Friday with their newborn daughter, Eugenie Victoria Helena, and proudly showed her to the news media and royalty watchers, giving her a taste of the attention she will get as an heir to the British throne.

About 100 photographers perched atop ladders, crouched on the sidewalk and hanging from balconies finally got the pictures that had them hovering outside the hospital for two weeks.

The duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson, popularly known as ''Fergie,'' smiled and shouted, ''Thanks very much for the flowers,'' to the cheering well-wishers outside Portland Hospital before the family left for an undisclosed location.

Eugenie Victoria Helena slept through her first public appearance. The royal couple's second child officially will be known as her royal highness Princess Eugenie of York, Buckingham Palace said.

She will be sixth in line to the British throne. Her sister, Princess Beatrice, was born Aug. 8, 1988.

Princess Eugenie was named after her royal ancestors - Queen Victoria, Victoria's third daughter Princess Helena and one of Victoria's grandchildren, Eugenie. Eugenie was the child of another of Victoria's daughters, Princess Beatrice.

The bookmakers were pleased - the only one of the new princess's names to

The 7-pound, 1 1/2-ounce princess was delivered by Caesarean section March 23 in the presence of her father. Sidewalk consensus was that the bundle wrapped in the white shawl had dark auburn hair and her eyes, although closed, were definitely blue.

The child was in her mother's arms when the family walked out of the hospital, then Andrew took a turn.

The duchess paused for a quiet conversation with Edith Bowdidge, 82, who prides herself on her record for attending royal births.

''I've been here 10 days,'' Bowdidge said. ''Andrew told her I've been here ... and she said she remembered me from last time.''

An excited American tourist said, ''I want to get pictures to send back home. I'm going to call home tonight and say, 'I saw them.'''

But the fans were far outnumbered by the hundred or so photographers and journalists who have camped outside Portland Hospital for nearly two weeks. A good picture of the newborn is worth a minimum of $8,100.

Daily Express photographer Steve Wood said, ''I'll be glad to go on holiday next week, yes, indeed, I will. I think everyone of us will need a rest here. It is a photographer's nightmare here really, to work out exactly which film to use and exactly which exposure to use.''

Veteran royal watcher James Whitaker said the media attention bordered on excessive.

''Nobody wants to miss it. I think it's got to be absurd when you've got 80 to 100 photographers here to take one picture. I think that's got to be close to overkill.

The new princess's name received mixed reviews from those gathered outside the hospital.

''How awful. How absolutely awful,'' one woman said. ''I suppose it has to go with Beatrice.''

''I don't know - it's kind of royal,'' her friend said.

The name Eugenie Victoria Helena reflects the couple's ''desire to return to Victorian values,'' said Harold Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burke's Peerage, bible of the aristocracy.

''The reverence for Queen Victoria and her family by the duke and duchess of York clearly indicates the possibility of a much larger family for them in the near future, and probably many more repetitions of Queen Victoria's choices for children's names,'' he said.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (MARCH 30) UPI - Rival Christian forces battled fiercely Friday for control of a strategic mountainous region northeast of the capital, killing at least 30 people and wounding 40, security sources said.

Backed by a hail of rockets and shells, Samir Geagea's Lebanese Forces militiamen engaged in house-to-house clashes with regular troops loyal to Christian military leader Gen. Michel Aoun in the village of Qlaiat, 12 miles northeast of Beirut.

The sources said Aoun's troops lost ground to the militiamen.

Security officials said at least 30 people were killed and 40 wounded in the violence, which was concentrated in and around Qlaiat and spilled over to other confrontation lines in the mountainous district of Kesrouwane and the ravaged eastern side of Beirut.

''There are many corpses on the battlefields and rescuers cannot retrieve them because of the intensity of the violence,'' said army spokesman Lt. Munir Akiki.

After nine hours of bloody fighting on roads and alleys of the village, Geagea's forces drove the regulars out of the mountain-top village and advanced towards the nearby village of Daraya, the sources said.

Another army spokesman denied that the troops were forced to abandon positions, but acknowledged that the soldiers faced fierce attacks.

''Geagea's men started the attack at dawn, coupled with heavy bombardment against our positions in the mountains,'' said the spokesman, who asked not to be named.

He said the Lebanese Forces were repulsed.

Militia spokesman George Abdel Massih said Aoun's troops launched a three-pronged attack on militia defenses in and around Qlaiat, but the offensive was crushed.

''After engaging Aoun's troops in a big fight at the center of Qlaiat, our forces advanced and captured several enemy positions,'' Massih said.

The security sources said the rivals fought with tanks, 240mm cannons, 160mm artillery batteries, multi-barreled rocket launchers and mortars.

At least 830 people have been killed and 2,780 others wounded since the battles broke two months ago between Aoun's 15,000-strong Army and Geagea's 10,000-member militia.

The rival gunners, entrenched along frontlines in Kesrouwane and in east Beirut, engaged in random artillery and rocket exchanges throughout the day, the sources said.

Thousands of families huddled in underground shelters as exploding shells and rockets damaged houses, wrecked cars and set properties on fire, the sources said.

The fighting came a day after Christian leaders meeting under Maronite patriarch Nasrallah Sfeir in Bkerke, northeast of Beirut, decided to support Syrian-backed President Elias Hrawi as head of the legitimate government of Lebanon.

Political sources said the conferees gave a Vatican-supported mediation team 72 hours to persuade Aoun either to endorse Hrawi's legitimacy or to offer an alternative that would end two months of fighting in the Christian enclave.

The leading An Nahar newspaper said in case Aoun failed to offer an alternative settlement, Sfeir would call for a larger Christian conference that would declare support for Hrawi.

Aoun and Geagea have been locked in a bitter power struggle since Jan. 31 for control of Beirut's 310-square-mile Christian enclave.

The Lebanese Forces-run Voice of Lebanon radio station accused Aoun's forces of using prohibited cluster and phosphoric bombs and torching homes and cars.

The intensity of the fighting prompted Sfeir to reiterate his threat to excommunicate Aoun and Geagea if they did not stop their bloody feuding.

Sfeir asked in his appeal what Aoun or Geagea possibly could gain from ''this terrifying and destructive bombardment.''

''(Aoun and Geagea) claim to defend the Christian areas, which they turned into a scorched earth,'' he said. ''We warn them for the second time that we will be forced to excommunicate them from the church. ... He who alerts first should not be blamed.''

On March 2, Sfeir threatened to excommunicate the belligerents after 24 hours of unabated savage battles in east Beirut forcing the warring sides to halt their fire. A fragile truce took hold and held until Friday.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (MARCH 30) UPI - The largest exhibit of works by Vincent Van Gogh, a splendid splash of swirl and color, opened Friday in two museums to mark the 100th anniversary of the Dutch impressionist painter's death.

Queen Beatrix unveiled a Van Gogh self-portrait to officially open the historic showing of 133 paintings and 248 drawings, which runs until July 29, the date in 1890 the artist committed suicide at the age of 37 in France.

Friday was the artist's birthday.

Schoolchildren gave the queen a bouquet of flowers, perhaps the most legendary subject matter of a troubled artist who sold just one painting in his lifetime but whose works commanded record prices a century later.

''The Sunflowers'' and ''Still Life With Zinnias'' are but two paintings of flowers on exhibit.

Other highlights include ''Starry Night,'' ''Portrait of the Postman Roulin,'' ''The Potato Eaters'' and ''Self Portrait With Bandaged Ear,'' painted after Van Gogh hacked off his left ear in a 1888 fit of madness.

The paintings are on display at the Vincent Van Gogh Museum in Amsterdam, while the drawings are being shown at the Kroller-Muller Museum in Otterlo about 60 miles east.

About half the 133 paintings are from collections of the two museums, the rest were loaned from private collections or other museums - including the Musee D'Orsee in Paris, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

The borrowed works are insured for more than $3 billion. About 500,000 tickets have already been sold and total attendance is expected to reach 1.5 million for what organizers describe as the largest-ever showing of Van Gogh's works.

A film festival and an opera devoted to Van Gogh's tortured final years called ''Unhappy Man Dressed in Black'' are part of the centenary, while a ''Van Gogh Village'' near the Amsterdam museum displays countless souvenirs relating to the bearded artist.

This month, Van Gogh's ''Irises'' was sold for an undisclosed sum to the Getty Museum in Malibu, Calif. The painting shattered all art records in 1987 when it was bought by Australian financier Alan Bond for $53.9 million.

BEIJING (MARCH 30) UPI - The government, fearing renewed unrest a year after the pro-democracy movement, has quietly started a campaign to tighten security, prevent gatherings in Tiananmen Square and limit contacts with foreigners, Chinese sources said Friday.

Security precautions are being stepped up in factories and around embassies and foreign residence compounds in Beijing before a series of sensitive dates and one-year anniversaries marking the rise and then the crushing of last spring's demonstrations.

The perceived danger period begins on Sunday and stretches through early June. It was last June 3 that Chinese soldiers fired on protesters in Beijing after six weeks of demonstrations for greater freedom, launching a stiff crackdown on dissent.

Although the martial law declared in Beijing last May 20 was lifted in January, sources said 8,000 additional paramilitary police have reinforced units in the capital in recent days. Witnesses have reported helmeted troops armed with rifles patrolling streets.

The troops are from the paramilitary People's Armed Police, which has taken over security duties from the army. Western diplomats say a full division of army regulars, about 10,000 men, was transferred to the PAP before martial law was lifted.

Overseas dissident groups, headed by activists who fled China after last June, have in recent weeks sent facsimiles to Beijing offices urging people to ''take walks'' through Tiananmen Square, the center of the protests, beginning April 1 as a show of dissent.

Beijing units handed over 154 of the facsimiles to police, according to a figure cited internally by city officials.

But students, who led last year's movement, may need no outside urging. Students interviewed at two leading universities said they were planning go to Tiananmen Square either April 1 or April 5, with one adding, ''just to take a look around.''

According to Chinese sources, all workplaces, starting with Communist Party members, had until Friday to hold meetings instructing people to avoid Tiananmen Square between April 1 and April 5, the date of a major Chinese festival honoring the dead.

The directive, issued by Beijing municipal authorities, listed a total of 12 dates in all, from April 1 to June 4, connected with last spring's protests and their suppression.

Other workplaces have been told to ensure their employees stay inside in the event of unrest. Work unit officials in charge of security were ordered to file signed statements with the local police taking responsibility for employees' actions, sources said.

''I was warned to keep a low profile and avoid contact with foreigners because things are getting tense,'' said a Chinese source with public security contacts.

At a news conference Friday on preparations for this year's Beijing Asian Games, Beijing Mayor Chen Xitong denied any new security precautions. Asked about the warning to avoid the square, he replied, ''that's the first time I've heard of it.''

According to the Chinese sources, the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences distributed a government directive warning its professors and researchers to avoid contact with foreign diplomats or reporters without first receiving official permission from department heads.

At the height of the demonstrations, the centrally located academy headquarters was festooned with banners supporting student hunger strikers and demanding that top officials resign.

A major cause for official concern is Qing Ming, or ''Clear-Bright,'' an annual Chinese festival honoring the dead, which falls on April 5 this year. Families traditionally observe it by visiting ancestral graves, offering flowers and food in tribute.

In 1976, the festival was the spark for the so-called ''April 5'' incident when a spontaneous outpouring of sentiment for the popular Premier Zhou Enlai, who died three months before, exploded in riots in Tiananmen Square against the decade-old Cultural Revolution.

Last year's protests also began with tributes to the death of a popular leader, the former Communist Party chief, Hu Yaobang, who died April 15, 1989. Students began by laying funeral wreaths at a monument in Tiananmen Square to honor the liberal Hu.

The gatherings mushroomed into massive street demonstrations that became the greatest challenge to the communist government in its 40 years of power. The government declared martial law May 20 and ordered the army to open fire on demonstrators June 3.

With the memory of the crackdown still fresh, the government is apparently worried resentful Beijing residents will take advantage of Qing Ming to express dissent. Relatives of the hundreds killed in June are bitter at having been forbidden to openly mourn their dead.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 30) UPI - The Israeli Parliament approved a $31 billion budget Friday that provides increased housing funds needed because of an influx of Soviet immigrants.

Less than half of Israel's 120-member Parliament, the Knesset, voted on next fiscal year's budget, approving it 40-10 with eight abstentions.

Knesset members argued their final pleas Thursday, the last day of the parliamentary session before recess for the Jewish holiday of Passover. Voting on the budget had been planned for Thursday, but it was delayed until early Friday.

The lawmakers approved a last-minute plea by Housing Minister David Levy to transfer $100 million to his ministry's budget to finance 30,000 housing projects for new immigrants.

Haim Ramon, the Labor Party faction leader, demanded that the issue be referred back to the Knesset Finance Committee, fearing the money would be spent on building in the occupied territories, The Jerusalem Post reported. Ramon's proposal was rejected.

Left-wing opposition parties, backed by Labor, succeeded in defeating a bid by the right-wing Likud Party and religious factions to increase election allocations to parties by 65 percent, Army Radio reported.

In an attempt to find favor in the eyes of the religious parties and individual Knesset members following the current government crisis, both Labor and Likud supported granting more than $110 million to various institutions linked to those whose backing Israel's two major parties sought.

The Labor Party, headed by Shimon Peres, orchestrated a successful vote of no-confidence against Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the Likud Party on March 15, toppling the government two days after Shamir fired Peres from the ruling Likud-Labor coalition.

The coalition collapsed over disagreement on whether to accept a U.S. proposal on how to begin Israeli-Palestinian talks. Peres has received a presidential mandate to form Israel's next government, but Shamir is attempting to block the Labor leader's efforts and show he has more support to lead Israel.

The fact that the Israeli government fell shortly before debate on the budget led to the indiscriminate distribution of funds, in particular to the religious parties, sources in the finance ministry told the Yediot Aharonot newspaper.

David Boaz, head of the Finance Ministry's budget department, expressed concern that the huge state budget would have serious future implications on the country. The overall budget totaled $31 billion.

Last year's budget was $26 billion.

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 30) UPI - A study of Italian factory workers has found a link between a specific baldness pattern and increased risk of heart disease, scientists said Friday.

The finding, reported at an American Heart Association meeting by researchers from State University of New York (SUNY) at Buffalo, is the first scientific evidence to support a theory that baldness may be correlated with heart ailments, researchers said.

More than one-fourth of a group of 872 men from the Naples region had ''typical male-pattern baldness, with a receding hairline and a bald spot on the crown of the head,'' said Dr. Maurizio Trevisan, associate professor of social and preventive medicine at SUNY.

Those same 278 men ''had significantly higher cholesterol levels and diastolic blood pressures than the 273 men with only receding hairlines or the 321 men with full heads of hair,'' Trevisan, the leader of the study, reported.

Cholesterol levels and blood pressure are considered major risk factors for heart attacks, strokes and other cardiovascular disorders.

The findings were independent of age, body-fat distribution, smoking and alcohol consumption, Trevisan said. The three groups of men showed no real difference with respect to family history of heart disease, he said.

''Some people have thought baldness might be associated with increased risk of developing coronary heart disease but no one ever really examined this before,'' Trevisan said.

Presenting the findings at an annual AHA conference on cardiovascular disease epidemiology, Trevisan emphasized the data are preliminary and should not yet cause alarm among men with bald spots and receding hairlines.

''We can't say if you exhibit typical male pattern baldness, you're going to have a heart attack,'' he said.

The SUNY research team will continue to monitor the 872 workers, ages 20 to 65, most of whom have been part of a long-range study that began in 1975, he said.

Men in all three groups showed higher rates of risk factors over the ensuing 12 years but risk factors rose dramatically in workers with typical baldness patterns, said Trevisan.

''The differences 12 years ago were not as striking, so it's not a pattern that's always present. Whatever's there is becoming more apparent with increasing age,'' he said.

The researchers will examine the men over time to see which ones actually develop heart disease, the nation's No. 1 killer.

The SUNY team also will explore a hypothesis that male hormone production or sensitivity may play a role in cholesterol levels and blood pressures, Trevisan said.

ORANIENBURG, East Germany (MARCH 30) UPI - East German soldiers Friday started exhuming bodies from a mass grave thought to contain the remains of several hundred victims of Stalinist executions.

The soldiers had volunteered for the grisly task at the Oranienburg site of a former Soviet prisoner of war camp, one of several that recently have come to public attention in East Germany. The Soviets are thought to have used the camps to hold any German considered a security risk.

One soldier using a can to scrape at the dirt at the Oranienburg site shrugged his shoulders and asked, ''How are we supposed to dig here? They're piled up one on top of the other here like slaughtered animals. This is a very disgusting situation.''

Bones and skeletons as well as rusty identity tags and bullet cartridges were discovered shortly after the digging began at the site just north of East Berlin.

Between 1939 and 1950, 130,00 prisoners passed through security camps, first ran by the Nazis and later taken over by the occupying Red Army, in what is now East Germany. An estimated 65,000 people are believed to have been killed in the camps, many of them average citizens who were denounced by their neighbors.

Other mass graves believed to contain the remains of at least 2,000 victims were discovered earlier this week at a camp near the East German town of Neubrandenburg.

Witnesses who survived the special Soviet security camp near Oranienburg, which operated from 1945 to 1948, said prisoners were shot and dumped in pits.

''We used to hear machine guns being fired at night,'' said Kurt Mueller, 62, who at the time of the killings lived a mere 700 yards from the site. ''It went on for months and years. We heard big trucks and the stench of decay could be smelled right up to our houses.''

Mueller had been watching the digging for over an hour. He said he hoped that these findings will not ''spread new hate.''

Mueller, who only recently told the authorities what he knew of the camp, said Friday, ''This has nothing to do with hate but rather with historical truth - and there is only one truth.''

DETROIT (MARCH 30) UPI - The nation's leading automakers said Friday they plan to idle several assembly plants next week due to slow sales of some cars and trucks, while placing other plants on overtime to fill dealer orders, mostly for all-new 1991 models.

Chrysler Corp. said Friday it plans to idle its Sterling Heights, Mich., plant for one week starting Monday to trim higher than normal inventories of its compact Dodge Shadow and Plymouth Sundance cars. The move will affect about 2,300 hourly workers.

Company spokesman Doug Nicoll also confirmed that about 400 hourly workers would be indefinitely idled at its Jeep plant in Toledo, Ohio, in late April due to a 12 percent decline in vehicle output.

About 725 workers were to be idled this week at the Jeep plant, but Chrysler deferred those layoffs because of lower than expected inventories of the sport utility vehicles.

The No. 3 automaker said earlier this month it would also idle a total of 10,400 hourly workers at three other plants for one week starting Monday, also because of slow sales. Those plants include its Jeep facility in Toledo, Ohio; its large car plant in Belvidere, Ill.; and its mid-sized car plant in Newark, Del.

In January, Chrysler said about 750 workers each at Newark and Belvidere would be indefinitely idled late this month, but the carmaker deferred those cuts as well.

Chrysler has still not decided when or how many workers might be idled, Nicoll said. "But we know it will be nowhere near the number we talked about," he said.

Chrysler also plans to operate its minivan plants in Windsor, Ontario, and Fenton, Mo. on overtime during April, with the extra hours most likely to extend until this summer when they shut for four weeks each to change to a new 1991-model minivan that goes on sale this fall. The Windsor plant will be closed between June 22 and July 27, while the Fenton plant will be closed from July 20 until Aug. 24 for the changeover.

Ford Motor Co. will idle its Mustang car plant in Dearborn, Mich., and its Thunderbird/Cougar plant in Lorain, Ohio, for one week starting Monday because of a shortage of dealer orders for those cars.

But it will run several plants on overtime next week to fill orders for its new models, a company spokesman said, as well as run its Lorain, Ohio, van plant on overtime to meet demand for its Econoline model, popular with van converters.

Ford factories on overtime next week include its Wixom and Wayne, Mich., plants that build the luxury Town Car and new subcompact Escort, respectively. Also on overtime is its Louisville, Ky., plant that makes the new Explorer sport utility truck.

General Motors Corp. said Friday it plans to idle about 6,000 workers at its Oklahoma City, Okla. mid-sized car plant next week to prepare for a previously announced plan to reduce output from 1,157 to 1,024 cars a day.

Less than 600 workers will be placed in a jobs bank with full pay during the next several weeks because of those reductions, said GM spokeswoman Sharon Hines.

BOGOTA, Colombia (MARCH 30) UPI - President Virgilio Barco's government denied in a statement published Friday that it held peace talks with the Medellin cocaine cartel, pledging it has not backed down in its fight against drug traffickers.

The cartel said Thursday a dialogue with ''direct representatives of President Barco'' in January had resulted in the release of several hostages, including a presidential adviser's son, and the conditional surrender of the cartel.

The government, which has said it refused to negotiate with the drug lords and demanded an unconditional surrender, denied the allegations in a communique signed by members of Barco's Cabinet and published in Bogota newspapers Friday.

''There has not been any contacts, official or unofficial, between the government and persons representing drug trafficking groups, much less have there been pacts, treaties or agreements between the government and the drug traffickers,'' the communique said.

''In no moment and under no circumstances has the national government compromised the interests of the country,'' it said.

''There have not been agreements of any nature that threaten the juridical order of the state or damage the dignity of the nation,'' it said.

The government also announced in the communique that 844 drug suspects had been arrested, almost 10 tons of cocaine siezed, and 47 drug laboratories destroyed so far this year.

The communique was published two days after two industrialists announced they represented the family of presidential aide German Montoya in negotiations for the release of his son, Alvaro Diego, kidnapped by the Medellin cartel in December.

The cartel alleged the Barco administration sent the industrialists, Santiago Londono White and J. Mario Aristizabal Correa, to negotiate the son's release.

But the government communique said, ''The government reiterates that these men acted on their own initiative to obtain the liberation of Dr. Alvaro Diego Montoya. They did not represent the government.''

On Jan. 16, the Medellin cartel, weakened by a government crackdown and the death of drug military man Jose Rodriguez Gacha, admitted defeat and offered to surrender in return for a no extradition guarantee from the government.

On Jan. 22, Montoya was released in Bogota.

Since Jan 23, there has been a two-month lull in extraditions to the United States or major drug busts, fueling speculation the government had secretly agreed to stop sending suspected traffickers to U.S. courts in return for a cartel cease-fire.

But the government Wednesday ended a two-month lull in extraditions by handing over Fernando Gutierrez Perez, wanted in Arizona, to U.S. drug enforcement agents.

Gutierrez Perez, 40, was indicted in Phoenix in May 1987 on charges he helped import 1,256 pounds of cocaine into the United States, U.S. marshals said.

The latest development follows the resignation Sunday by Interior Minister Carlos Lemos Simmonds who resigned saying the Barco government of backing down in the drug war.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (MARCH 30) UPI - NASA managers Friday began a critical two-day meeting to review the shuttle Discovery's launch processing and to clear the ship for blastoff in two weeks to ferry the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope into orbit.

Engineers at launch pad 39B, meanwhile, completed installation of a replacement main engine computer amid work to finish hooking up the telescope to Discovery's power and computer command systems in the shuttle's cargo bay.

The costly payload was installed in the shuttle's payload bay Thursday and while it took longer than expected to complete the electrical connections, launch of the year's third shuttle flight remains on track for 9:21 a.m. Apr. 12.

But Discovery's launch processing has gone so well that agency managers are debating whether to move the flight up two days to Apr. 10.

Sources have said, however, that ''political'' considerations, including arrangements for VIPs, could prompt NASA to stick with the original Apr. 12 launch date.

The issue was expected to be settled Saturday with the announcement of an official launch date at the conclusion of a two-day flight readiness review chaired by William Lenoir, NASA's associate administrator for space flight.

For a launch on Apr. 10, Discovery's countdown would begin at 3 p.m. Apr. 7. The countdown would begin at the same time Apr. 9 if NASA picks Apr. 12.

NASA spokesman George Diller said work at the launch pad to ready the space telescope for flight was proceeding smoothly and that minor problems completing its electrical hookups would not have any impact on routine processing.

Engineers plan to conduct a 2 1/2-hour ''confidence test'' starting Sunday to put the telescope's electrical systems through their paces to make sure the instrument will be ready for flight. After that, technicians will charge up the telescope's batteries for liftoff.

Discovery's veteran four-man, one-woman crew, meanwhile, is in the final stages of flight training at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Commander Loren Shriver, 45, co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43, Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38, completed a final dress-rehearsal simulation of launch and the telescope deployment earlier this week. All that remains is routine launch and landing practice.

If all goes well, the astronauts will fly to the Kennedy Space Center three days before takeoff for final preparations.

The Hubble Space Telescope, the most expensive civilian satellite ever built, is expected to revolutionize humanity's knowledge of the universe once it begins operations 380 miles above Earth's turbulent atmosphere.

Equipped with five primary instruments, including two high-tech cameras, the space telescope will allow astronomers to see deeper into the universe than ever before and with 10 times the clarity of ground-based instruments.

SOFIA, Bulgaria (MARCH 30) UPI - Government and opposition leaders agreed Friday on June 10 as the date for Bulgaria's first free parliamentary elections since 1931.

Delegates to the round-table talks formally signed agreements following seven hours of heated discussions on whether the current head of state, Peter Mladenov, should be called ''president'' or ''chairman.''

The agreement on the other main issue, the date of the elections, was reached in seven minutes. Runoff elections will be held June 17.

The last truly free elections in Bulgaria were in June 1931. They were won by a coalition of leftist parties called the People's Bloc.

By the November 1945 elections, it was only possible to express disapproval of the communist-dominated government list. Some voters were excluded because of their wartime activities, and although voting was theoretically secret, electoral fraud and violence were so common that a negative vote was difficult to cast.

The Gordian knot in Friday's round-table discussions proved to be a semantic interpretation of the word ''president.'' Opposition leaders opposed the term on grounds that in the Bulgarian language it has a psychological effect, suggesting authoritarian power.

The Communist Party argued for the word, saying it was universally accepted.

The seven-hour war of words was somewhat esoteric. The functions and prerogatives of the head of state were explicitly formulated by experts from both sides. And in any case the final decision will be up to the 400-member National Assembly, whose prime task will be to draft and adopt a new constitution.

Nevertheless, the talks ended with an interim compromise: the head of state will be called ''chairman (president).''

After removing that stumbling block, the participants quickly approved the June 10 election date.

Then they solemnly signed agreements on a package of draft laws on political parties, on the format for making amendments to the constitution and on the election of the next National Assembly.

The package will be offered at the present assembly, which is expected to approve it during its current session.

One task of the future assembly will be how to choose Bulgaria's first democratically elected president.

Members of the communist government favor the direct election of the president, while the main opposition group, the Union of Democratic Forces has argued that the head of state should be elected by Parliament.

The People's Bloc coalition, the last democratically elected government, was toppled by a military coup in 1934, followed the next year by establishment of an authoritarian regime under King Boris III, which lasted into World War II and during which its parliament held only consultative powers.

Following the war, the communists monopolized several key government positions and conducted a ruthless purge of opponents and executions. They obtained a majority in the 1946 general elections and by 1948 abolished all other parties or merged them into the communist-dominated Fatherland Front.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Three senators telephoned Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis on Friday to say they support his independence efforts and to urge him not to be provoked by the Soviet leadership.

Sens. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., Connie Mack, R-Fla., and Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, spoke with Landsbergis, Lithuanian Vice President Bronius Kuzmickas and Aigimantas Cekuolis, a member of the Lithuanian Parliament.

''Don't let them provoke you. That's what they're attempting to do,'' D'Amato told Landsbergis.

''When they send the tanks in, they would have us believe it's like the new Welcome Wagon. Well, it's not. They're tanks. And when they come to your homes to take your arms, it's not enlightened gun control. So we're with you,'' the New York Republican said.

D'Amato suggested Landsbergis hold a referendum on independence, but the president said his region has already declared its independence, making a referendum unnecessary.

Vice President Kuzmickas said he appreciated the senators' support.

''Thank you very much ... for coming out and voicing your opinion here in the West and we really appreciate it and look forward to more Western opinion, especially here in the U.S. Senate,'' he said.

''I would say,'' Mack said, ''there is a solidarity in this country of the American people with the people of Lithuania in their drive for freedom and their drive for independence.''

D'Amato and Murkowski have accepted Landsbergis' invitation to visit Lithuania and have requested visas. Mack said he had a schedule conflict and could not go.

But Murkowski said a Soviet Embassy official said it would be ''unlikely'' they could get visas by Tuesday, when the senators want to leave.

''Our intelligence sources say the Soviets are banning all foreign travel (to Lithuania),'' said Murkowski. He and D'Amato sit on the Senate Intelligence Committee.

''They're talking about freedom and they say they want to give it. Let's see if they'll let two U.S. senators come and visit and see for themselves

'' D'Amato said.

LONDON (MARCH 30) UPI - Stock prices closed lower in lackluster trading Friday on the London International stock exchange.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 12.0 points Thursday, closed off 15.1 points to 2,247.9. For the week, the key index which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, fell 36.0 points.

The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 12.9 points to 1,768.7 and fell 26.4 points for the week. Volume amounted to around 453 million shares compared with 435 million shares changing hands on Thursday.

Analysts said some early buying, inspired by the British pound's strength on major foreign currency markets and gains on the German bond market, dried up late in the session, sending prices lower.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Pearson, the publishing company, gained eight cents to $11.13 after reporting its pretax profits climbed 26 percent. Reed International gained 14 cents to $6.65 in sympathy with Pearson's results.

Maxwell Communications added 4 cents to $3 amid an optimistic trading statement and forecast of a higher dividend.

Communications equipment maker STC lost nine cents to $3.92 after broker Kleinwort Benson lowered its forecast of the company's earnings.

In the oil patch, Enterprise Oil ten cents $9.79 on reports that it may have found oil in the sea off Vietnam and London & Scottish Marine Oil gained 21 cents to $9.60.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker, urging development of a post-Cold War foreign policy, said Friday that support of fledgling democracies around the world is the key to global peace.

In the text of a speech prepared for delivery to the Dallas World Affairs Council, Baker said, ''Beyond containment lies democracy. The time of sweeping away the old dictators is passing fast; the time of building up the new democracies has arrived.''

As Baker described it, democracy not only responds to the aspirations of the people around the world, it also makes that world safer for the United States and other countries.

He said, ''Free peoples cherishing democratic values are unlikely to go to war with one another.''

The Dallas speech, broadly ideological and containing few specifics, is one of a series of broad outlines that Baker has presented, including a speech in West Berlin in December and Prague in February, laying out the administration's foreign policy at a time when the Soviet Union and its former satellites are undergoing sweeping changes.

Specifically on the Soviet Union, Baker said, ''We have an interest in perestroika (restructuring) which goes beyond geopolitics. If perestroika results in a more democratic and open Soviet society, with individual rights and economic progress, then the impact on Soviet foreign policy for the long run will be highly beneficial. Democracy in the Soviet Union is, in my view, the best guarantee of a constructive Soviet approach to international problems.''

He made no specific mention of the tension between the Soviet Union and Lithuania, which is seeking more political independence.

A senior State Department official, briefing reporters on condition he not be identified, said one reason for giving the speech now is to try to influence domestic debate over post-Cold War foreign policy goals.

The official said it is an attempt to answer some who think the United States should return to a course of neo-isolationism now that the Soviet military and political menace is reduced, while others argue for a new and stronger role for the United States.

''A strategy of simply applauding elections and then hoping for the best ignores the painful lessons of the past,'' Baker said.

''Only a strategy that buttresses democracy with economic reforms and greater international security can give us the strength for the tough transitions that will transform the revolutions of 1989 into the democracies of the '90s.''

He argued that a world that draws on American political values will automatically make American influence more pervasive.

Referring to those who want the United States to become the predominant force through aid, Baker said, ''Others seem to believe that if we are not the biggest contributors, if we do not micro-manage every aid program, then somehow America is no longer a leader.''

''To work with our allies is not a sign of American weakness,'' he said. ''It is a proof of our strength. ... We can lead today even more effectively then we did (in the 1940s) because democracy is on the march.''

PICKERING, ONTARIO (MARCH 30) UPI - Canada will speed up the lifting of tariffs on more than 400 items worth $5.1 billion in trade between Canada and the United States, an official said Friday.

Otto Jelinek, Canada's minister of national revenue, said that effective Apr. 1 tariffs on some 400 goods including honey, frozen cranberries, photographic film, food processors, diesel locomotives and snowshoes will be lifted at a quick pace.

''The tariff reductions will benefit Canadian manufacturers and consumers alike,'' Jelinek said. ''Tariff reductions on materials used as inputs in manufacturing will reduce costs for Canadian manufacturers.''

Under the Canada-U.S. free trade agreement, which came into effect Jan. 1, 1989, all tariffs on Canadian and U.S. goods traded between the two countries were eliminated immediately or phased-out in five or 10 year stages.

The accelerated reductions were requested by private sector companies on both sides of the border.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - The Senate Banking Committee voted narrowly Friday to send the nomination of Timothy Ryan, picked by President Bush to be the nation's top thrift regulator, to the Senate.

The 11-10 vote gave Ryan an apparent reprieve after his disappointing testimony at his confirmantion hearing Wednesday.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, the ranking Republican on the committee, said he is pleased Ryan's nomination will go to the Senate floor and added he does not believe it will turn into a partisan fight.

''I think it's fair the full Senate has consideration on this,'' Garn said. ''I think it will be a fair debate out there.''

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., the committee's chairman, said he expects the Senate to consider Ryan's nomination after it finishes consideration of the clean air bill now on the floor. Riegle said the Senate could take action on Ryan either on late Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

Ryan, 44, a former Labor Department lawyer, was nominated by Bush to head the Office of Thrift Supervision.

His nomination is controversial because he has little experience in the thrift industry, reeling from substantial financial losses and scandal. Ryan even said he was surprised when asked to accept the nomination.

''We won!'' White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater exclaimed to an aide after being notified of the vote.

Fitzwater, who just hours earlier, in anticipation of a possible rejection discussed with reporters the possiblity of having to search for a replacement nominee, said of Ryan: ''We think he is a good candidate.''

He said, ''We've got to move forward quickly. ... We're hoping he will get fast confirmation by the full Senate. We will talk to members and try to get him confirmed as soon as possible.''

Asked if he was surprised by the vote, Fitzwater smiled and said, ''We had confidence all along.''

Riegle said Thursday he told the Bush administration a ''substantial possibility existed'' that the committee would reject the nomination.

Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., a member of the committee, responding to Riegle's assessment of defeat for Ryan's nomination said, ''that's an understatement. I wouldn't want to be counting for the administration.''

Two other committee members, Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., and John Kerry, D-Mass., announced their opposition Thursday.

''There's no time for spring training on this job,'' said Graham. ''It's opening day already, and everyone is watching.''

Riegle said the committee is looking for ''someone with exceptional qualifications ... someone out of the world of finance with an established track record.''

Ryan was nominated last week, just days after a federal district judge found that former OTS director M. Danny Wall and his temporary replacement Salvatore Martoche, were appointed illegally because they were not approved by the Senate.

Last Friday a federal appeals court granted the government a 30-day emergency stay of the lower court's ruling.

Government lawyers argued that Lamberth's decision threatened to throw the government's thrift rescue effort into chaos until a permanent director is confirmed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - President Bush said Friday he sent a message to Mikhail Gorbachev to make certain the Soviet president understands that the United States firmly supports ''self-determination'' for rebellious Lithuania.

Bush, who has been criticized for failing to speak out forcefully on the situation, said he was prompted to write to Gorbachev by ''just this continued feeling of staying in touch and to being sure that there is no disconnect because of misinformation.''

''Our views on the question of self-determination and all that are well known around the world,'' Bush said.

''But I do not want to risk misunderstanding by failing to communicate,'' he added.

Bush, speaking during a picture-taking session, said Gorbachev had not yet responded to his ''confidential'' message, delivered through diplomatic channels.

The communication was first revealed by White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, who said Bush also emphasized that the conflict between Moscow and Vilnius over Lithuania's bid for independence from the Soviet Union must be resolved peacefully.

Fitzwater said Bush's message, sent Thursday, was prompted by ''a number of factors,'' including what Bush learned during an unannounced talk at the White House with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who has just returned from Moscow.

The message ''clearly stated (Bush's) support and the American peoples' support for the aspirations of the Lithuanian people for self-determination,'' Fitzwater said. ''We stated our belief and our emphatic view'' that the problem should be resolved through ''peaceful dialogue,'' he added.

Fitzwater had told reporters Thursday that Bush had not contacted Gorbachev regarding Lithuania, saying, ''The president simply feels this is not the time to make direct contact with Gorbachev.''

That comment came after he disclosed Bush had telephoned British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to seek her views after Thatcher has a one-hour phone conversation with Gorbvachev.

There had been some press speculation the United States, eager to support Gorbachev's reform efforts, was trying to avoid a confrontation with the Kremlin over the issue that could strengthen the hand of Gorbachev's internal foes.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis implored Congress on Thursday to recognize Lithuania's independence as part of the general liberation of Eastern Europe. The United States has never recognized the 1940 Soviet annexation of the three small Baltic states - Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Kennedy, who met with Gorbachev Monday, told The Washington Post the Soviet leader had complained that ''his efforts at perestroika are being undermined by Western criticism of his actions toward Lithuania.''

Gorbachev ''is feeling the pressure from the United States intensely, Western Europe as well, but not not as intensely,'' Kennedy said, and the Soviet leader is feeling the heat from other Kremlin leaders who want to crack down on Lithuania.

Explaining the timing of Bush's letter, Fitzwater said Friday, ''The president thought it was timely to lay out our position. It was an accumulation of information. ... The president felt it was time for a message.''

As for criticism the president has not done enough to support Lithuania, Fitzwater said, ''We believe our supporters far outweigh our critics. We believe our position is fully understood.''

HASBAHYA, Lebanon (MARCH 30) UPI - A ranking Iranian-backed Islamic ldaher urged the United States Friday to accede to the Lebanese hostage-takers' conditions for the release of 18 kidnapped Westerners.

Islamic Amal Movement leader Hussein Musawi made the plea following reports that he held clandestine talks earlier this week with the brother of Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani somewhere in Syrian-policed eastern Lebanon.

''The conditions of the captors are just,'' said the leader of the Shiite Moslem extremist militia group, an offshoot of the Tehran-financed Hezbollah organization and a rival of the more mainstream Syrian-backed Amal movement.

''The hostage issue will be complicated in the case that concerned states do not offer a response to the captors' demands,'' the gray-bearded fundamentalist leader told the Hezbollah-operated Voice of the Oppressed radio.

''Those who have kept the hostages for a year, two or five years, will not let them go without anything in return,'' Musawi said in the broadcast monitored in in this town 37 miles southeast of Beirut.

''The Americans and other parties concerned in the hostages plight should consider the demands of these people,'' he said. ''The captors' conditions are just, regardless of the hostages issue. They include releasing the detainees in Kuwait and Israeli prisons, Shiites and others.''

Islamic Jihad, which holds Americans Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, has called repeatedly for the freeing of 16 Shiites imprisoned in Kuwait for their role in bombing Kuwaiti and Western targets in the sheikhdom.

Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which holds American professors Alann Steen, Jessy Turner and Robert Polhill, has demanded the release of 400 Shiites and Palestinians imprisoned in Israel.

Three other Americans, Frank Reed, Joseph Cicippio and Edward Tracy, are held by other shadowy groups that have called for ''an end to the U.S. role in Lebanon.'' In all, 18 foreigners kidnapped Lebanon are being held hostage.

Musawi, whose militiamen patrol some eastern Lebanese villages, emphatically denied reponsibility for holding the Americans or the other foreigners.

''In fact, neither Islamic Amal nor Hezbollah has any thing to do with the hostages. I mean they are not holding captives,'' he said.

The hostages are being held ''by some security cells that act independently and privately,'' he said. ''These groups do not take orders from either Hezbollah or Islamic Amal.''

But Musawi acknowledged the hostages were being kept in secret hideouts on Lebanese territory. ''These cells are present in Lebanon, and most of them are Shiites,'' he said.

The extremist leader refuted a series of reports over the past three years that some of the captives had been taken discreetly to Iran. Some reports said the captives were put in coffins and moved through Syrian.

The call on Washington to meet the captors' demands came a day after the Lebanese daily newspaper Ad Diyar reported that Musawi held clandestine talks with Mahmoud Rafsanjani, the Iranian president's brother, in eastern Lebanon.

Ad Diyar, which has close links with the Syrians, said Mahmoud Rafsanjani also met Hezbollah leaders during the secret visit.

Ad Diyar quoted sources as saying Rafsanjani's visit was part of efforts by the Iranian president to win the hostages' freedom.

The Iranian president is believed to favor ending the hostages' plight as a step in his policy of improving relations with the West, but his influence is limited by Iran's leading hard-liners, who wield more control over Hebzollah and the hostage takers.

CAIRO, Egypt (MARCH 30) UPI - Saudi Arabia Friday denied bankrolling Iraq's nuclear program, despite King Fahd's reported acceptance last year of Iraq's highest decoration for a pledge to help reconstruct an Iraqi nuclear reactor.

The official Saudi Press Agency quoted a Saudi government source as ''categorically denying'' a report that the oil-rich kingdom was financing Iraq's nuclear program.

''The kingdom has never made a commitment or promised to help finance any nuclear program by any country,'' the news agency quoted the government source as saying. ''Saudi Arabia has repeatedly declared its denunciation of the use of nuclear arms and nuclear proliferation.''

Authorities in Britain Wednesday intercepted 40 components for nuclear trigger devices they said were bound for Iraq.

An 18-month investigation by U.S. and British customs agents resulted in confiscation of the components and the arrests of five people in raids at London's Heathrow Airport, an Iraqi Airways office and the suburban headquarters of Euromac, an export firm.

Iraq denied seeking the restricted materials and accused Britain of mounting a slander campaign against Iraq.

King Fahd, during an official visit to Iraq last year, was quoted in the Arab press as saying that the kingdom would help bankroll Iraq's nuclear program after Israeli jets in 1981 bombed an Iraqi nuclear reactor under construction near Baghdad.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein then awarded Fahd with Iraq's highest decoration in appreciation for Saudi Arabia's commitment to finance the reconstruction of the reactor. The Saudis did not deny the report at the time.

It was not immediately known how much Saudi money has gone to help Iraq's nuclear project, but one banker based in the Persian Gulf said the amount was ''billions of dollars.''

Thursday, Arab diplomats in Cairo said Saudi Arabia's growing concern about Iran persuaded King Fahd to brush aside earlier reservations about providing Iraq with aid after the eight-year war against Iraq.

Although Iraq is one of the world's largest oil producers, its war-shattered economy is short of cash.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 30) UPI - Israeli Arabs and Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories attended rallies and observed general strikes Friday, Land Day, to protest land confiscation, oppose Jewish immigration and demand an independent Palestinian state.

In the most serious incident of the day, 10 Israeli policemen were wounded including one stabbed in the back, during clashes with Arabs suspected of throwing stones in the Israeli Arab village of Taibe, police said. Three Arabs also were wounded in other stone-throwing incidents in the Galilee.

Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat, in a cable read to a rally in the Israeli Arab village of Kfar Kanna, greeted the ''national forces who fight for the rights of the brethren in the Palestinian territories.''

Arafat also promised to continue peace efforts to end the shedding of Arab and Jewish blood in the Middle East, said the cable read by Israeli Arab Parliament member Abd-El Wahab Darousha.

To mark Land Day, local Arab councils called for the general strike by Arab residents in Israel, while the Palestinian uprising's underground leadership urged the work stoppage in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israeli police stepped up security in the Israeli Arab communities and Jerusalem Friday, dispatching nearly 6,000 policemen to thwart disturbances.

As for the occupied territories, roadblocks stopped residents from the West Bank from entering Jerusalem, four West Bank towns were declared closed military areas and the Gaza Strip remained under a curfew imposed early Thursday.

With the Gaza curfew and several West Bank communities under curfew, more than 650,000 Palestinians were confined to their homes. Several demonstrations occurred in West Bank villages but no major clashes were reported with Israeli soldiers, Palestinian sources said.

Friday prayers at the Al-Aqsa Mosque and Dome of the Rock, one of Islam's holiest sites, passed without trouble as Israeli security forces confiscated identification cards of younger Arabs to discourage violence.

Thousands of Israeli Arab residents from the Galilee participated in marches to the village of Arraba to mark Land Day, set aside in 1976 to protest the Israeli government's expropriation of thousands of acres of land in northern Galilee. Six demonstrators were killed during the original Land Day.

''We, the Arabs inside the green line, consider ourselves an inseparable part of the Palestinian people and our national duty is to help those who fight for their freedom and the establishment of an independent state in occupied Palestine,'' Mohammed A-Ares told the Kfar Kanna rally.

In the Bedouin town of Rahat, about 40 miles south of Jerusalem, Mayor Jumh'a Kasasi told a crowd of several hundred the Bedouins would resist efforts to confiscate land and act to ''freeze any activity to pull us from our roots.''

Israel has been trying to resettle Bedouins in seven towns, including Rahat.

Approximately 10,000 Israeli Arabs turned out for the major Land Day rally in Arraba, near Nazareth. Observers said the slogans raised in Arrabe and the other Galilee demonstrations were more radical than during past Land Day protests.

''The hand of the murderers who occupy the occupied Palestine must be paralyzed,'' said one placard. Another poster said, ''The uprising must be won. The Palestinian flag will be hoisted over Arab Jerusalem.''

Speakers called for a Palestinian state and talks with the PLO and urged a halt to Jewish immigration. One placard said that ''Jewish immigration would be on the account of Arab land and the rights of Arab workers.''

Raja Hatib, an organizer of the day's events in the Galilee, reiterated the Israeli Arabs' identification with the Palestinians in the territories but sought peace for all sides.

''We the Israeli Arabs want peace, and want to be the bridge, the true bridge, for peace between the two nations,'' Hatib said.

Since the start of the 27-month-old Palestinian uprising, at least 648 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli soldiers or civilians. More than 200 other Palestinians have been killed by other Palestinians who suspected them of collaboration with Israeli authorities or immoral behavior.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) UPI - A spokesman for the Allied Printing Trades Council said Friday there will be no strike at the New York Daily News when the tabloid's contracts with ten unions expire at midnight.

"There will not be a strike," said Deborah Friedman, spokeswoman for the council. "We have negotiations scheduled into April, so there will be business as usual. There is no talk of a strike at this time," she said. The council is a coalition of the unions negotiating new contracts with the Daily News.

Friedman said the newspaper's negotiations Thursday with the Newspaper Guild, representing news, advertising and office workers, and the Drivers' Union, representing delivery truck drivers, "did not bear fruit" and brought the parties no nearer to contracts.

Negotiators have been trying to forge contracts for 2,800 employees at the nation's largest metropolitan newspaper since January. Members of six of the ten unions have given their leadership authority to call a strike if they deem it necessary.

Management, meanwhile, prepared advertisements to run Sunday for replacement drivers, pressmen, reporters, and advertising and circulation employees. Ads for mailer jobs ran last week.

George McDonald, head of the council, has said repeatedly the unions are opposed to a strike. "We're disappointed that it's moving so slow," McDonald said. "There has been little progress with any of the unions. Part of it has to do with the fact that management is not made up of newspaper people. When they talk, they don't know the conditions."

Officials at the Chicago-based Tribune Co., parent of the News, have insisted the paper's workers accept cuts in jobs, overtime pay, and benefits if the 71-year-old tabloid, which has a circulation of 1.2 million copies, is to survive.

John Sloan, the newspaper's vice president and spokesman, has said current contracts allowed for overmanning and featherbedding that has been financially disastrous over the years.

Sloan vowed the newspaper would continue to publish in case of a strike, supported by advertisers who "would put their own financial houses in order under the same circumstances."

The News reported Friday that security guards walk through the seventh-floor newsroom at intervals and that doors have been erected to provide extra security for the composing room. There also is a new security post outside the office of publisher James Hoge, the newspaper said.

In addition, the News and officials of the Helmsley Hotel next door have agreed to secure an alley between the buildings so replacement workers can get to work without crossing picket lines.

With the expiration of contracts, management has the right to end certain agreements with the unions. McDonald said he expects management to stop deducting union dues from paychecks and to end job-security provisions.

Union leaders won't say what they would do if management declares an impasse that would end talks. If an impasse was declared and management made the changes it is trying to win through negotiations, layoffs could follow - something that could cause the unions to move off their no-strike declaration, McDonald said.

WARSAW, Poland (MARCH 30) UPI - The Polish government said Friday it will offer ''humanitarian aid'' to Jews emigrating from the Soviet Union to Israel via Poland, but stressed that Palestinians have a right to their own state.

Government spokeswoman Malgorzata Niezabitowska reiterated the promise made by Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazopwiecki to the American Jewish Congress during his eight-day visit to the United States that Poland would not hesitate to airlift the Jews.

''In the Middle Ages and later during the Renaissance, Poland helped Jews persecuted in other European countries,'' Niezabitowska said. ''Poland will not decline humanitarian aid to Jewish emigrants from the Soviet Union.''

A spokesman for the Polish airline LOT confirmed talks are under way to schedule flights.

''We have already been conducting talks on the security of the possible flights,'' the spokesman said.

The Solidarity newspaper Gazeta Wyborcza said Poles working in the Arab countries might become a target of terrorists in retaliation for the decision.

''The Polish Foreign Ministry fears terrorist attacks on 10,000 Poles employed in Arab countries and is working on methods of protecting them,'' the newspaper said Friday.

The Arab nations oppose the settlement of Jews in territories occupied by Israel since the Six-Day War in 1967.

The Hungarian airline, Malev, suspended flights to Isreal last week following terrorist threats but the Malev director was fired Thursday and his decision reversed by the government.

The Malev office in Moscow had sold at least 1,300 tickets for flights to Tel Aviv.

''We appreciate the (Polish) decision very much,'' a spokesman for the Isreali Embassy in Warsaw said.

In her statement, Niezabitowska also referred to Poland's continued support for the right of Palestinians to have their own state.

''I want to stress that this does not change our approach to Palestinian nation's right to have their own state,'' she said. ''We are for a peaceful and prompt solving of the Middle East conflict.''

Turning to the international aspect of the Lithuanain crisis, the spokeswoman said Poland might also offer its services or mediation between Vilnius and Moscow ''should the Lithuanian side ask for it.''

''We know that (Lithuanian President) Vytautas Landsbergis has announced he would send a letter to Mazowiecki but the letter has not come.'' she said. ''There is readiness on our side.''

TORONTO (MARCH 30) UPI - Campeau Corp., whose U.S. retailing units are operating under protection from their creditors, said Friday it will be unable to pay $19 million in interests due on two series of debentures.

The troubled corporation said it will try to negotiate a deferral of the interest payments, due Mar. 31.

Campeau announced it will not pay $5.8 million in interest due on its 7.5 percent subordinated convertible debentures, series A, nor nearly $13 million due on its 7 percent convertible subordinated debentures.

Richard Wertheim, a spokesman for Campeau, said the decision not to make the payments was a course of action decided by senior management and the board of directors.

''I think again it is a matter of managing your cash and deciding where the principal focus should be at this point,'' he added.

''Could we pay?'' Wertheim said. ''That's getting increasingly difficult to explain.

''In the sense that at any given time you may have a certain amount of cash on hand and say we could use it for this purpose or that purpose. So I can't say that we didn't. On the other hand, I'm not prepared to say that we did.''

The publicly traded 7.5 percent debentures were valued at $156 million when issued in September 1987.

The 7 percent debentures, entirely owned by one of Campeau's major shareholders and creditors, Olympia & York Developments Ltd., were valued at $260 million when issued in March 1988. Interest on this issue was amended to 9.875 percent in September, 1989.

Interest is paid semi-annually on both issues.

Frank Mayer, a real estate analyst at BBN James Capel Inc., said it was increasingly difficult to interpret Campeau's actions.

''I just don't know what's happening there,'' Mayer said. ''I doubt if any analyst does.''

''If the interest payment is not made or deferred by April 30, a default will occur under the debentures,'' Campeau warned in a brief statement.

The debt-ridden ret'i' and real estate corporation said it ''intends to pursue discussions towards obtaining a deferral of the payment.''

Investors on the Toronto Stock Exchange responded by driving Campeau's stock price down 21 cents from the opening to $1.40 at midday, with more than 95,000 shares changing hands.

Friday morning's trading activity set a new 52-week low. Last September, Campeau traded as high as $18.91.

Wertheim said shareholders obviously are nervous but its in their best interest if management works out a plan for the viable operation of the business over the long term.

He said there is simply nothing Campeau can do right now to boost the price.

Wertheim said the corporation's major focus is negotiating a long-term restructuring plan with its major lenders, Olympia & York and The Edward J. DeBartolo Corp. of Youngstown, Ohio.

He said Campeau was hopeful of having a new business plan in place before long but declined to forecast when that might be.

Campeau said Mar. 8 it was in default on $705 million in loans after failing to reach a deal to defer more than $5 million in interest payments to Olympia & York and DeBartolo.

Campeau elected not to make $1.7 million in interest payments to Olympia & York and $3.5 million owed to DeBartolo.

On Jan. 15, Campeau's Federated Department Stores Inc. and Allied Stores Corp. units filed for protection from creditors under the Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. The filing was made in federal bankruptcy court in Cincinnati.

Wertheim said Campeau's 1989 fourth-quarter and year-end results are not likely to be released before June, when the company is legally obligated to do so.

(MARCH 30) UPI - TODAYS' PEOPLE:

NEW ROYALTY: Princess Eugenie Victoria Helena, the newborn daughter of Prince Andrew and the former Sarah Ferguson, slept through her first media appearance. Fergie emgerged from Portland Hospital Friday carrying the baby, who will be officially known as Princess Eugenie of York, and set off a great snapping of shutters by the 100 photographers staking out the hospital. ''Thanks very much for the flowers,'' Fergie told cheering well-wishers. Eugenie weighed 7 pounds 1 1/2-ounces when she was delivered by Caesarean section Mar. 23 and her first name comes from one of Queen Victoria's grandchildren. ''The reverence for Queen Victoria and her family by the duke and duchess of York clearly indicates the possibility of a much larger family for them in the near future and probably many more repetitions of Queen Victoria's choices for children's names,'' said Harold Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burke's Peerage, bible of the aristocracy.

MOVIE MISHAP: Movie director Steven Hopkins was rather contrite Friday on ''Good Morning America.'' The day before he stunned the people at ''Good Morning America'' by brusquely dragging actor Rueben Blades off the set in the middle of Blades's live interview with Joan Lunden. Hopkins apologized Friday by saying he got carried away and needed Blades to shoot a scene for ''Predator II'' before the sun came up in Los Angeles. ''Unfortunately I suddenly interupted your interview and I apologize for that,'' Hopkins told Lunden, ''and I kind of humiliated Rueben on national TV, which is a kind of dumb thing to do.'' Blades said he received many calls about the incident and soothed those who thought the Thursday incident had racial overtones because he is Latin. ''Some people said, 'Why didn't you slap him,''' Blades said, ''but why would I make a situation that was already awkward more difficult?'' Lunden signed off the followup interview by telling Hopkins, ''Steven, there are other ways to get on national television.''

MAKING ROYAL CHANGE: Another decade means another commemorative coin for Britain's queen mum. The government will mint a 5-pound coin (worth $8.22) to mark the 90th birthday of Queen Mother Elizabeth, whose daughter is Queen Elizabeth II, on Aug. 4. A similar commemorative coin was minted for the queen mother's 80th birthday. The last crown coin was minted in 1981 to commemorate the wedding of Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

MUTED MUTI: Riccardo Muti, music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, is laying down his baton. ''After much soul-searching, I have arrived at the decision not to renew my contract,'' Muti said. ''I find I cannot continue to spend the amount of time here that I have over the past decade. I feel that I need more time for my personal life. Therefore, it is not fair to the orchestra for me to try and maintain the title of music director while devoting fewer weeks to the responsibility of the position.'' Muti agreed to accept the title of laureate conductor of the orchestra. ''I am pleased that as laureate conductor I will continue my collaboration with the orchestra through recording projects and performances in the Academy of Music and the new concert hall,'' he said. The orchestra's board of directors set up a search committee to make recommendations for a successor.

LAINE PAIN: Singer Frankie Laine, whose hits included ''Mule Train'' and the theme for ''Rawhide,'' spent his 77th birthday in a St. Louis hospital but said he felt great anyway. Laine was to have performed in St. Louis Tuesday night but suffered chest pains, which he says were related to the bypass operation he had in 1985. ''I feel marvelous,'' Laine said Friday. ''Ever since they picked me up and brought me in, I feel great.'' Doctors administered tests and put Laine on medication and he hopes to be released Tuesday. Friends and family have been calling with birthday and get-well wishes and his wife, former actress Nan Grey, was due in Friday night at the hospital. ''They're setting up a gourmet dinner for us to celebrate my birthday,'' Laine said. ''This is a great hospital and a great staff. They've been so good to me. If it had to happen, I'm glad it happened here.''

SYRACUSE, NY (MARCH 30) UPI - Chase Lincoln First Bank and Citibank said Friday they have reached an agreement in principle by which Chase Lincoln will acquire nine Citibank branch offices in central New York state.

Citibank will sell its Syracuse, Utica, and Albany area branches so it can concentrate on larger operations in western New York state, an upstate spokeswoman for the New York City-based money center institution said.

On completion the deal would raise total deposits in Chase Lincoln's Syracuse Division to more than $1 billion. Chase Lincoln's purchase of the nine Citibank branches in the Syracuse and Utica areas, with deposits of some $380 million, must receive federal and state approval. The banks refused to disclose the total price of the branch acquisitions.

Chase Lincoln is also eyeing Citibank's $79 million commercial loan portfolio for the area. But a Citibank officer said the bank plans to keep its mortgage, student loan and credit card businesses in the region.

Citibank spokeswoman Norine Jones said Marine Midland Bank is looking at the five Citibank branches in the Albany area. Citibank has 13 branches in the Rochester area and ten more in the Buffalo area, officials said.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 30) UPI - The chairman of the East German Social-Democratic Party, Ibrahim Boehme, said Friday he will resume the party leadership he quit recently amid accusations he was a former secret police informer.

Boehme told reporters outside the headquarters of the former State Security department, where he inspected mountains of files, that there is no evidence against him.

''Everything turned out well,'' he said.

The SPD leader last week stepped aside amid accusations he once worked for the hated secret police, known as Stasi - an arm of the fallen hard-line communist government. He denied it.

The evidence against him was said to be in Stasi files not yet released to the public.

In the presence of Werner Fischer, one of the three government officials in charge of shutting down the Stasi, his lawyers and others, Boehme examined several files that dated back to 1976.

Boehme gave no further details of the contents of the files.

His lawyer, Friedrich-Wilhelm von Sell, praised Boehme for being honest and seeking to ''establish absolute clarity.''

Several other prominent East Germans have been accused in recent weeks of collaboration with the Stasi, igniting a growing debate. Some politicians called for an amnesty of former Stasi officials, others asked that all 400 parliamentary deputies be screened for Stasi links.

''I believe that people who have violated human rights should be held responsible for their acts and brought to justice,'' said Hans-Wilhelm Ebeling, who heads the arch-conservative German-Social Union (DSU).

''But we must be careful that it doesn't get out of control and become a witch hunt,'' he said.

Claims that many of the newly elected East German parliamentary deputies once worked for the Stasi, as well as efforts to establish a broad coalition, have complicated the formation of a new East German government.

The Christian-Democratic Union, which emerged the strongest party in the March 18 elections, started coalition talks with the SPD Thursday.

SPD spokesman Richard Schroeder said Friday several issues still needed to be discussed.

''Further consultations with the CDU are necessary,'' he said.

Schroeder said the SPD will convene Monday to decide whether it will start direct negotiations with a liberal alliance and the three-party conservative Alliance for Germany, that includes the CDU.

But he said the Social Democrats will not join a coalition that includes the DSU, another of the Alliance for Germany parties.

DSU leader Hans-Wilhelm Eberling said he remained adament that ''only a grand coalition will be capable of tackling the deep problems that exist.''

''The people are waiting for it. They are getting impatient,'' he said.

Thousands of demonstrators marched to Parliament Thursday demanding that new deputies be screened to ensure they never worked for the secret police.

The demonstrators, chanting ''Stasi out,'' assembled at the Alexander Platz, scene of huge rallies during pro-democracy protests that played a key role in ending four decades of Stalinist rule last fall.

From the downtown plaza, the demonstrators marched to the Palace of the Republic, seat of the East German Parliament.

Several thousand people roared approval as a speaker declared, ''We need deputies we can trust.''

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) UPI - Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus rang in its post-Gebel-Williams era Thursday with a new but less flashy star, animal trainer Flavio Togni from Italy.

The all-new 120th edition show for Ringling's blue-unit premiered at Madison Square Garden, where it will run through Apr. 29, and gave Togni his first chance to perform before a New York audience.

The show is on a two-year national tour, visiting cities that were on the circus' red-unit tour last year.

Togni has a two-year contract with circus owner Kenneth Feld, who selected him as Gunther Gebel-Williams' successor on the recommendation of the retiring circus superstar, who used to perform in Europe with Togni's father. Gebel-Williams, 55, will retire next October when he completes his farewell tour with the red unit.

Feld is spending $4 million to tour Togni and his entire circus company, Circo Americano, from Verona, Italy, through 1991.

The company includes 40 dressage-trained Andalusian stallions, l5 Asian elephants, three tigers, two leopards, and a white rhinoceros, 18 animal handlers, and 14 performers including Togni's brother and sister, Daniele and Silvana Togni, and a cousin, Andrea Togni.

Feld is the first to admit that Flavio Togni, a gracious showman of modest personality, is no Gebel-Williams, a blond Adonis, who rides into the ring standing on a horse or with a live leopard draped over his shoulders.

''Comparison with Gunther is useless,'' said Feld prior to the premiere. ''Flavio has a different personality than Gunther but a very attractive personality.''

Togni is the indisputable master of his animal forces, putting his ''liberty'' stallions through their graceful paces without riders, teaming horses with elephants in a waltz and minuet, guiding elephants through lumbering ''rockette'' routines, and coaxing the stubborn rhino named Thor to give a ride to a panther.

He has the most trouble with Thor, who seems too dumb to find the exit to his performance cage. It took four tries and a bribe of food to get him to return to his wagon on opening night.

Otherwise the Togni's part of the show moves smoothly and meshes nicely with Ringling's other acts: fabulous teeterboard artists from Hungary and Poland, a daredevil highwire act from Spain, a hair-hanging Mexican family tumblers and a hand-balancing team from Italy and trapeze wizards from Colombia.

A big-cat act that throws a bear, two hyenas and a wolf in with tigers, lionesses, and leopards is excitingly staged by ebullient Luis Palacio.

This is billed as the first animal act in half a century to uses hyenas, which are bred by Palacio. But they are sullen and unattractive animals and seem quite unnecessary to the act except to give it that ''natural enemies'' touch. The cats seem to ignore the intruders anyway.

The overall theme of the show is Latin, with a range of Hispanic-inspired costumes including unisex gaucho garb in a hot palette of scarlet, fuschia and orange. White llamas from Peru are caparisoned like toreadors, and even the elephants get to wear flower-embroidered shawls.

Los Gauchos Latinos, a dance troupe from Argentina, brings down the house with a terrific demonstration of bola-spinning skills. Getting bola balls on the end of slender ropes to strike a dance drum rhymthmically, as accompaniment for the flamenco, seems like more fun than dancing the lambada.

PARIS (MARCH 30) UPI - Three of nine Chinese Roman Catholic bishops arrested in December after they tried to set up their own episcopal organization have been released and ''assigned to residence,'' the Foreign Missions of Churches of France in Asia said Friday.

The three are Bishop Guo Wenzhi from the northeastern Heilongjiang province, Bishop Paul Li Zhenrong of Xianxian, and Bishop Pierre-Joseph Fan Xueyan of Boaging.

The association said the three belong to the clandestine Church in China that it believes numbers ''at least 60 bishops, probably many more.''

In addition to the nine bishops, 30 priests and Roman Catholic laymen were arrested in December in China, as well as dozens of pastors, according to the statement by the group.

The official Chinese Catholic Church broke with Rome in 1958 and has its own government-supported official episcopal conference. The bishops arrested in December were seeking to set up an independent bishops' conference that would ''rally the great majority of Catholics in the country.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - The Supreme Court's decision Friday to hear arguments in special session on Congress's flag-burning law puts the case in the company of pivotal issues of recent decades.

Holding a special session to hear a case is a step rarely taken by the tradition-bound court, and one only reserved for the most pressing of issues often affecting the course of the nation.

The last time such a step was taken was when the court heard arguments in June 1981 in a case dealing with President Jimmy Carter's authority to make a deal to free the hostages held in Iran.

Other instances include the Pentagon Papers case in 1971, which was argued June 26 and the Nixon tapes case argued July 8, 1974.

More recently, the court granted an emergency review to the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget act in 1986, but that did not require a special arguments session.

Some queston whether flag-burning, a crime certainly not at epidemic proportions in the land, deserves such attention.

David Cole, a lawyer defending the flag-burning protesters, said the flag case is ''ultimately an ideological issue, one of constitutional principle not one on which the very workings of the government stand or fall. There's no emergency here.''

BOSTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Matthew Stuart, who implicated his older brother in the Carol Stuart murder case, appeared Friday before a grand jury trying to unravel the elaborate crime, but it was not clear if he testified.

Matthew Stuart, 24, and his sister, Shelley Yandoli, appeared Friday morning at the Suffolk County courthouse where a special grand jury is investigating the slaying of their sister-in-law.

But Matthew's lawyer, Nancy Gertner, filed a motion before Judge Robert Mulligan to quash the subpoena ordering her client to testify before the panel. However, the grand jury's proceedings are secret and Gertner refused to elaborate on her actions.

It was not clear if Matthew testified before leaving the courthouse a short while later or whether the judge took any action on the motion.

''They've clapped a seal over the entire procedure,'' Gertner told reporters staking out the courthouse. ''I can't give you any information.''

The grand jury is trying to resolve outstanding questions surrounding the murder of Matthew's sister-in-law, Carol Stuart. The pregnant attorney was shot and killed and her husband, Charles, wounded last Oct. 23 in an attack her husband blamed on a black gunman. The couple's son was delivered by emergency Caesarean section that night but died 17 days later.

The case rocked Boston, first when black leaders claimed that the case received undo attention because the victims were white suburbanites and that police harassed blacks in their search for a suspect, and then when officials revealed Charles Stuart had become the prime suspect. Stuart committed suicide Jan. 4, as police sought to arrest him.

The day before Charles killed himself, Matthew told police he went to the shooting site that night and Charles gave him a bag ostensibly containing Carol's belongings, which Charles later reported stolen by the fictitious gunman.

Matthew said he was an unwitting accomplice and believed the staged robbery was part of an insurance fraud.

Matthew said he was unaware Carol Stuart had been shot, although he saw her in the car with Charles. When he later discovered the bag contained a gun, he and a friend, John McMahon, dumped most of the bag's contents into a river.

McMahon appeared before the grand jury Monday.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - The Supreme Court agreed Friday to decide the constitutionality of an anti-flag-burning law enacted by Congress last year and to issue a ruling before its summer recess.

The court will hear the case on an emergency basis, a move that guarantees it will be decided in plenty of time to become an issue in the fall congressional elections.

The court's action, in two cases from Washington state and the District of Columbia, was announced following the court's usual Friday conference.

In a three paragraph order, the justices set arguments in the case for May 14, a month after the court's regular session for oral arugments ends.

According to court officials, the last time the Supreme Court set such a rare special session was in June 1981, when the justices heard arguments testing the legality of the Iran hostage deal.

The Bush administration had sought immediate review of the constitutionality of the Flag Protection Act of 1989, which was passed in anger over a June 1989 Supreme Court ruling that burning the flag as a political protest is a constitutionally protected form of free speech.

The 5-4 ruling in a case from Texas sparked a controversy that saw President Bush push for an amendment to the Constitution. Instead, Congress passed the Flag Protection Act, although backers of the amendment warned a law would not protect the flag.

That argument gained strength Feb. 21 when a federal judge in Washington state struck down the new law. That case involved an October 1989 protest outside a post office in Seattle that included flag burning.

On March 5, a federal judge in the District of Columbia reached a similar decision in a case dealing with an Oct. 30, 1989, flag burning outside the Capitol. Both flag burnings were staged to protest the new law.

David Cole, with the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York, which is defending those charged, objected to the speeded-up proceedings because ''there are very serious constitutional issues involved and also whether people will be spending a year or not in jail.''

He said the administration pushed for the expedited hearing ''for partisan reasons, because they would like nothing better than to ... make flag desecration a campaign issue.''

At the White House, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the court hearing is ''part of the process'' urged by Bush, who has said all along the bill would not stand up to high court scrutiny.

Fitzwater also said that if the court upholds the anti-flag-burning law, the president probably would not seek any further remedy.

In appealing to the high court, the Justice Department acknowledged the Seattle protest was ''expressive conduct'' normally protected by the First Amendment. But they said that should not ''doom the act's constitutionality.''

''In this case, the district court overvalued, for purposes of the First Amendment, the narrow category of expressive conduct at stake, and undervalued the compelling governmental interest - expressly identified by both the Congress and the president - that lies at the core of the statute: the preservation of the flag as the unique symbol of our nation.''

Attorneys for the flag burners also asked the court to review the case.

In last year's controversial decision, two of the court's most conservative members, Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, joined with three of the most liberal to strike down the Texas law.

Coming on the heels of Bush's flag-waving presidential campaign and an art display that urged viewers to stand on the flag, the ruling set off a wave of protests by politicians eager to align themselves with protecting Old Glory.

The makeup of the court has not changed since the Texas ruling, meaning that to win the case the government must persuade one member to change his vote less than a year after the ruling.

The new law states, ''Whoever knowingly mutilates, defaces, physically defiles, burns, maintains on the floor or ground, or tramples upon any flag of the United States shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.''

ST. PAUL, MN (MARCH 30) UPI - Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., the senior member of the Minnesota congressional delegation, announced Friday ''it is time to move on,'' and he will not seek re-election.

''It's not a good thing for the Ted Williamses to play right field when they are 50,'' said Frenzel, 61. ''You ought to go out hitting .300.''

Frenzel, who had been mentioned last year as a potential candidate as U.S. trade representative, said his decision to leave Congress was not dictated by an event. ''I've done this for a long time and it is time for someone else to do it. It is time to move on.''

The surprise announcement came during a routine news conference when reporters expected Frenzel to say he was running for another term in the safe Republican 3rd District in the western and southern Minneapolis suburbs. He was narrowly elected to the House of Representatives in 1970 and has won re-election by wide margins ever since.

Frenzel, a member of the House Budget and Ways and Means committees, said he did not know what he planned to do once he leaves Congress.

He said the job of a legislator still holds excitement, but he acknowledged that serving in the minority for so long had its drawbacks.

''The minority is a good noble goal, but it is a crummy one to have to play,'' he said. ''But you play the one you've been dealt.''

Frenzel said he thought about running for the Senate in 1978 when it appeared Republicans would be able to sweep Minnesota's Senate seats. ''I decided I wouldn't. I never had a regret, save one, when Republicans had a majority (in the Senate),'' he said.

Frenzel is a strong supporter of free trade, free enterprise and one of the leaders in the House of efforts to cut taxes and over the years has fought government interference in business.

''In the last years, I have been more of a budgeteer. Other than that, the privilege has been to serve with the president, my good friend,'' said Frenzel, who did not always vote eye-to-eye with the Republican White House, voting against Contra aid, for South African sanctions and for a limit on President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative.

When Frenzel's name came up for the trade post, several state Republican legislators were mentioned as candidates for his House seat, but Frenzel said he was not ready to endorse any of them.

''I see a dozen possible candidates in this room. I still want to be friends to all of them,'' he told those gathered in the state capitol.

UEHRINGEN, West Germany (MARCH 30) UPI - An explosion ripped through 10 buildings at a West German dynamite factory Friday, killing three people and injuring three, police said.

A police spokesman said 10 buildings were blown up at the Dynamite-Nobel factory near the southwestern town of Uehringen. He said there was little left of the buildings, which were constructed in bunker-style.

There was no immediate word on the cause of the blast, officials said.

The spokesman said the blast was so powerful that it shattered windows of nearby houses. He said three people were seriously injured but that the number of victims could have been much higher if the explosion had occurred a few minutes earlier, before most employees left the premises for their breakfast break.

The Dynamite-Nobel firm was founded by Swedish chemist Alfred Nobel, who invented dynamite and later established the Nobel Prize foundation.

KATMANDU, Nepal (MARCH 30) UPI - The foreign minister, the No. 2 leader in Nepal's bitterly divided government, resigned Friday just hours after police fired on pro-democracy demonstrators outside the capital, killing two and wounding 10.

Foreign Minister Shailendra Kumar Upadhayaya's resignation was reported by his secretary but the hard-line government of Prime Minister Marich Man Singh Shrestha did not confirm the development.

''Yes, it is true that he has resigned today,'' Upadhayaya's secretary told United Press International. ''It is related to the violence.''

The secretary said Upadhayaya quit because the government was not negotiating with the political opposition to defuse the mounting violence that has left at least 16 dead in the land-locked Himalayan kingdom since Nepal's pro-democracy uprising Feb. 18.

At least eight other cabinet members hold views similar to Upadhayaya's but it was not clear whether his late-evening resignation would have immediate repercussions.

Police opened fire on an estimated 10,000 demonstrators in the Katmandu suburb of Patan Friday after they attacked a police station and attempted to set fire to the mayor's office.

The government confirmed the two deaths in Patan and said 45 demonstrators were arrested in the ancient, temple-filled town 1 mile south of Katmandu. Opposition sources said there were 163 arrests.

It was not clear what effect Upadhayaya's resignation would have on a scheduled visit Saturday by a senior Indian official delegation. The sides were to hold a final round of talks aimed at ending an Indian trade and transit blockade of Nepal.

The pressure for liberalization in the kingdom has brought the government into increasing disarray. A split in the cabinet first became publicly known in early March when King Birendra sacked a high-ranking water resources official for telling United Press International of deep political dissatisfaction with the cabinet's handling of the crisis.

Officials blamed ''extremist communists'' for Friday's violence in Patan and said the police opened fire ''to maintain law and order.''

One witness said the demonstrators refused to disperse even after the police opened fire and used tear gas, and flags of the banned Nepali Congress Party and Communist Party fluttered from Patan temples.

''Women were throwing water from windows to negate the impact of the tear gas shelling,'' Ram Kaji Maharjan of Patan told United Press International. ''They also threw onions so people could rub their eyes.''

In the capital Friday, about 500 housewives marched with their toddlers through the streets, carrying banners reading, ''We will bring democracy'' and ''Stop exploitation against women.''

Witnesses said 12 people were arrested during the women's demonstration, including the daughter of Nepali Congress leader Ganesh Man Singh.

The opposition Nepali Congress Party and a coalition of seven other banned leftist parties organized the liberalization movement to force an end to Nepal's partyless system of panchayats, or elected councils, over which King Birendra has ultimate authority.

The demonstrators want a return to political parties and electoral politics, which have been banned for more than 20 years.

Most schools in Katmandu were closed Friday in answer to calls by eight student groups to mourn the death of students killed during the movement for restoration of multi-party democracy.

On Thursday, thousands of students at dozens of schools battled riot police in tear gas-clouded streets and campuses Thursday. Hundreds were arrested and scores wounded when the rallies spread from college campuses to secondary schools across the capital.

One of the most violent confrontations was a 60-minute battle at the Amrit science campus, where police raided the grounds, beat student demonstrators and threw some of them from windows, witnesses said.

DALLAS (MARCH 30) UPI - An investment group led by Hicks, Muse & Co. Inc. a private investment firm, Friday announced the completion of the acquisition of seven life insurance companies from I.C.H. Corp. of Lousville, Ky., for $530 million in cash. Hicks, Muse said all necessary regulatory approvals had been received.

The companies to be acquired, with assets of $2.2 billion, will become part of a newly formed holding company, Life Partners Group Inc., with total insurance in force of more than $32 billion, the announcement said.

The principal operating companies in the transaction are Philadelphia Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts General Life Insurance Co., and Wabash Life Insurance Co. Thomas O. Hicks, chairman of Hicks, Muse, will become chairman of the new holding company.

Equity financing was provided by Hicks, Muse Equity Fund, which will become the majority shareholder of Life Partners Group, and members of the senior mangement of the life insurance companeis. Others providing the financing were Wand Investments, a joint venture between S.G. Warburg & Co. of Britain and Bruce W. Schnitzer, a Fort Worth, Texas, investor, and institutional investors who were not identified.

GE Capital Corp. provided senior debt and a portion of the equity financing, the announcement said. Hicks, Muse's stake in the venture was not disclosed but spokesmen said it will have a controlling interest.

John Gardiner, previously president of I.C.H., led the senior management group's equity participation. He will become president of the new holding company.

The management of the life insurance operations of the new company will remain in place in Denver. The investment, management and corporate development functions will be based in Dallas.

This is the first acquisition that Hicks, Muse has made since being formed last year. Prior to that, Thomas Hicks was the founding partner of Hicks & Haas, a leveraged buyout firm that invested more than $4 billion in various companies over four years.

A previously announced plan by Hicks, Muse to acquire Crosman Products Inc., a maker of BB guns and air pistols, from Coleman Co. fell through, a company spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - The prosecution charged Friday John Poindexter tried to alter history by destroying Iran-Contra documents and lying to Congress, but defense attorneys said the retired rear admiral was indicted for following the orders of President Ronald Reagan.

Prosecutor Dan Webb, in a 2 1/2 hour speech, said: ''John Poindexter and Oliver North decided to rewrite history'' by concealing facts from Congress, lying to Congress and going on a ''rampage'' of document destruction in the White House.

''And then they thought they could make history read the way they wanted it, to protect themselves and to protect the president of the United States,'' Webb said.

Poindexter, 53, the highest-ranking Reagan administration official to stand trial in the scandal, is accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress, obstructing its investigation and destroying documents.

The affair, which prompted a year-long congressional inquiry and a still-active investigation by a special prosecutor, stemmed from Reagan's attempt to win freedom for hostages in Lebanon by selling arms to Iran and the subsequent secret diversion of profits from those sales to the U.S.-backed Contras in Nicaragua.

Webb, keeping the jury's attention with a voice that alternated between a dramatic boom and an intimate whisper, charged that Poindexter supervised the effort to hide those actions from Congress with lies and destruction of government documents.

''Ladies and gentlemen of the jury - coverup, deception and concealment. That's what this case has always been about,'' Webb said.

Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Beckler, characterized his client in his closing arguments as a victim of ''political bashing.'' He said Poindexter stayed within the ''spirit and letter of the law'' and insisted Reagan was the force behind Poindexter's actions.

''This man right here gave it his everlovin' best to give as much information as he could because that's what the president of the United States wanted,'' Beckler said, pointing to his client.

The atmosphere surrounding the Iran-Contra affair ''was not some grimy little conspiracy,'' Beckler said, his voice often rising to a shout. ''This was the president of the United States, the president of the United States was the driving engine behind his actions.''

The jury was expected to begin deliberating the case Monday.

The prosecutor ridiculed Poindexter's defense witnesses and particularly eight hours of videotaped testimony by former President Ronald Reagan.

''Ronald Reagan didn't seem to remember anything,'' Webb said.

Webb suggested that Poindexter called Reagan as a witness only to fool the jury into an acquittal because of Reagan's status as a former president. Webb also expressed outrage that Reagan winked at Poindexter after answering a question.

''I felt a little angry,'' Webb said. ''He turned to John Poindexter and winked. When a person is so biased as to wink, it's as if to say, 'Did that last answer help you, John.'''

But Webb noted that Reagan always insisted he never told Poindexter or anyone to lie to Congress, nor did he authorize the destruction of documents.

In the most dramatic part of his argument, Webb ripped up a copy of a presidential ''finding'' showing that the Reagan administration was engaged in an outright arms-for-hostages deal with Iran. North testified earlier that he saw Poindexter rip up the original on Nov. 21, 1986, as details of the Iran-Contra scandal were becoming public.

''That may be the single most significant act you have'' under which to find Poindexter guilty, Webb said.

Webb said it was ''a sad day in the history of the United States'' when Reagan said publicly on Nov. 13, 1986, that he had never traded arms for hostages, ''when that's exactly what he did.''

Because the finding proved an arms-for-hostages deal, Webb said, Poindexter had to destroy it. The document ''put the lie'' to what Reagan had told the American people, Webb said.

Poindexter also destroyed 5,000 computer messages in a single day, Webb said, and it was only by a ''fluke'' that they exist today - the White House Communications Agency decided to isolate backup tapes which are normally recorded over every two weeks, obliterating the information forever.

Webb reminded the jurors of North's testimony that he met with a congressional committee at the White House on Aug. 6, 1986, at Poindexter's orders and lied to obscure Reagan administration involvement with the Contras.

''North told you he knew he'd have to lie,'' Webb said. ''North admitted that he lied and he lied and he lied, and Poindexter, his commander, sent him in there to do that.''

Webb hammered away at a false White House chronology that contained a ''cover story'' to hide that fact that Poindexter and other Reagan administration officials were actively involved in the first Iran arms shipment of Hawk missiles in November 1985.

Poindexter actually ''supervised and directed'' the arms shipment and then told Congress he had just learned about it, Webb said.

Poindexter showed no emotion, although some members of his family appeared distressed as they watched Webb. His wife, Linda, was in the courtroom, along with four of their five sons.

The closing arguments began after an alternate juror replaced a regular juror who had suffered a severe asthma attack.

SRINAGAR, India (MARCH 30) UPI - A militant Moslem preparing to throw a grenade at security forces was shot Friday and died when the device exploded in his hand, and separatist violence claimed 12 more lives in Kashmir.

The Press Trust of India news agency quoted a government spokesman as saying security forces Thursday night shot and killed 10 Moslem militants as they tried to cross over to neighboring Pakistan from Dumarigali, a village near the Indo-Pakistan border.

The killing was the first major success achieved by security forces against militants who have waged a bloody campaign for the secession of the Moslem-dominated Kashmir from India.

After the militants ignored calls to stop, security forces opened fire and killed 10 extremists, the Press Trust said in a dispatch from Jammu.

India has repeatedly accused Pakistan of providing training and arms to Moslem militants, a charge denied by Pakistan.

In another incident, between four and five militants opened fire on a Border Security Force patrol in the Soura locality. Witnesses and police said two patrol members were injured, prompting police to return fire, killing a passing motorist.

Another bystander died during an exchange of gunfire between militants and a paramilitary Central Reserve Police Force patrol in the Gojwara area, police said.

Meanwhile, in the Kashmir summer capital of Srinagar, a Moslem militant leader was killed in the blast of a grenade he was preparing to hurl when he was shot by security forces, police said.

Police said Ashfaq Majid Wani, an area commander of the powerful pro-independence Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, died about 7 a.m. during a three-hour curfew relaxation.

Wani was about to throw the grenade at a Border Security Force patrol in the Hawal neighborhood when he was spotted and shot twice, police said. As he fell, the device went off, killing him instantly.

Authorities reimposed the curfew, but tens of thousands of mourners marched to the militant's funeral in the militant stronghold of Batmaloo shouting slogans against Hindu-dominated India and refusing to leave when forces fired tear gas. Witnesses said as many as 80,000 congregated for Wani's funeral.

The funeral procession was led by a minibus carrying Wani's body. Wani's father sat on the roof of the vehicle as wailing women marchers beat their chests and chanted anti-India slogans.

Kashmir militants insist that independence for predominantly Moslem Kashmir is necessary because of years of discrimination by the Hindu-dominated New Delhi government. The movement is supported by virtually all the region's 3 million Moslems.

Srinagar, 400 miles north of New Delhi, has been the scene of near-daily violence since the Kashmir independence movement erupted in mid-January after security forces fired on demonstrators. Since then, more than 170 people have died, most of them demonstrators shot by security forces.

New Delhi has deployed tens of thousands of paramilitary police and troops in the region but has been unable to crush the uprising.

CONCORD, NH (MARCH 30) UPI - Students at Friday's opening of the Christa McAuliffe Planetarium, most of whom were toddlers when the space shuttle Challenger exploded, understood her dream to experience the wonder of other worlds.

The halls of the $2.6 million gleaming pyramid-shaped planetarium building - named for the American teacher who perished with the Challenger astronauts Jan. 28, 1986 - were packed with excited youngsters, who waited in line for the star and space science show to begin.

''Stars, planets. You know, good stuff,'' said Erin Boss, 7, from the Harold Martin School in Hopkinton, when asked what she expected to see in the planetarium.

An estimated 270 elementary-school children from school systems located around Concord inaugurated the planetarium. The facility, with its murals of heavenly objects built for young hands to touch and sophisticated projection equipment, is considered by its staff as one of the finest in the country.

The planetarium was built in memory of McAuliffe, a Concord teacher.

''They are out of this planet right now, really hyped out and excited,'' said David Tilley, a first-grade teacher from Hopkinton. He said his 6- to 8-year-old students are eager to learn about space travel, the planets and the stars.

Once inside the 94-seat planetarium, the students sat back in plush blue seats and saw ''Wonderful Sky,'' a special program created by New York's American Museum-Hayden Planetarium, featuring the Sesame Street Puppets.

Director Clinton Hatchett said 12,000 students will pass through its doors during the next three months for a variety of space science and astronomy programs.

''We can extend Christa McAuliffe's dream to improve education by giving students experiences they may never be able to have,'' Hatchett said.

The planetarium's computer-controlled video, slide and laser disc projections produce three dimensional images of swirling galaxies and constellations and simulate space travel beyond the galaxy.

''We have an almost unlimited ability to show what it might be like to experience other worlds, whether they be light years away, or inside our own bodies,'' Hatchett said.

The facility will be dedicated in June. President George Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev have been invited.

ROCHESTER, NY (MARCH 30) UPI - A special grand jury has reconvened to investigate possible environmental wrongdoing by Eastman Kodak Co., a published report said Friday.

Attorneys were expected to appear in court next week to try to halt the state Attorney General's Office probe into apparent criminal violations of pollution laws by the photo giant, the Rochester Democrat & Chronicle reported.

The company filed court documents this week to void new subpoenas after state officials moved to reconvene a special grand jury formed to look into whether the company willfully failed to report chemical contamination at its Kodak Park industrial facility.

The grand jury originally convened in January after plea bargain negotiations between Kodak and the state broke down in December. The grand jury then postponed its work because negotiations resumed. But the recent actions suggest negotiations had stalled once again.

Attorneys for Gannett Co., which owns the Democrat & Chronicle, have intervened in the case to request the hearing be open to the public. Kodak and the state want the hearing closed, but acting Supreme Court Justice Maurice Strobridge said he will consider Gannett's arguments. Kodak spokesman James Blamphin, and Leslie Gersing of the Attorney General's office, both declined to comment on any aspect of the proceedings.

The newspaper said that a basic agreement reached about a month ago remains intact, but disagreements over details have kept the two sides from an announcement of a final deal.

Under the framework of the agreement, Kodak would pay a fine of $1 million and plead guilty to several misdemeanor charges of breaking environmental law.

The grand jury is empowered to investigate possible criminal violations in connection with the willful failure to report chemical spills at Kodak Park. A probe begun two years ago detected soil and groundwater contamination at the sprawling complex.

Kodak reportedly reached a settlement last year in a separate investigation by the state Department of Environmental Conservation. Under that agreement, a record $1 million fine would be paid by Kodak, and the company would agree to install systems and procedures to deter future contamination. Both sides agreed not to execute the consent order until the Attorney General's investigation was resolved.

NORWALK, CT (MARCH 30) UPI - Norden Systems, a subsidiary of United Technologies Corp., laid off 186 salaried and hourly workers Friday and announced the elimination of 62 other positions.

A spokesman for the company said 154 of the layoffs affected workers at Norden's main facility in Norwalk, as well as smaller plants located in Westport and Trumbull.

Another 32 workers were given pink slips at the company's plant in Mellville, N.Y., said spokesman William McDonald.

An additional 62 positions were eliminated through retirements, attrition and other factors while another 16 contract employees completed their assignments and left the company, he said.

The reduction is part of Norden's effort ''to match the workforce to current and future business requirements,'' the company said.

''The reduction is being caused in part by a declining defense budget and a general decline in Norden's business,'' Norden said.

Norden manufactures military radars and computers, battlefield command and control systems and air traffic control radar.

The laid off workers will receive a seperation package which inlcudes at least one-month's pay and continuation of benefits for two months. Longer term employees will receive additional severance pay and the company also is helping displaced workers find new jobs.

Norden said it has undergone ''several years of heavy losses'' and it hoped several programs now under development would return the company to profitability by 1992.

The company said especially promising was a search and target attack radar program developed and tested for the U.S. Army and Air Force with a potential value of $400 million.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Japan made progress in eliminating tariffs on American products during 1989, but many U.S. goods still face tariffs and trade barriers, the U.S. Trade Representative's Office said in a report Friday.

"As a result of trade negotiations and unilateral reductions, such as Japan's December 1989 decision to eliminate tariffs on 1,004 manufactured products, Japan's average tariff rates on industrial products are among the world's lowest at two percent," the report said.

"However, high tariffs remain on certain manufactured and agricultural products of U.S. interest," according to the document, entitled "Foreign Trade Barriers."

American products that face tariffs in Japan include oranges, fruit juices vegetable oil, pork, poultry, eggs, and wine, as well as automotive safety glass, aluminum products, and certain petrochemical products.

Strict trade barriers remain in place against a number of other American imports, including supercomputers, satellites, auto parts, feeds, and fish. There is also a total ban on all American rice, and legal restrictions limit direct U.S. investment in Japan.

American and Japanese trade negotiators have been discussing ways to ease trade barriers. The latest estimate of the U.S. trade deficit with Japan stands at about $2.9 billion, the lowest since $2 billion in December 1984.

"We view our market as the most open market of any nation in the world," said Joshua Bolten, general counsel for the trade representative's office. "We're ready to discuss our barriers with any other nation's barriers."

The two nations are currently engaged in a series of meetings, called the Structural Impediments Intitiative, to find ways to narrow the trade deficit between the United States and Japan.

An interim report on progress made at the talks is expected in April and a final report is due in July. "It's too early to say now what is going to happen," Bolten said.

South Korea, another major exporter to the United States, also imposes high duties on a number of agricultural and fish products. But the nation "implemented a five-year tariff reduction plan to bring the average tariff rate down from 12.7 percent in 1989 to 7.9 percent in 1993," the trade representative's report said.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Eastern Air Lines' creditors reportedly are threatening to shut down the airline to force the sale of its planes, routes and leases. A published report says that after a year of supporting the carrier's efforts to rejuvenate itself, the unsecured creditors don't want the proceeds from sales of airline assets used to keep Eastern in the air. The creditors say they will seek appointment of a trustee to take over Eastern, sell its assets and shut it down... unless the airline and its corporate parent, Texas Air Corporation, agree to a major financial commitment.

Los Angeles authorities now identify the fan barricaded in the house of actress Sharon Gless as a woman, about 30 years old, who had been corresponding with Gless over ''a long period of time.'' Police say Gless has a restraining order against the woman, who has locked herself in the bathroom of the house... armed with an assault rifle. Police have evacuated about 10 nearby homes.

The deadline looms for filing charges against a man accused of setting the deadliest arson fire in New York history. A Bronx grand jury hearing testimony about last Sunday's fire that killed 87 people at a Bronx social club has until the end of the day to issue charges against 36-year-old Julio Gonzalez or set him free. Meanwhile, wakes and funerals are being held for some of the victims of the fire, but the majority will be flown to their Latin American homelands this weekend for burial.

A State Department official says the United States is seeking to repeal a U-N resolution equating Zionism with racism. Assistant Secretary of State John Bolton said in prepared testimony for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that Washington is reassessing the situation because of changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. Zionism is the historic Jewish attachment to the land of Israel that led to the creation of a state in 1948.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - The Defense Department announced Friday it will no longer review the issuance of export licenses for Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union of some "lesser-risk" exports of medical equipment, computers, and machine tools.

"Nothing we're talking about today is a change in policy or controls," said a Defense Department official knowledgeable in the area of high-technology transfers.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said most of the items that fall into this category were normally approved by Pentagon reviews in the past before the Commerce Department - the issuing authority - issued licenses.

The Pentagon is simply taking this action to cut down on bureaucracy, he said, and it will still be able to review the proposed export licenses of medium- or high-risk items that could be used for military applications.

In addition, he said, the items that the Pentagon no longer reviews must still be issued licenses by the Commerce Department. "The controls haven't changed at all," he said. "This is lesser-risk equipment in terms of (it being used for) military applications." The Pentagon will still review the issuance of export licenses of higher-technology equipment pending before the Commerce Department, he said.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has complained in the past that the transfer of computer technology to the Soviet bloc could be put to military use. "Super-computers obviously would not come under this (non-review) area," said the spokesman.

PORTLAND, ME (MARCH 30) UPI - A school crossing guard was charged with attempted murder Friday after he allegedly shot at a 14-year-old student. Police said they were trying to determine if the incident was racially motivated.

Police said James Murphy, 40, fired one shot at point-blank range at Clinton Drake before the .25-caliber semi-automatic handgun jammed. Drake, who was walking to school at the time of the incident, was not hit.

Witnesses told police that Murphy, an employee of Adams Security Co., and Drake, an 8th-grade student in the Portland Rehabilitation Education Program, had argued on Thursday and again moments before the 8:15 a.m. shooting.

Murphy was not authorized to carry a gun on guard duty and had no gun license, police and Adams Security said.

''There was no reason to our knowledge for Murphy to legally have a handgun in his possession,'' Police Chief Michael Chitwood said.

Police investigators said statements made by witnesses and Drake indicated there were racial overtones to the incident. Murphy is white, Drake is black.

Adams Security's owner, William Adams, said Murphy was a reliable employee but had become upset in recent days because his former wife had become pregnant.

''Of all my 42 employees, Jim was the last one I would have suspected of doing something like this,'' Adams said.

Adams Security has a contract with the Portland School District to provide crossing guards, and Murphy was assigned to the post at Cumberland and Washington avenues because it was near where he lived, Adams said.

Police said Murphy was carrying 50 rounds of ammunition when he was arrested at the scene minutes after the shooting.

(MARCH 30) UPI - University of Florida researchers say a shortage of younger black men causes many black women to marry older men. The researchers say black women are nearly twice as likely as white women to marry older men. The sociologists say higher death, murder and prison rates among black men have helped create the shortage.

Five police officers in Uniondale, New York, suffered minor injuries last night when an arrest at a sold-out Grateful Dead concert sparked a melee between police and fans. WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Rates on 30-year fixed mortgages fell 0.04 percentage points to 10.22 percent and adjustable-rate mortgages held steady at 8.56 percent this week, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Friday.

The fixed-rate last week was 10.26 percent, according to the agency that buys mortgages from lenders and packages them as securities.

The fixed-rate average is for a 30-year loan covering 80 percent of a home's cost. The average adjustable-rate mortgage also is for 30 years, but for 75 percent of the home price.

AUSTIN, TX (MARCH 30) UPI - Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher said Friday he hopes U.S. trade with Mexico will double in the next five years.

While leaders of the United States and Mexico continue to consider setting up a free-trade zone, Mosbacher said the two nations should explore other ways to develop closer economic ties.

"In a broad sense, we think that free trade with Mexico is a very good idea, but we feel there are many steps to be taken before we get into any more than just generically liking the idea," he said. "We have a long way to go before we get to free trade," Mosbacher said in a speech to Eighth U.S.-Mexico Border Governors' Conference.

The commerce secretary said he hoped that by 1995 U.S. trade with Mexico woulddouble to about $100 billion a year. He predicted U.S. business with Mexico this year would grow ten percent to about $52 billion.

If it continues to make economic reforms, Mosbacher said, Mexico could have a "first-class economy by the turn of the century" and serve as a model for Latin America and the rest of the world.

Mosbacher also touted President Bush's economic initiatives to the Mexican leaders and business representatives. He said Bush is committed to no new taxes, antitrust reform, improvements in education, manufacturing and the environment, promotion of research and development and streamlining export controls and trade policies.

The two-day border governors' meeting opened Thursday with a goal of boosting trade in the areas of tourism, agriculture and twin-plant development. Mexico is already Texas' largest foreign trade partner, receiving nearly one-third, or more than $10 billion, of all the state's exports.

Meanwhile, Mexican and American business leaders said U.S. business owners should stop thinking of Mexico simply as a place to hire cheap labor. "Mexico cannot be just America's back yard in this partnership," said Jorge Gallegos, a business representative from Baja California in Mexico.

"You cannot base our relationship solely on the cheap labor of Mexico. We have a lot of other resources to draw from." Mexico's minimum wage, which fluctuates according to government policy, is currently about $3.15 an hour.

MOSCOW (MARCH 30) UPI - Radiation victims under treatment for the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear reactor plant disaster Friday pressed their hunger strike for better conditions as the Ukraine's Parliament decreed April 26 ''Chernobyl Tragedy Day.''

The hunger strikes began at the Institute of Medical Radiology in the Ukrainian town of Kharkov and spread among outpatient victims who could not gain admission to hospitals because there are not enough beds.

The Soviet news agency Tass said 120 patients were on hunger strike and 280 others from the nearby city of Izum were expected to join the protest. The strikers are seeking better medical treatment and improved social benefits.

''Much has been done in the past four years to heal the traces of the tragedy,'' Tass said.

The news agency said 92,000 people were evacuated from an 18-mile zone set up in the Chernobyl area by Ukrainian authorities.

''The anguish caused by the Chernobyl accident prompted deputies to take a decision to phase the Chernobyl nuclear plant out of operation in the coming years,'' Tass said. It did not say when the plant would be fully decommissioned.

Officials have previously said that despite a massive cleanup in and around Chernobyl the area will remain uninhabitable ''for decades to come.''

As the number of hunger strikers spread in Kharkov, Tass said the Ukrainian Parliament had decided to decree a Chernobyl Tragedy Day each April 26. All government flags will fly at half mast in the republic.

Tass said Parliament was to mark the date on which the ''gravest accident in the history of nuclear power stations occurred at the Chernobyl plant.''

The accident at Chernobyl, 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev shocked the world April 26, 1986. In all, 31 people were killed and more than 200 injured.

In 1989, three years after Chernobyl, the neighboring republic of Byelorussia finally released details of the accident and ordered the evacuation of 20 villages, which it said were in a contamination zone.

In all some 103,000 people were evacuated from 415 different settlements in Byelorussian contamination zones.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 30) UPI - A misguided ''fan'' armed with a semiautomatic rifle set off a burglar alarm at the home of actress Sharon Gless, triggering a seven-hour standoff with police before she surrendered Friday, authorities said.

No shots were fired.

Gless, best known for her portrayal of Detective Chris Cagney on the police drama ''Cagney & Lacey,'' was not in the house at the time, which was described as her secondary residence used mostly as an office.

Police identified the woman as Joni Pen, 30, who surrendered peacefully at 10:05 a.m., Sgt. Ike Langsan said. A loaded .22-caliber semiautomatic rifle was taken from her.

Pen was led out of the house by police, followed by SWAT team officers and four police psychologists who had been negotiating with her during the standoff.

Witnesses said Pen, dressed in blue jeans and a green shirt, held her head down and looked ''confused'' and ''sad'' as she was escorted to a police car.

Police took her to the North Hollywood station, where detectives questioned her. She was expected to be booked on first-degree burglary charges at either the Sybil Brand Institute for Women or the USC-County Medical Center's psychiatric ward.

''We've substantiated that she is apparently a fan of Sharon Gless,'' Capt. Rick Dinse said. ''Miss Gless has a restraining order against this lady.''

Dinse said the woman had been corresponding with Gless for a ''long period of time.''

''We don't know what was in the letters. They were just very persistent,'' he said. ''She apparently would not leave Miss Gless alone.''

Gless, who was at another home in Los Angeles during the incident, said ''These are horrendous times that we live in ... when disturbed people have such easy access to weapons that can be used indiscriminately.

''This (the suspect's harassment) has been going on for several years now and I think she has to be dealt with by the authorities,'' Gless said.

Gless's publicist, Heidi Schaeffer, said the actress's aversion to guns is well-known and she has spoken out publicly for gun control.

Schaeffer said Gless has such a dislike for guns that during the filming of ''Cagney & Lacey'' she would carry a can of tomato juice in her purse to simulate the weight of a handgun, which she would not handle any more than was absolutely necessary.

The restraining order, filed in November 1988, was intended ''to keep the suspect, Joni Pen, from threatening Gless and keeping her from surveilling Sharon Gless and to keep her from blocking her movements in public,'' Sgt. George McCormick said.

Police were alerted by the burglar alarm at 3:12 a.m. and surrounded the Studio City house about 10 minutes later, Sgt. John Stilo said. A SWAT team was then called to the scene.

''A patrol unit responding to a burglar alarm confronted the suspect,'' Officer Ken Thatcher said.

The woman was coming out of the house when she saw police arriving and ran back inside and barricaded herself in a bathroom, Dinse said.

Dinse said the woman first pointed the rifle at police and then at herself before fleeing back inside.

He said a ''crisis intervention'' team was sent inside the house to talk with the woman.

Neighboring homes on the wooded cul-de-sac were evacuated during the standoff, police said.

Many celebrities have been subjected to harassment and threats from overzealous fans. The problem came to national attention July 18, 1989, when actress Rebecca Schaeffer was shot to death in the doorway of her Los Angeles apartment. Robert Bardo, 19, described by authorities as an ''obsessive fan,'' was charged with her murder.

Other stars who have recently been harassed by fans stalking them include Michael J. Fox, Theresa Saldana, who was stabbed by a misguided fan, and Jodie Foster, the object of John Hinckley's fantasies.

Gless was one of several celebrities who testified in Sacramento last October in support of an Assembly bill restricting public access to Department of Motor Vehicle records, which deranged fans have used in the past to track down celebrities.

Under the bill, which became law Jan. 1, Californians may submit both a mailing address and a home address to the DMV, and the home address would remain confidential.

Authorities believe Bardo found Schaeffer's home address through a private investigator who accessed DMV records.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (MARCH 30) UPI - An attempt by Nelson Mandela and rival black leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi to halt a war between their followers in the strife-torn province of Natal collapsed Friday following three days of fighting that left at least 38 dead and thousands homeless.

President Frederik de Klerk, under mounting pressure to declare martial law and deploy army troops to restore peace in the area, warned of using the ''full weight'' of his government's powers to halt the fighting.

De Klerk said he would make an announcement to Parliament Monday on the situation, describing the bloodshed as ''absolutely disconcerting'' and having reached ''unacceptable proportions'' since last month's release of Mandela from 27 years imprisionment.

In a day underscoring the complexities of South Africa's divided black society, Mandela's aides announced he would not appear publicly with Buthelezi Monday at an unprecedented joint rally for peace that both leaders had confirmed late Thursday.

Buthelezi, whose Zulu Inkatha movement has clashed violently with supporters of Mandela's African National Congress and satellite groups since 1987, said he was ''astonished'' when the 71-year-old Mandela told him by telephone the public meeting was canceled.

The Zulu leader said Mandela told him aides ''advised him against holding any meeting at all at this stage. They argued that people were too tense and that fighting was continuing and therefore a meeting could not be held.

''This astounded me because as far as I am concerned the meeting Dr. Mandela and I would have addressed jointly would have been held precisely because people are fighting and dying,'' Buthelezi said. ''It is the killing that has to be stopped while it is going on.''

At the end of a five-hour meeting of ANC officials in Johannesburg, a statement said the movement had decided ''the atmosphere is not yet ideal fo a joint rally in Natal.'' It said Mandela would, however, visit the area Monday and seek a private meeting with Buthelezi.

Buthelezi and Mandela spoke by telephone Thursday and Buthelezi announced they would appear together publicly for the first time in Taylor's Halt, an Inkatha stronghold 15 miles west of Pietermaritzburg in the Edendale Valley.

Community sources in Edendale said they expected ANC supporters to boycott the event and warned of the danger posed by Mandela setting foot in any area not regarded as neutral territory. A delegation flew to Johannesburg to warn him of the security threat.

Police said they found the bodies of 10 black men in the Taylor's Halt area Thurday and two others in separate incidents elsewhere, including a 25-year-old man with bullet wounds in the chest, pushing the death toll since Tuesday night to 38.

The white opposition Democratic Party, which has accused police of siding with Inkatha and urged De Klerk to impose martial law, said at least 50 people and possibly as many as 70 have died since Tuesday.

Some 3,000 people have died in the conflict since 1987 across the Indian Ocean Province of Natal but the fighting that erupted in Edendale valley outside Pietermaritzburg was the worst this year. Up to 12,000 fighters engaging in scattered attacks across the vast and hilly area.

More than 200 houses have been set ablaze in the attacks, said to have been sparked by the stoning of busloads of Inkatha supporters returning home after a Buthelezi rally in Durban Sunday. Thousands of blacks have been driven from their homes, seeking refuge with whites in the area, community centers and churches.

As his lieutenants stepped up efforts to halt the fighting, De Klerk said violence throughout the country had reached ''unacceptable proportions'' and declared ''no room for violence from any quarter in determining the future of South Africa.''

''If certain elements on the left and on the right continue their present course of violence and lawlessness, the government will be obliged to use the full weight of its power to restore law and order in an unprejudiced manner,'' De Klerk told the Cape Town press club.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok summoned top police generals to a meeting Friday on the Natal flareup and a spokesman said he would meet Saturday with Buthelezi. Buthelezi claims a membership to Inkatha of more than 1 million Zulus, the country's largest tribe.

The fighting, ostensibly over political control, has posed the greatest obstacle to black unity in power-sharing negotiations De Klerk has proposed in an effort to resolve the country's protracted racial conflict.

Buthelezi's refusal to endorse the armed struggle against white rule and staunch opposition to economic sanctions to force an end to apartheid have earned him the reputation as a moderate and a bitter enemy of the ANC.

ATLANTA (MARCH 30) UPI - A group of black U.S. Forest Service workers are threatening to file suit against their southern regional employers over complaints of discrimination in hiring, promotions and distribution of awards.

''The Forest Service in the southern region is consistently and deliberately practicing discrimination where black employees are concerned '' said John Vann, a spokesman for the proposed complaint. ''It's time everyone knows what kind of agency the Forest Service really is.''

The proposed suit alleges that blacks in the region are not being treated as professionals and are being denied certain ''fringe benefits'' that are freely given their white co-workers.

Vann said the employees charge that:

-Blacks are encouraged to apply for available jobs only after prospective whites employees have been selected for the positions.

-Fewer blacks receive awards than their white counterparts.

-Black Forest Service workers have the lowest-paying jobs in the southern region and remain in these positions three to four times longer than whites.

-Black employees in the agency at all levels are branded as undesirable when they speak out on injustices affecting them.

''When employees speak out against the injustices being inflicted upon them, then pressure is applied to get that employee to quit,'' said Vann, a soil specialist working in Atlanta. ''The idea: to remove all 'troublemakers' and bring in people who will not speak out. It's time this treatment stopped.''

Vann said about 50 black Forest Service employees ranging from rangers to office workers in the southern region are backing the proposed suit that would probably be filed in Atlanta's U.S. District Court.

He said in several instances black Forest Service workers were forced to leave their jobs.

He said Oscar Hall, an employee at the Macon Tree Seed Lab, was forced to take an early retirement in 1989 as a result of his speaking out against harassment of black women at his workplace.

Vann said he hoped the matter could be settled out of court.

He said regional forester Jack Alcock has been presented a list of proposed resolutions.

''We are willing to take whatever action necessary to see that justice is done,'' he said.

Alcock was not immediately available for comment.

ALTONA, NY (MARCH 30) UPI - Gunfire from a Mohawk Indian encampment struck a Vermont Air National Guard helicopter on an emergency medical evacuation mission Friday, wounding a doctor and forcing the chopper to land in a field.

The UH-1 ''Huey'' helicopter from the Delta 150th Aviation Batallion was forced down about 11:20 a.m. and made a ''controlled landing,'' State Police Sgt. Victor Rycroft said.

''It sustained some damage as a result of gunfire but the pilot was able to land it,'' he said.

Lt. Ron Clark, a State Police spokesman in Albany, said ''the bird was over the Ganienkeh Mohawk encampment when the pilot heard shots.''

Five people - three military personnel, the doctor and a nurse - were aboard the helicopter. The helicopter was heading to Massena Memorial Hospital to pick up a seriously ill patient, officials said.

The wounded man, identified as Dr. James van Kirk, was shot in the arm and was reported in stable condition at the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont in Burlington, authorities said.

The helicopter landed in an open field along at state highway about 7 miles northwest of the Plattsburgh Air Force Base, Rycroft said.

Mohawks in upstate New York have been feuding with the state and federal government since July, when State Police and the FBI raided a number of casinos on the St. Regis Indian Reservation about 100 miles west of the encampment.

PRETORIA, South Africa (MARCH 30) UPI - The government lifted a ban Friday on the screening of the film ''A Dry White Season,'' saying graphic scenes of torture and murder by police of anti-apartheid activists no longer pose a threat to public order.

Publications Appeal Board Chairman Kobus van Rooyen lifted the ban but set an age-21 restriction on the grounds that younger viewers might find the torture scenes ''offensive.''

The film starring Donald Sutherland and Marlon Brando may only be shown in cinemas with a seating capacity of 250 or fewer, ''where films of a serious and controversial nature are usually shown.''

Van Rooyen said, ''Although the film may well upset certain viewers because it often takes a one-sided look at the race problem, this film contains so many inaccuracies and such obvious propaganda that it will not affect race relations.''

Van Rooyen said there is ''a much more relaxed political climate'' in South Africa on race relations now.

Based on the novel by Afrikaner Andre Brink and directed by black American Euzhan Palcy, the film is about a white schoolteacher aroused from white suburban complacency when he trys to help a servant deal with South African authorities. It showed last year at selected film festivals in South Africa with special permission but was banned from general showing.

MOSCOW (MARCH 30) UPI - Estonia's non-communist Parliament voted for a transition to independence Friday, avoiding a Lithuania-like showdown with Moscow.

''The restoration of the republic of Estonia has begun,'' said a document approved unanimously by 73 deputies with three absentions. The document was a pragmatic but pale shadow of Lithuania's bold assertion of sovereignty on March 11.

Algirdas Cekuolis, a Lithuanian People's Deputy, who was in Tallinn, praised the sober proceedings.

''I see they have learned from our bitter experience,'' Cekuolis said.

Earlier, the entire communist government resigned as a prelude to the formation of a coalition Cabinet that will lead the Baltic republic to independence.

The vote on the declaration of a transition to sovereignty came after a long debate in which ethnic Russian deputies said such a measure should be submitted to the republic's voters in a referendum.

In its final passed form, the declaration said: ''The Supreme Soviet declares a beginning of a period of transition which will culminate in the formation of the constitutional organs of the state power of the republic of Estonia.''

The 105-member Estonian Parliament, elected March 18 and dominated by Popular Front members, spent all day on the document's wording.

The declaration stressed that largely Lutheran Estonia was not breaking from Moscow but was reinstituting its old state in a subtle attempt to avoid the mounting debacle of Lithuania's declaration of independence.

But it said, ''The Supreme Soviet of the Estonian Socialist Republic does not recognize the legality of the power of the U.S.S.R. on the territory of Estonia.''

The three Baltic republics maintain they were annexed into the Soviet Union as part of a secret World War II deal between Soviet despot Josef Stalin and Nazi Fuhrer Adolf Hitler.

The Parliament, or Supreme Soviet, also debated recognition of Lithuanian independence and full support for Vilnius' battle for sovereignty.

As part of the orderly path Estonia has chosen, the entire communist government resigned with Premier Indrek Toome staying on as caretaker.

Observers described the atmosphere as ''electric'' in the Parliament whose makeup mirrors the ethnic mix in the tiniest Baltic republic - two-thirds Estonians and one-third Russians.

The deputies said unequivocally they supported Catholic Lithuania's bid to regain its pre-World War II independence and criticized Moscow's heavy-handed tactics.

''Despite the peaceful means of assuring sovereignty, the U.S.S.R. went on a path of ultimatums and military pressures in Lithuania - the aim of which is to make permanent the occupation of the Lithuanian republic,'' the draft document said.

''In this difficult time for the Lituthanian people, the Surpeme Soviet of Estonia expresses it full support for their striving and recognizes the independence and statehood of Lithuania,'' it said.

The vote on the declaration of Lithuanian support is scheduled for Monday.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - President Bush is seeking help from Europe, Canada, Japan and the Soviet Union to fulfill his grand plans to establish a colony on the moon and send men to Mars, the White House announced Friday.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, in a statement, said Bush had decided that the United States ''will seek an exploratory dialogue'' with several nations, ''as appropriate on international cooperation on the initiative.''

The spokesman said the president based his decision on a report by the National Space Council, led by Vice President Dan Quayle, which concluded that ''international cooperation in this endeavor is feasible ... subject to the satisfaction of national security, foreign policy, scientific and economic interests.''

The announcement, however, comes as plans for the first phase of the initiative, constructing the Space Station Freedom, have been called into question with reports that repairs would be needed on the station before it is even completed.

The appeal for help is a step toward fulfilling Bush's vow - made on the 20th anniversary of the Apollo lunar landing last July 20 - to complete a space station, return man permanently to the moon, and send a manned expedition to Mars by early in the next century.

PARIS (MARCH 30) UPI - France sent troop reinforcements to Chad Friday following an outbreak of fierce fighting along the West African nation's border with Sudan between Chadian troops and rebels backed by Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi.

The clashes broke out Sunday between the rebels of the Islamic Legion, a force funded by Tripoli and up partly of mercenaries, and troops loyal to Chadian President Hissene Habre.

Libya has denied any involvement in the fighting.

French Defense Ministry sources did not say how many troops it was sending to the West African nation, but indicated it viewed the flare-up as endangering French forces there.

The French contingent in Chad, called ''Epervier,'' consists of about 1,000 men deployed at Ndjamena, the Chadian capital, and at the Eastern city of Abeche. French troops were deployed in Chad in early 1986 in response to a Libyan offensive in the north of the country.

The reinforcement was sent Friday ''in agreement with the Chadian authorities,'' said the French statement, ''in order to guarantee the security of French troops present in that region.''

Chad and Libya have fought and on-again-off-again war over the Aouzou Strip since 1973.

In August 1989 they agreed to settle their claims within a year. Chadian and Libyan foreign ministers met Monday and Tuesday in Gabon to try to resolve their differences.

But Chad protested to the U.N. Security Council Monday over what it said was an attack by the Libyan-backed rebels. It also accused Sudan of ''siding with the enemy.''

Regular Chadian army units are believed to have regrouped at Iriba, some 36 miles to the west of the Sudanese border, French Defense Ministry sources said.

Chadian forces carried out a series of raids into Sudanese territory against the Libyan-backed rebels in October and November.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl Vuono postponed indefinitely a scheduled visit to the Soviet Union because of the tense situation between Moscow and Lithuania, Pentagon officials said Friday.

''He felt this wasn't a good time for him to go,'' said Maj. Kathy Wood, a defense spokeswoman. ''We hope that he will eventually be able to go.''

Vuono, the Army's representative on the Joint Chiefs of Staff, had planned to leave Washington Saturday for Helsinki, Finland, and to arrive in Moscow on Monday for a Soviet visit that would last until April 7. He was scheduled to visit Kiev and Leningrad in addition to Moscow.

Vuono decided to postpone his trip following discussions on the situation in the Soviet Union with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Secretary of State James Baker, Wood said.

Vuono's trip had been scheduled as part of a continuing U.S.-Soviet military exchange program, defense officials said.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) UPI - The dollar reasserted itself against Japan's yen in New York trading Friday and firmed against most other currencies in thin dealings on the last business day of the month, quarter and Japanese fiscal year.

Currency traders surmised that the Japanese tax year's close was one reason for the dollar's brisk recovery in New York and on other world exchanges after a sharp, rumor-driven selloff against the yen the day before.

"We've had very, very choppy, illiquid trading conditions all day," reported Harris Trust & Savings Bank foreign exchange manager Valerie Walker. "Some of that may be Japanese banks trying to square up for year-end." Besides that, dealers were closing out monthly and quarterly books.

Late in the New York session the dollar was quoted at 1.6940 German marks, up slightly from Thursday's late price of 1.6925. Against the Japanese currency it was changing hands at 158.45 yen, up from 156.27.

The only real movement was the dollar's two-yen gain, building on a rally that began in the Tokyo market. Market-watchers there said Japanese companies were snapping up dollars, momentarily off price highs, for year-end settlement of bills and for balance-sheet requirements.

One New York trader cited market talk that a leading Tokyo newspaper would report in its Saturday edition that an April 7 meeting in Paris of the Group of Seven major industrial nations would focus on the yen.

"It just gave the traders something to trade off," he said. "There was one little run in yen and otherwise everybody kept it close to the vest."

Other dollar rates: 1.4982 Swiss francs, up from 1.4935; 5.7030 French francs, up from 5.6980; and 1,249 Italian lire, up from 1,247.50. The British pound rose to $1.6460 from $1.6420.

In Europe the dollar was mostly lower. It closed down in Frankfurt at 1.6960 marks against 1.7005 Thursday and also fell in Zurich, to 1.5017 Swiss francs against 1.5050.

In London, the pound closed more than a cent higher against the U.S. unit at $1.6460 against $1.6335.

The dollar was off in Paris and Milan at 5.6980 French francs against 5.7205 and 1,243.92 Italian lire against 1,252.75. But in Brussels it was slightly higher, at 35.1350 Belgian francs against 35.1150.

In Tokyo earlier, strong dollar demand resurfaced to push the U.S. currency up 1 yen to close at 157.65 against 156.65. The rebound was seen as a return to the previous trend of yen weakness.

"The market was enormously in need of dollars," commented Tetsuya Taura, a Sumitomo Bank analyst. Bullishness was traced to firms buying up dollars to settle import bills on the fiscal year's last trading day.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $370.50 an ounce, off from $371.25 Thursday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled April spot gold at $370.20 an ounce, off from $370.80. In Zurich, gold fell to $368.50 an ounce from $372. In London the metal declined to $369.75 an ounce from $371.75.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.97 an ounce, unchanged. The Comex closed April spot silver at $4.945 an ounce, up from $4.944. Zurich silver was off at $4.95 an ounce against $5.00. London silver fell to $4.97 an ounce from $4.98.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 30) UPI - The Federal Open Market Committee, determined to eliminate inflation, voted at its Feb. 6-7 meeting against substantially lowering interest rates, according to a summary of the session released Friday.

The decision was not a surprise, as consumer credit rates and the interest banks pay on deposits have not changed much in the weeks since the closed-door meeting.

In addition, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan has repeatedly said that the central bank is determined to wipe out inflation in five years. The Fed's primary weapon in the offensive is a tight monetary policy.

So as not to influence financial markets, the Fed panel waits six weeks before revealing the actions it has taken and the reasoning behind them. The most recent meeting of the committee was held Tuesday.

At the February session, the FOMC said it "seeks monetary and financial policy that will foster price stability" while "promoting growth in output on a sustainable basis." The committee also expressed concern about volatile currency exchange rates.

"In the implementation of policy for the immediate future, the committee seeks to maintain the existing degree of pressure on reserve positions," the policy statement said.

"Taking account of the progress toward price stability, the strength of the business expansion, the behavior of the monetary aggregates, and developments in foreign exchange and domestic financial markets, slightly greater reserve restraint or slightly lower reserve restraint would be acceptable in the inter-meeting period," the statement also said.

But not all the members of the FOMC - made up of Greenspan, the five Fed governors and the 12 district bank presidents - agreed with the decision. Robert Boykin, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, and Fed governor W. Lee Hoskins, believing more should be done against inflation, voted for higher interest rates. Fed governor Martha Seger voted for lower rates to spur growth.

Private economists suspect that at this week's meeting, the FOMC decided again against easing credit conditions, although the White House has been advocating lower interest rates to nurse the sluggish economy.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Late buying helped push up crude oil and products prices Friday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, with technical factors largely controlling the trading activity in the absence of any major developments.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for May delivery rose 25 cents to $20.28 a barrel on the Merc. The closing, however, was 11 cents lower than a week ago closing of $20.39 a barrel.

Unleaded gasoline for May delivery, the contract receiving the most attention on the Merc recently, also moved up 0.25 cent to 65.36 cents a gallon. It closed at 57.66 cents a gallon at the end of the previous week. Home-heating oil rose 0.56 cent to 54.34 cents a gallon. A week ago, heating oil closed at 55.46 cents a gallon.

"We got good buying before the weekend. There was more interest in taking delivery than making delivery," said Peter Beutel at Elders Futures Inc. in New York. "Other than that it was a quiet day and only the technical indications helped the market to drift up."

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, WTI was quoted at $20.35 a barrel, up 35 cents. On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent crude was up ten cents to $18.25 a barrel.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - added 25 cents to $15.60 a barrel.

Among factors affecting the market this week was a Department of Energy report that showed U.S. crude stocks a week earlier rose 9.3 million barrels while gasoline inventories dropped by 8.4 million barrels

The American Petroleum Institute had reported that crude stocks increased by 7.5 million barrels last week, while gasoline supplies declined by 5.8 million barrels.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Prosecutor Dan Webb said in closing arguments today that John Poindexter engaged in an illegal ''cover-up, deception and concealment'' in the Iran-Contra scandal. Webb told jurors that they could sit as panelists in one-thousand other cases and NOT find such overwhelming proof of guilt. Poindexter is the highest-ranking Reagan administration official to stand trial in the scandal. He's accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress, obstructing its investigation and destroying documents.

Chinese sources say the nation's government is gathering security forces in the capital of Beijing in fear of renewed unrest one year after the rise of the pro-democracy movement that was violently crushed on June 3rd of last year. The government also is preventing gatherings in Tiananmen Square and limiting contacts with foreigners.

South African President Frederik de Klerk today warned of a possible crackdown against black violence in Natal province, where three days of bloodshed between rival black movements left at least 38 people dead. De Klerk said violence throughout the country has reached ''unacceptable proportions,'' and he threatened to use the ''full weight'' of the government's powers to restore law and order.

Los Angeles authorities say the armed woman who is barricaded in the home of actress Sharon Gless has hounded the actress in the past and refused to leave her alone. The woman, identified as Joni Pen, is armed with an assault rifle. She refused to leave the home... triggering a standoff with police that's been going on for hours. A restraining order was issued against Pen in 1988 to keep her away from Gless.

LIMA, PERU (MARCH 30) UPI - A helicopter loaned to Peru by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration crashed Friday near the city of Tingo Maria, injuring all five crew members including three American citizens, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The chopper, a UHU-HC on loan to the Peruvian police, was flying in a formation of three when a motor lost power due to mechanical difficulties near Tingo Maria, 200 miles northeast of Lima, the spokesman said.

The three Americans - the pilot, a medic and mechanic - suffered leg and head injuries, said the spokesman, who declined to indentify the injured. The co-pilot and gunner for the craft, both Peruvians, also were injured, he said.

The DEA is supporting Peru's anti-drug effort at the Santa Lucia base near Tingo Maria, located in the Upper Huallago valley. The area is believed to be the world's largest coca-producing region.

Coca is the leaf that provides the raw material for producing cocaine.

LINDEN, N.J. (APRIL 2) UPI - Bringing a line of light trucks to the General Motors Corp.'s Linden assembly plant would restore the jobs of 800 second-shift workers who now are on indefinite layoff, the plant's union president said Friday.

But Charlie Marshall, president of Local 595, United Auto Workers, said no definite agreement has been reached.

A published report said GM plans to spend $140 million to retool the plant to make light trucks and sports-utility vehicles.

''I expect a new product, but no announcement has been made,'' Marshall said.

The Linden plant, GM's only assembly plant in New Jersey, now makes Corsicas and Berettas. At the beginning of the year, the company cut back to one shift.

Laid-off workers, many of them with more than a decade of seniority, were warned that they should not expect to be recalled.

Local 595 Shop Chairman Guy Messina told the Newark Star-Ledger that union members voted 2-1 last week for an agreement that might keep the plant open and bring in new work. He said GM negotiators and the local had been involved in intensive talks.

Messina said the union had agreed to give up a 10-minute morning coffee break and also discussed with the company whether more work now handled through outside suppliers could be done at the plant.

If GM carries through with the conversion, the first trucks would be completed in early 1992 and a second shift would be added in September for the 1993 model-year, he said. The move would bring back 800 jobs, increasing total employment from 1,800 to 2,600.

GM's compact cars, including the Beretta and Corsica, have been hit by declining sales. But light trucks have become more popular, often replacing family cars.

The models to be produced at Linden would include the Chevrolet S-10 pickup truck and S-10 Blazer, a sport-utility vehicle, Messina said.

GM opened the plant in 1937 to make Buick sedans and cars have been made there ever since, except during World War II, when the plant was converted to manufacture Wildcat fighter planes for the Navy. In the late 1980s, GM spent $300 million to upgrade the plant and to convert from large luxury models, including Cadillacs, to compacts.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) UPI - The stock market staggered to a sluggish close Friday after trading followed a decline in the Japanese market that some traders were betting would continue. An expected rally by institutional traders on the final trading day of the quarter was attempted shortly before 2:30 p.m. EST but quickly faded away.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 15.99 Thursday, closed down 20.49 to 2707.21.

The broader market gauges also were off. The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.32 to 186.85 and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slipped 0.85 to 339.94. The price of an average share fell six cents.

Declines led advances 723-719 among the 1,939 issues crossing the NYSE tape at 4 p.m. EST. Volume amounted to about 139,340,000 shares, compared with 132,190,000 traded Thursday.

Prices were slightly higher in active trading of American Stock Exchange issues, with the exchange's market value index up 1.52 to 361.75 as advances led declines 284-261.

Volume was an estimated 17,400,000 shares compared with 12,400,000 shares Thursday. Las Vegas casino operator Elsinore Corp. led the AMEX, up 1/16 at one. The next two most active on the AMEX - Salomon Put Warrants and Denmark Kingdom Warrants - reflected traders' bets that the Tokyo stock market would continue to decline. Salomon gained by 2 1/8 to 10 1/4 and Denmark Kingdom was up two to 11.

Stock prices plunged 3.37 percent Friday on the Tokyo Stock Exchange as institutions sold off holdings on the last trading day of the Japanese fiscal year.

The blue-chip Nikkei average of 225 issues, which fell 562.39 points Thursday, tumbled 1,045.71 points to 29,980.45, closing below the 30,000 level for the second time this month.

"Traders are making bets that the Japanese market is going lower," said John Burnett, senior vice president and head trader at Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. "The lower the Nikkei goes, the higher these (warrant prices) go," Burnett said.

Trude Latimer, an analyst with Josephthal & Co., said the NYSE took a turn upward shortly before 2:30 p.m. EST as the institutional traders started "marking up" their accounts on the final trading day of the first quarter - activity known as "window dressing."

Burnett said, "It looked like they had something going. It started and then died. "More sleepiness followed. It was a 'who cares kind of market,"' Burnett said. "It's a nowhere market. People are waiting for the quarter to be over with. There is no outstanding characteristic of this market at all," he said.

Latimer said she could not remember a first quarter ending on such relatively low volume.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 165,985,030 shares, compared with 159,526,660 shares traded in the previous session.

The AMEX composite volume was 19,800,955 shares, compared with 14,854,500 shares in the previous session.

On the trading floor, AMAX was the most active trading issue, down 1 1/8 at 27 3/4. The next most active issues were Baroid, up 3/8 to 10 3/8, and the Irish Investment Fund, unchanged at 12.

Among the blue chips, IBM was up 1/8 to 106 1/8, General Electric lost 1/4 to 64 1/4, and Coca-Cola was down 3/4 to 74 3/4.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index edged up 0.12 to 435.54.

THREE RIVERS, Mich. (APRIL 2) UPI - The last transmission came off the line Friday at General Motors' Hydra-matic Division plant that employed more than 2,000 workers during peak production.

The Saginaw Division's Automotive Components Group of GM will assume managenent of the 700,000 square-foot plant May 1 and produce drive shafts now made at GM's Chevrolet-Pontiac-Canada facility in Parma, Ohio. Retooling will begin immediately, GM said.

Several hundred people turned out to witness the end of the Hydra-matic era, including employees, United Auto Workers Union officials, community leaders and members of GM management.

The Three Rivers plant was acquired in 1977 for the production of the THM200-4R, GM's first four-speed overdrive transmission that was designed to meet demand for more fuel-efficient vehicles.

A three-year refurbishing effort led to the 1980 introduction of the transmission, developed for GM's top of the line full-sized passenger cars. Total employment in Hydra-matic's St. Joseph County operations peaked at more than 2,000 in the 1980s but dwindled in recent years with the industry-wide change to front-drive models.

Personnel Director Jack Gray said about 275 employees would report for work Monday and many would remain on the job during the transition to the Saginaw Division operations.

Plant employment under the old management Friday numbered 537.

The Saginaw Division said it expects to begin producing drive shafts for rear-drive vehicles in late 1991. In December, the division said it should employ about 700 when full production is reached in 1993.

HOLLYWOOD (MARCH 30) UPI - Life in the fast lane destroyed Margaux Hemingway's film career just as it was getting under way a decade ago, but now, at 35, the granddaughter of the late, great author says she is ready to come back. And the best way to get Hollywood's attention, she figured, was to pose nude.

The statuesque model-actress is featured inside - and on the cover - of Playboy's current edition. If nothing else, she proved she is in great shape. She insists that everything else is in order too, claiming victory in her battle against alcohol and cocaine dependencies.

Hemingway was a giddy 19-year-old when she burst on the national scene as an ingenue in "Lipstick." The movie was terrible, but she captured the country's imagination.

A fresh-faced, outdoor girl from Ketchum, Idaho, Hemingway was a delightfully candid, naive newcomer whose love of life catapulted her into celebrity. She adorned the cover of Time magazine. After all, this was Ernest Hemingway's granddaughter.

She signed a $1 million contract to promote a perfume and toured the world. She made movies - "Killer Fish," "A Fistful of Chopsticks" and "Over the Brooklyn Bridge" - none of which was much good.

She was married and divorced twice, moving her home from New York to Venezuela to Paris and leading a fast-paced life that was going nowhere. Her second marriage - to Venezuelan documentary film producer Bernard Foucher - finally hit the rocks and Hemingway all but disappeared.

Some two and a half years ago she spent a month in the Betty Ford Clinic in Rancho Mirage, Calif., and has been sober since. She also lost 75 pounds.

Last year she completed a movie in Paris, "Love in C Minor," and hopes it will lead to a revived acting career in Hollywood, where she currently lives.

"I'm single and in charge of my own life for the first time," she said. "It's a marvelous feeling. I decided to do the Playboy layout to cause a commotion," she said. "I wanted to pose sleek and sophisticated, like an Italian version of Vogue - no garter belts or fishnet stockings. I wore nothing.

"It was artistically done in Guatemala and British Honduras. It was very high energy, high voltage. I've always been comfortable in front of a still camera, but I was nervous about posing nude."

Her younger sister Mariel twice posed nude for Playboy and was seen several times sunwashed in the movies "Personal Best" and "Star 80." "Mariel saw my layout and telephoned to say she loved it," Margaux said. "Coming from her, that's really a compliment.

"Things have changed between us. We get along real well now, but we've never seen a lot of each other. Mariel spends a great deal in Ketchum and Sun Valley."

Hemingway said many of her personal demons stem from the fact that she is dyslexic, making it difficult for her to read scripts. As she gained fame she became ever more insecure.

"Going to the Betty Ford Clinic changed my life around," she said. "Alcohol was my problem. It runs in the Hemingway family. So does suicide, and for awhile that didn't seem like such a bad idea.

"When I left the clinic I lived in Ketchum for awhile, then New York, Paris, and here. I remember when I moved to New York I was only 19 and a lot of things hit me too quickly. It was life in the fast lane. I went for the volt. I wanted everything from life quickly. Eventually I hit the wall.

"I fell in love with Bernard and we moved to Venezuela to make documentaries. That took me away from acting and modeling and I started drinking a lot. A lot! Then I used cocaine. Nobody can handle that. You cannot abuse yourself. I developed bulimia. I lost respect for Bernard and worse, I lost my self-respect.

"I drank because I was living with fear. Afraid of not living up to my grandfather's image. Now I have no desire for alcohol or cocaine. That's the most important change in my life.

"I'm reading with blue-tinted glasses. They've helped me overcome dyslexia. Can you imagine a Hemingway not being able to read?"

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (MARCH 30) UPI - Actress Lisa Zane was born in Chicago and educated at Vasser, but she looks "foreign" or "exotic" and that has worked both for and against her. In the case of her part in "Bad Influence " it definitely worked for her.

"It frustrates me not to be considered more often for roles that call for American girls my age," she said. "I've played them on stage. I want to be the guardian of all that is mysterious and beautiful. I want to do it all.

"The girl" role in male-oriented movies usually goes to blue-eyed women with an identifiable "American appearance" - non-ethnic. Zane is a young beauty of Greek heritage and she is clearly ethnic, or if you perfer, exotic. She has been told time and again that she didn't look quite right for roles. She wasn't the right type.

But when she auditioned for the murder victim in "Bad Influence" with Rob Lowe and James Spader, her luck changed. Producer Steve Tisch thought she was perfect for the part of Claire, whom she describes as a male fantasy.

With only two movies to her credit, "Gross Anatomy" and "Heart of Dixie," Zane - hungry for a job - still turned down Tisch because she didn't like the role.

Laughing at the recollection, she said, "When I audition for a role I think they see me as Eurotrash because I do look European. In 'Bad Influence' I play a kind of night creature who gets picked up, used, and killed.

"Claire is a sensuous woman, but not overtly sexual. One of the crew members described me in the role as the Audrey Hepburn from hell. I tried to take the curse off her as being the typical hopeless movie victim. She's brutally murdered in the picture, but I didn't want to play her as helpless. That was my objection to taking the part in the first place.

"Tisch and (director) Curtis Hanson were surprised when I told them I didn't want to play Claire. They talked me into it, explaining I could make her cool and laid-back. They agreed to let me bring some of my own ideas to Claire, including self-confidence and a sense of her own presence. If they'd made this picture a couple of decades ago, Claire would have been more of a pushover, helpless and fragile.

"Originally they were going to use a blonde and play her more innocent. Because of the brutality, they decided that a sweet, innocent victim would have been too disturbing, so they decided on a calculated risk-taker, a more worldly girl. Somehow, that's supposed to make the murder less brutal.

"I'm the only woman in the movie, but even then Claire isn't a full character. There never is time time spent on the development of the female in male-dominated films.

"The audience knows very little about Claire except she is adventurous, fearless, and evasive. You don't know where she from or how she lives. Claire is supposed to be an extraordinarily sexy woman and as an actress I was called upon to project sex. When the cameras started I tried not to think about being sensuous.

"In some reviews I've been accused of being sexy. Without thinking about it, I just felt a heightened energy or something. It's more flirtation with the lens than with the actor in the scene.

"I slowed everything down a little bit and unconsciously made an effort to be as feminine as I can be. But I couldn't judge my own sexuality when I saw the picture."

She says her foreign aura has worked both for and against her. "I came close to playing the Julia Roberts part in 'Mystic Pizza' a couple of years ago. It certainly helped her career."

She said "Bad Influence" might open some doors for her at the studios, but she won't allow herself to be optimistic. "I've been given the advice that in this business you should hope for the best and expect the worst. I'm very, very low key about it.

"It's hard to look at yourself in a picture and be objective about your performance. I do wish I had been in more scenes, but I suppose every actress feels that way."

MONTCLAIR, Calif. (APRIL 2) UPI - The Walt Disney Co., a leader in the film and amusement-park business, is branching out into the restaurant business with the planned opening of The Disney Restaurant next month.

The company will open its first fast-food restaurant April 21 at the Montclair Plaza, a regional shopping mall about 30 miles east of Los Angeles. Alongside the restaurant, the company will open one of its Disney Stores, a highly successful chain the company began three years ago.

''I think the idea of opening a restaurant along with the store is novel and very creative,'' Sarah Stack, a retail analyst with the securities firm Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, said Friday.

''Since Disney has the experience of both selling merchandise at the stores and parks and feeding people at the parks, this seems a logical off-site extension,'' Stack said.

''My sense is that it will be difficult to come out of there without eating something at the restaurant and buying something at the store.''

The move comes on the heels of Disney's decision late last year to go into the record business by starting its own label. The company has relied heavily in recent years on using one area of business to promote another, what Disney calls taking advantage of the ''synergies'' between its businesses.

The approach appears to be working, as Disney has posted record earnings through major expansions of its filmmaking business, parks and consumer products area. In the company's latest quarter ended Dec. 31, Disney earned $174.4 million on sales of $1.3 billion, both records.

A spokesman for Disney, of Burbank, Calif., had no comment on the plans for The Disney Restaurant. However, at the Montclair Plaza, there are signs at the store site, now under construction, seeking employees for the restaurant.

''We're seeking energetic, dependable people to work in The Disney Restaurant,'' one sign read. ''The Disney Restaurant will be an exciting new concept in a fun setting and will be opening in Montclair Plaza in April.''

The store and restaurant will occupy about 11,000 square feet of space. The stores, which sell a wide range of Disney items ranging from videos to talking Mickey Mouse T-shirts, generally occupy 3,000 to 4,000 square feet.

A Disney source said the restaurant concept will rolled out slowly, much like the Disney Store concept was in 1987. Disney executives said at the annual meeting earlier this year that it expected to open about 150 more stores during the next two years.

Last year, Disney officers said the store chain was posting yearly sales of $800 per square foot, better than double the national average for retailers. The stores feature movie sets with Disney characters and employees costumed in cardigan sweaters.

The stores also include strong promotion of other Disney products. A rear-wall screen plays a continuous loop of excerpts from Disney movies and there are telephones for customers to subscribe to the Disney Channel or purchase tickets for the Disney parks.

''There's an emotional attachment to Disney that goes much deeper than most other retailers,'' Stack said. ''Everyone has a history with Disney, so it's not as if the company has to develop brand awareness.''

One of Disney's theme-park competitors, Knott's Berry Farm in Brea, Calif. is also moving into the business of operating restaurants. Knott's will begin construction this summer of a Mrs. Knott's Restaurant and Bakery in Irvine, Calif., with a December opening scheduled, spokesman Stuart Zanville said.

The restaurant, however, will be a family-style operation seating about 225 and patterned after the Mrs. Knott's Chicken Dinner Restaurant at the theme park, which draws about 5 million visitors per year.

''We've been talking internally about opening an off-site restaurant for about 10 years,'' Zanville said. ''We're not doing this to compete with The Disney Restaurant.''

Zanville said Knott's is exploring the possibility of opening other restaurants in the Southern California area, but he said it would be doubtful that the company will go beyond that region.

DETROIT (APRIL 2) UPI - General Motors Corp.'s Cadillac division posted Friday its first general customer rebates this model year, while Chrysler Corp. once again extended its Guaranteed Rebate program, this time through May 31.

Cadillac's offer starts Sunday and will continue until May 31, with offers ranging from $1,500 to $2,000, depending on the car line. All models except the $50,900 Allante roadster are eligible, GM's luxury car division said.

The customer rebates replace an ''owner loyalty'' program that began Feb. 1 andoffered $1,500 coupons to former owners of Cadillac cars and owners of competing luxury makes, spokesman Vincent Muniga said.

The program is to expire Saturday, Muniga said, adding that no dealer incentives will be offered with the new customer rebates.

The new offers are being introduced to spur Cadillac's sales, which are 6.9 percent lower on a model-year basis but are about even with a year ago when measured on a calendar-year basis through March 20.

On Thursday, Ford Motor Co. extended $1,500 customer rebates on its Lincoln Continental and Mark VII luxury models until April 30, but no discounts were offered on the new Town Car sedan.

Chrysler extended the rebate program, started in late December, under which cash allowances are offered on all 1990-model domestic vehicles except its minivans and LeBaron convertibles.

Chrysler also doubled the $1,000 allowance on the 1989-model LeBaron coupe. But 1989 models are not eligible for the guarantee, under which Chrysler will make up the difference to buyers should the rebate be increased before Sept. 30, 1990.

No financial participation by dealers is required in any of the new programs, automakers said.

NEW YORK (MARCH 30) UPI - A federal judge Friday fined GAF Corp. $2 million and sentenced its vice chairman to six months in prison for their convictions on charges of manipulating Union Carbide Corp. stock.

GAF and Vice Chairman James T. Sherwin were convicted in December on eight charges of manipulating the Union Carbide stock in 1986 after an unsuccessful attempt to take over the company.

The conviction was the first time a company outside of Wall Street was found guilty of a securities crime in the cases that centered on former arbitrager Ivan Boesky.

U.S. District Judge Mary Johnson Lowe sentenced Sherwin, of Princeton, N.J., to six months in prison for his role in the manipulation scheme.

Sherwin, who remains free pending appeal, faced a possible sentence of five years in prison and a fine of $250,000 on each of the eight counts.

GAF, of Wayne, N.J., was sentenced to a fine of $2 million. The company faced a maximum penalty on all counts of $4 million.

A federal jury convicted GAF and Sherwin, after less than two days of deliberations, of violating federal law by secretly agreeing with a Los Angeles brokerage house to buy blocks of Union Carbide stock in order to drive up its price and then profit from the sale of the stock.

GAF had accumulated the Union Carbide stock in a bid to take over the company and was trying to sell the stock after the acquisition attempt failed.

Two of GAF's subsidiaries were acquitted in the case.

GAF and Sherwin were convicted after two mistrials - one after the jury declared itself deadlocked and the other when the judge ruled the government withheld a piece of evidence.

The government's star witness in the case was Boyd L. Jeffries, former head of the Los Angeles firm Jeffries & Co. He pleaded guilty to two securities law violations after he being secretly taped by Boesky.

Boesky, who cooperated with the government's investigation into insider trading on Wall Street, settled civil charges for a record $100 million in fines and was sentenced to three years in prison.

Earlier this month, GAF, without admitting or denying guilt, agreed to pay

$1.25 million to the Securities and Exchange Commission to settle civil charges in the case.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 30) UPI - A federal appeals judge Friday indefinitely stayed the execution of Robert Alton Harris to give lawyers time to challenge the competence of defense psychiatrists who testified in Harris's 1978 trial.

Judge John Noonan of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said lawyers for Harris made a ''substantial showing'' that Harris is entitled to a full hearing before U.S. District Judge William Enright in San Diego on the psychiatric issue.

Harris had been scheduled to die Tuesday at San Quentin in what would have been the first execution in California in 23 years.

Noonan, a staunchly conservative Reagan appointee, roundly chastised state prosecutors for repeatedly referring to the fact it has taken 12 years of litigation to bring the case to this point saying, ''the state has no interest in putting people to death unconstitutionally.''

BOISE, ID (MARCH 30) UPI - Gov. Cecil Andrus, facing a ''no-win'' political dilemma, Friday vetoed a bill that would have given Idaho the most restrictive state abortion law in the nation.

The proposal would have outlawed most abortions in Idaho. It was seen as a strategic move aimed at overturning Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion.

Andrus called the bill ''bad legislation'' drawn by forces outside of his state.

''When I consider what is best for Idaho, I must consider my own views and the needs of Idaho. This bill satisfies neither,'' said Andrus, a consistent abortion foe. ''I did not take the oath of office to put my name on bad legislation.''

Andrus said his decision was not influenced by threats of boycotts of Idaho potatoes and tourism. He noted the state would have faced ''tremendous'' legal costs defending the bill.

Andrus said the bill was so restrictive it could have stopped all abortions, even those sought because of rape or incest.

''The medical community advised us that they doubt there is any medical doctor who could perform any abortion in this state if the bill became law because of the legal liability restrictions putting the burden on them,'' Andrus said.

The bill cleared the state House of Representatives on a 47-36 vote and was passed by the Senate on a 25-17 vote. A two-thirds majority vote is required in both houses to override a veto.

Sponsors said the bill would have stopped 95 percent of the abortions in Idaho, outlawing the procedure except in cases of severe fetal deformity or in restricted cases of rape and incest or when a woman's life or health is in danger.

The National Right to Life Committee, which helped draft the measure, viewed the bill as its best hope to force the Supreme Court to overturn Roe vs. Wade.

However, abortion rights advocates said it is broadly unconstitutional, could not be upheld by the Supreme Court and would cost the state millions of dollars to defend in court.

Andrus, a Democrat seeking re-election in the mostly Republican state, argued that even the sponsors said the bill was drafted soley to give the Supreme Court a test case.

''I believe and I'm confident the people of Idaho believe we can make our own judgments on this terribly important issoe without ouside pressure, outside influence and threats,'' Andrus said.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Greyhound officials announced Friday they will not resume contract talks with union leaders and labor negotiators next week, citing recent threats and violence by striking drivers.

Although company and union officials were slated to resume contract negotiations Monday in Tucson, Ariz., Greyhound Executive Vice President P. Anthony Lannie sent word to both the drivers' union and the federal Mediation and Conciliation Service that he would not attend the talks after all, said James Power, spokesman for the mediators.

In his letter sent by telefax to union officials and the mediators, Lannie said the company had agreed to return to the bargaining table because of an apparent lull in the violence that has marred the walkout since it began Mar. 2.

But Lannie, citing a bus sniping in Oklahoma and a reported bomb threat in Chicago Friday, said: ''We cannot resume negotiations while the violence continues. Accordingly, we will not be in Tucson next Monday for bargaining.''

Bernard DeLury received word of the cancelled talks as he was being sworn in as director of the federal labor negotiation agency, Power said.

Power said a Greyhound official was in Washington for DeLury's installation, and DeLury ''cornered him'' during a reception to discuss the possibility of future talks.

In his letter addressed to Edward M. Strait, president of Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, Lannie said the Greyhound bargaining team would meet with union negotiators in Tucson on Apr. 9 if there were no new reports of violence in the next nine days.

''Mr. Lannie claims that the company's unwillingness to live up to its promise is due to isolated acts of violence that have occurred in recent days,'' Strait said in a statement. ''Clearly, this is a part of a smear campaign against the union and the Greyhound employees we represent.''

Strait repeated the union's condemnation of violence and suggested that some of the incidents have been perpetrated by ''unsafe and ill-trained replacement drivers against all people on the picket lines.''

Power said while DeLury and other mediators would like to renew the talks, none had been scheduled.

In Pittsburgh Friday, U.S. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole said she has no plans to participate in the contract talks because she believed the federal mediators will settle the dispute.

A Greyhound maintenance facility in Chicago received a bomb threat Friday shortly before 7:30 a.m., forcing the evacuation of about 50 workers, federal agents said.

Agents from the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms evacuated the building but let employees return about three hours later when no bomb was found, said ATF spokesman Jerry Singer.

Greyhound officials said the caller telephoned the Chicago maintenance barn and said unless Greyhound Chairman Fred Currey resolved the strike, a plastic explosive would be detonated, Barney said.

In Oklahoma, a bus carrying 26 passengers from New York apparently was struck by a shotgun blast about 2:30 a.m. Friday as it was traveling on Interstate 44, just east of Tulsa, Greyhound spokesman Steve Scarpino said.

Shotgun pellets hit the front of the bus but no injuries were reported, Scarpino said.

Greyhound said the shooting was the 24th involving its buses or terminals since the strike began Mar. 2. The incident came two days after Greyhound offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a bus sniper.

Throughout the four-week strike, company officials have repeatedly blamed union leaders for inciting anger on the picket lines.

The strike began after negotiations broke off on a proposed three-year contract for about 9,000 Greyhound union employees, including some 6,300 drivers.

Company officials have said Greyhound plans to have 3,200 full-time drivers and to operate its full regularly scheduled service by Easter. Greyound said it has hired 1,700 replacement drivers and that 400 union drivers have crossed the picket lines. It is currently providing about 50 percent of its service, according to Lannie.

The National Labor Relations Board is reviewing a complaint by the union that Greyhound was bargaining in bad faith before the strike and was trying to break the union.

The company has accused drivers, who now average $24,700 a year, of asking for wage increases that could only be financed through fare increases.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA (APRIL 2) UPI - More dead animals have been turning up in the Exxon oil spill impact zone of Prince William Sound and the Coast Guard in an order Friday told Exxon to re-establish its system for recovering oily wildlife.

The Coast Guard approved Exxon's general plan for the 1990 oil spill cleanup, now in its second year, but attached a number of conditions to the approval. Several of those were designed to cope with the oil threat to wild animals.

Exxon has said it expected no further harm to wildlife of Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska, where tens of thousands of animals died from the 11 million gallons of oil that poured out of the Exxon Valdez when it hit Bligh Reef March 24, 1989.

But state Commissioner of Environmental Conservation Dennis Kelso said state environmental field workers continue to find dead otters.

''We find them all the time,'' said Tim Langdon, a field officer working out of Valdez. He said a deer found on an oily shoreline on Naked Island and several sea otters were among recent deaths. Other carcasses found recently on oiled beaches may have been there for a while.

''Sometimes they're skin and bones, sometimes they're fresh,'' Langdon said. ''We try to get these specimens before the scavengers pick them clean.''

Necropsies were being done to determine whether Exxon oil killed the animals.

When the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service stopped counting dead oiled animals at the end of the cleanup last September, it had tallied 36,471 sea birds, 1,016 otters and 156 bald eagles. It said the animals were just a fraction of those killed by the spill and estimated that between 90,000 and 270,000 sea birds died, making the Exxon spill history's deadliest.

In a news release Friday announcing conditional approval of Exxon's general cleanup plan, the Coast Guard said, ''There must be a reporting, retrieval, transportation and veterinary treatment system in place in case wildlife is oiled on shore or by sheens in the water.''

''That's one area that will have to be covered,'' Coast Guard spokesman Dan Dewell said.

Fish and Wildlife Service coordinator Paul Gertler said his agency sought the requirement and he applauded the Coast Guard for imposing it. He said Exxon must come up with specific arrangements to deal with dead and living animals in oily areas.

An Exxon spokesman said the company had just received the Coast Guard notice and was unprepared to respond. Exxon earlier said it had no plans to renew wildlife collection efforts because they were unnecessary.

In a Feb. 15 news release, Exxon said a survey found birds and mammals returning to Prince William Sound.

''While certainly not definitive, we consider the results of the survey to be encouraging,'' Exxon biologist Mike Barker said. ''We are pleased to see that wildlife apparently are still occupying areas previously affected by the spill.''

Last week Kelso found a dead, oily bald eagle on an oiled beach and turned it over to the Fish and Wildlife Service after presenting it at a Coast Guard oil spill meeting to refute Exxon claims that the sound was returning to normal.

Exxon reported that its $2 billion cleanup included $41 million spent on bird and otter centers and $1.5 million for bald eagle capture and treatment.

Shoreline surveys now under way will determine how much cleanup work must be done, which beaches must be cleaned again and what methods should be used.

In a letter Friday, Coast Guard Rear Adm. David Ciancaglini wrote Exxon cleanup manager Otto Harrison that ''Exxon must be prepared to provide highly targeted, concentrated cleanup measures to improve the habitat ... prior to the proposed start date for general cleanup of May 1'' if oil threatens migrating waterfowl or marine mammals.

Ciancaglini also told Harrison to provide a detailed plan for handling wildlife in areas affected by the spill. Exxon must submit a detailed cleanup work plan by April 20.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (APRIL 2) UPI - The judge who sentenced convicted cop-slapper Zsa Zsa Gabor to community service is seeking additional proof that she has completed her work at a homeless shelter, her prosecutor said Friday.

Vera Davis, the executive director of the LIEU-CAP shelter in Venice, wrote a letter dated March 23 to Municipal Judge Charles Rubin, stating that Gabor had completed her 120 hours of court-ordered service at the shelter.

But news media accounts have quoted unnamed shelter officials as saying that the sometimes actress and former Miss Hungary only served 50 hours at the shelter for homeless women and their children.

Gabor, 70, was quoted in the accounts as saying that she considers her service fully completed because she has spent ''countless hours'' organizing a celebrity auction at her Bel-Air mansion to benefit the shelter.

Deputy District Attorney Elden Fox, who successfully prosecuted Gabor for slapping Beverly Hills motorcycle officer Paul Kramer during a traffic stop last June 14, said Rubin has told him he will be seeking further proof that Gabor has completed her community service.

''It is my understanding that the court, before it accepts this document (the Davis letter), will be asking for some additional documentation,'' Fox said.

Rubin on Monday is expected to send out letters to Gabor's attorney and shelter officials, asking them to submit further proof that Gabor has completed her service, Fox said.

Rubin, who also placed Gabor on probation, was not immediately available for comment.

Fox said that if the further documentation is not provided to the court, he will seek a hearing on the matter.

If Gabor is found to have violated the terms of her probation by not completing her service by Friday's deadline, she could face jail time.

Rubin has already sentenced her to three days in jail, but allowed her to delay serving her time behind bars while she appeals her Sept. 29 conviction.

Fox said he opposes the idea of Gabor holding the auction in lieu of completing her community service. ''She just can't decide she doesn't want to work at the shelter and do this instead,'' he said.

However, if Gabor has completed her service as Davis attests, Fox said he thinks it would be commendable for her to additionally hold the auction.

''I'd like to shake her hand if that's the case,'' said Fox, who the outspoken Gabor had compared at her trial to a Nazi.

Gabor has said she expects to raise $500,000 at the auction.

In her letter to the judge, Davis lauds Gabor for her ''concern and dedication'' to the homeless shelter.

''Her personal, deep concern for the homeless and underprivileged is accented by her commitment to future work for LIEU-CAP,'' Davis wrote. ''Her fund-raising efforts will undoubtedly make a major difference in our ability to better serve the community in the future.''

Gabor said she feels her planned auction should fulfill her community service sentence.

''That Judge Rubin, who I find utterly disgusting, thinks he was punishing me with this, but he is not,'' she said. ''I enjoy doing this. I have done more than he said I should - this auction has taken so many hours I can't count them.''

Asked by a reporter if Gabor's out-of-court remarks about the judge might be the basis for a contempt citation, Fox said no.

''It's a free country,'' he explained. ''There's nothing in the conditions of her probation that says she can't criticize me or the judge.''
